Go to Church Tomorrow

Why should a young man go to church? That is like asking: Why should he breathe? The church is the breathing spot for the best in a man. Physical suffocation is of small consequence compared to spiritual suffocation. A wise young man will not sell his birthright in God's family for a Sunday morning automobile ride. If fresh air makes a young man glad he's alive physically, the Breath of Heaven will certainly make him not only glad, but thankful, that he's alive spiritually. — — — Merton A. Albee, Secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

ITALY NOW READY TO DECLARE WAR ON GERMANY

ALLIES TOO LATE TO SAVE THE SERBIANS

Today's War News Given in Summary

Important progress for the Teutonic forces invading Serbia is reported by Berlin today, The Serbian line of retreat was further narrowed by the taking of Sienica, nearly half way down the Montenegrin frontier line, while further east Field Marshal von Mackensen's forces occupied Raska. The Berlin report announces the capture of 2,800 Serbians and four cannon.

A London News agency correspondent at Berne telegraphs that it is understood in diplomatic circles that a declaration of war on Germany by Italy is imminent.

Allied monitors again have bombarded the Belgian coast, the wireless and cable versions of Berlin statement differing as to whether Ostend or Westende was the point attacked.

Italian guns continue to sweep the Austrian defenses of Gorizia in an intense bombardment.

The comparative quiet prevailing on the western battle front is indicated by the Paris report today, which mentions only artillery exchanges and grenade fighting.

A wireless message said to have been sent by the Italian steamer Verona, in the Mediterranean, reported the steamer was being pursued by a large submarine, a dispatch from Madrid states. The Verona is owned by the company which owned the Ancona, the liner recently sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean.

The Italian official report states that the Austrian air raid on Udine resulted in the death of 12 persons and the wounding of 27 others. In the air attack on Verona four persons were injured. It is declared that the material damage done was unimportant.

London, Nov. 20, (3:30 p. m.) The correspondent at Berne, Switzerland, of the Central News telegraphs: "Diplomats understand that an Italian declaration of war on Germany is only a matter of hours."

Although no official confirmation has been received of the report that the Bulgarians have captured Monastir in southwestern Serbia, little hope is felt in England that the announcement is premature. Accepting it as true, the impression is growing that the entente allies arrived too late to give any service to the Serbians.

The only thing certain in regard to the plight of Serbia is that its military situation is going from bad to worse. In the north the main Serbian armies are giving way slowly before the battering Austro-German forces, which probably would move more rapidly if weather conditions were better. It is established that the Bulgarians are in Prilep and at least have made Monastir untenable. The Anglo-French armies based on Saloniki seem to do no better than hold their positions.

Optimistic feeling in regard to the diplomatic situation in Greece still persists in England. The reasons for this optimism, however, continue to be obscure.

The weather seems to have intervened again in Russia. Little activity is re-

SEEKING TO HEAL BREACH

Much Bitterness Develops in Debate at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Nov. 20. The problem of attempting to heal a breach in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor growing out of the presentation late last night of a resolution calling for the suspension of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners is before the concluding session of the thirty-fifth annual convention today.

The union in question is the second largest international union in America. Had the resolution been adopted it would have meant the loss of 200,000 members of the federation and threatened the disruption of the organization, according to officials. After a debate a substitute resolution not calling for expulsion but offering a means of reaching an understanding was adopted.

The resolution to withdraw the charter of the Carpenters' union was presented by the adjustment committee. It was the result of failure of the carpenters' organization to refrain from alleged encroaching upon jurisdiction awarded the machinists coupled with the carpenters' union's attitude toward the federation.

In the course of the debate Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, said: "We are not safe from disintegration and failure if we lose sight of the ideals of human brotherhood."

Andrew Furuseth, secretary of the Sailors' union of the Pacific coast, declared his belief that the Carpenters' union was deliberately seeking to compel the federation to withdraw the charter. During the hour in which charges were hurled at them and speaker after speaker taunted them with bad faith, the big delegation of carpenters sat silent. The Carpenters' union was accused of repairing, dismantling and setting up machinery in buildings in various cities, and with claiming the right to do such work in defiance of the express commands of the federation convention last year.

The federation's program today calls for the presentation of more than fifty resolutions and for the election of officers. It is believed no candidate will be named in opposition to President Gompers for re-election.

STRONG FOR NATIONAL TICKET FOR MOOSERS

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 20.—Two leaders of the progressive party—one in state and one in nation—told a conference of Missouri members who gathered here today that the progressives should have a national ticket in 1916. One of the speakers, George W. Perkins, chairman of the national executive committee, said the only thing for the party to do was to continue its organization and have a ticket in 1916, while the other—Judge Albert D. Norton, of St. Louis—said he was in favor of selecting Roosevelt and Johnson as standard bearers for another national struggle.

This distinction is claimed annually for a flock of a dozen or more from all parts of the country.

20,000 People Rode Cars on Friday, Says Company

According to figures given out Saturday by officials of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, a total of 20,000 people road the street cars in Fort Wayne on Friday and about the same number on Thursday, notwithstanding the strike that has been in progress since September 27. Labor leaders declare the traction officials' figures are about 10,000 too high.

Because of the greatly increased number of passengers on the cars, members of the car men's union have established systematic picketing on all the principal street corners in the city. The picketing will be done throughout the entire day and at night and those assigned to picket duty will be armed with pencil and small scratch pads and the names of those riding will be jotted down and reported at the headquarters of the Federation of Labor. It is understood that a systematic effort will be made to keep the people from using the street cars.

Four more cars were stoned Friday night as follows: No. 214 and No. 215, on the Pontiac-Lakeside line; No. 180, on East Creighton-Hoffman line, and No. 199 on the West Main-Lewis line. Car No. 216 came into the barns Friday night with a badly bent trolley pole, indicating that the trolley rope had been tampered with.

The Federation of Labor committee appointed to investigate the legal side of the auto bus line proposition will make its report Monday night at a meeting of the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor.

INTERURBAN WRECKS AUTO INJURING TWO

Mrs. Robert Mercer sustained serious injuries to her right hip and Mrs. Verba Scherer a bad gash above her right eye when the Ford automobile in which they were riding was struck by an inbound interurban car on the Huntington line at Ewing and Main streets at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Leslie B. Mercer, who was driving the car, which was occupied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mercer, sister, Mrs. Scherer, and daughter, and a Mrs. Monroe, all of Poe, Ind., became confused because of the great number of jitney buses and automobiles, a city car and an interurban car which met at the street corner at about the same time. He succeeded in dodging the automobiles only to drive directly in the path of the big interurban car. The Mercer car was badly damaged. Mrs. Robert Mercer, the most seriously hurt, was removed to the St. Joseph hospital in the police ambulance and was later taken to her home by her son.

City Cars in Collision.

As the result of an open switch in front of the interurban station on West Main street Lewis street car No. 514 collided with westbound Jefferson street car No. 74 at 10:30 o'clock Friday evening. The glass in the front vestibule of the Lewis street car was shattered as were several panes on the left side. Four passengers were on the Lewis street car and one woman on the Jefferson street car. No one was injured. A. E. McKee, motorman, and W. C. Jester, conductor, were in charge of the Jefferson street car, and C. Crakes, motormaan, and Close, conductor, of the Lewis street car.

Another Accident.

An automobile driven by E. W. Smith, 1021 Degroff street, and a horse and buggy driven by Mrs. Leonard Stolte, of Washington township, collided at Main street and Maiden lane, Friday afternoon, one of the rear wheels of the buggy being badly damaged. No one was hurt.

AGED FARMER DIES ON A TROLLEY CAR

Overexerting himself in running to catch an interurban car at stop No. 15, six miles out on the Bluffton line of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, William Dafforn, 70 years old, a well known farmer residing northwest of Sheldon, passed away Saturday morning about 9:30 o'clock, soon after taking his seat in the car.

Dafforn was about twenty-five rods away when he saw the car approaching some distance down the track and by running as rapidly as he could for a man of his advanced years, succeeded in reaching the crossing in time to board it. He was completely exhausted and soon after taking his seat in the front part of the car told those about him that he was ill. He soon lost consciousness and died before the car had reached the city limits.

Passengers on the car did everything they could to revive him and when the car reached the office of Dr. E. H. Underwood, 2610 Broadway, it was stopped and Dr. Underwood was summoned. He pronounced the man dead.

The body was brought to the interurban station and after an examination by Deputy Coroner R. B. Garmire was ordered removed to the Peltier undertaking parlors. He was apparently in the best of health when he left home early Saturday morning and had intended to spend the day here attending to a number of business matters. Among those on the car who knew the deceased were: John Woods, residing on rural route 14 out of Ossian; George Moses, Albert Harber and Enoch Smith, all of Yoder.

The deceased was a veteran in the civil war, having served with the Fifteenth Indiana Volunteer infantry. He was also a member of Sion S. Bass post and the Union Veteran Legion. He is survived by a wife, four sons and three daughters. For years he was a veterinarian and was well known in the southwestern part of the county.

COMPANY IS FORMED TO DRILL FOR OIL

Two thousand acres of land have been leased in Jackson, Maumee and Monroe townships by the Baldwin Oil, Gas & Mining company and within the next few days a number of oil wells will be started. John H. Tillman and Louis Centlivre own the controlling interest in the new company, which will be incorporated within the next week with a capital stock of at least $20,000. A dozen or more men are interested in the project.

In 1900 and 1902 wells were operated for a short time on a portion of the same territory leased by the Baldwin company. Those interested at that time sold out to the Standard Oil company and the wells were shut down within a few weeks.

It is recalled that twenty years or more ago oil drilling operations were conducted near Baldwin, and that oil was discovered, but the field was never developed. Two men lost their lives as the result of burns in flaming oil which caught fire from an engine after it had spurted far into the air.

BEGIN SHOP INSPECTIONS.

New York, Nov. 20.—Inspectors of the state bureau of industrial hygiene began today an examination of 200 shops, most of them in the lower east side of this city, as a precaution against anthrax. The inquiry results from the death of Miss Sophia Rosen, who is believed to have been infected with anthrax germs from a neck piece made of cat's fur. Cat farms on Long Island and other near-by regions will be examined and any infected animals found will be killed.

EXPIRES FOLLOWING A VERY BRIEF ILLNESS

turned home Friday afternoon, suffering from an attack of acute indigestion which caused his death Saturday morning. He was fifty-two years of age and resided at 333 East Berry street.

Wednesday afternoon he took sick at Franklin, Ohio, and seeing that his condition was getting worse, he asked to be taken home. The members of the family knew nothing of his illness until the ambulance drove up in front of the residence Friday. His condition at this time was regarded as critical. Only a few of his many acquaintances knew of his condition, and the news of his death comes as a great shock.

The deceased was born and raised in Fort Wayne, and after finishing his work at the St. Paul's parochial schools he entered the Rurode Dry Goods Company's store where faithful work soon earned for him the position of traveling salesman. Twenty years ago he left their employment and accepted a position with the George DeWald Company store. He was one of their best salesmen, having as his territory, Indiana and Ohio.

Besides the grief-stricken wife he is survived by a daughter, Miss Helen at home; one brother, William Grage of this city; and two sisters, Mrs. A. I. Hattersley and Mrs. Henry Lageman, both of this city. Mr. Grage was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran church, of the B. U. V and of the traveling Men's Protective association.

ASKS REPUBLICANS TO DISCUSS DEFENSE

Mann Says He's Willing to Consult, But Not to Take Orders.

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson today asked Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, republican leaders of the senate and house, respectively, to confer with him before the opening of congress on legislation for national defense. The time of the conference will be arranged to suit the two leaders.

Just before the opening of congress the president will confer with republican members of the senate and house military and naval committees. When he sees Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann the president will discuss other legislative questions.

While it was being made known at the white house that the republican leaders had been invited to a conference Representative Mann, who was at the state department asking for protection of American planters who have been driven out of Mexico, made a statement on the president's proposal.

"The president may give orders to the democrats in congress," said he, "but he certainly cannot call me to the white house to give orders. I am perfectly willing to consult with him but not to go up there to be told to do what he has decided upon. Everybody is for preparedness of course, but I am not willing to say what attitude the republicans in the house will take toward the administration's defense program until I know just what it is from the documents, not from the newspapers. I am for all defense preparation that is necessary. I believe in treating such an issue as a non-partisan question."

Mr. Mann said he had heard that the president had written a letter to him but that he would not discuss it until after he had seen it.

Record Crowd Packed Into Stadium for Harvard-Yale Clash.

HARVARD QUICKLY STARTS SCORING

Notable Gridiron Contest at Cambridge Played in Stiff Gale.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20.—The football elevens of Harvard and Yale universities played their annual contest here this afternoon before an assembly of spectators which just fell short of 50,000. The huge horse shoe shaped stadium had been made elliptical by the addition of temporary wooden stands at the open end and long before the teams lined up every available foot of space held its share of cheering humanity.

Harvard won the toss and chose the west goal with the wind at their backs. The wind blew the ball off the mound twice before Guernsey could kick off for Yale. Watson caught the ball on Harvard's ten yard line. Mahan kicked on the first down and soon was forced to punt again on his own 5 yard line. A series of Yale rushes and end runs took the ball to Harvard's 20

WIRELESS MAN ADDS DRAMATIC DETAILS

New York, Nov. 20.—Fresh and dramatic details of what happened in the Mediterranean on the morning of Nov. 7 when the Ancona was torpedoed by a submarine flying the Austrian flag were brought to New York today by the Italian steamer Giuseppe Verdi, here on her maiden voyage. The Verdi heard the Ancona's wireless death cry, flashed it on to shore stations which the feeble batteries of the sinking steamer could not reach and then rushed, at full speed, to the Ancona's aid, her boats swung outward, her passengers lined on the deck and her officers momentarily expecting a death blow themselves from submarines known to be lurking nearby. The Verdi steamed as near as she dared to the spot where the Ancona went down but her lookouts saw nothing. Then turning swiftly she fled for Gibraltar and security. Luigi Moront, the youth at the key of the Verdi's wireless told the story here today.

CONDUCTOR TIBBLES GETS A STIFF DOSE

Fine and Penal Farm Term Penalty Appealed to Higher Court.

Frank Tibbles, employed as a conductor on the city car lines, was found guilty in the city court Saturday of assault and battery on Theodore Bruick, a 17-year-old lad, son of J. T. Bruick, 1805 East Creighton avenue, and was fined $25 and costs and fifty days at the state penal farm. Attorney S. L. Morris, who appeared for Tibbles, appealed the case to the circuit court, bond of $300 being furnished at once. The Bruick lad was found not guilty of assaulting Tibbles. The trouble occurred Sunday, Oct. 17, when Tibbles left his car at the east end of the Creighton avenue line to take a switch hook from some boys. A fight followed in which Tibbles fractured young Bruick's skull with the switch hook and in turn had his own fractured by a brick thrown by Bruick. After regaining his car Tibbles got a revolver and fired three shots at the group of boys. The testimony of John Palmer, conductor on the car, showed that Tibbles had gone out of his way to look for trouble.

City Officials Ousted After Strike Activity

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 20.—Louis Loebt, city immigration commissioner, and Louis Rippich, his assistant, both Hungarians, resigned today, as a sequel to their activity in the strike of 2,200 workmen at the war order plant of the Theodor Kundtz company here into which bribe charges had been injected. Mayor Newton D. Baker accepted their resignations, but would neither affirm nor deny that he had requested them to step out.

Baker conducted an investigation of the affair. Albert Henye, strike leader, first preferred charges of undue activity against Loebt, who replied by charging that Henye solicited a $6,000 bribe to "sell out" the strikers and end the tie-up. This was said to have taken place at a secret meeting, a record of which was made by a private detective with a dictagraph. Baker was told later that Loebt had said he was to get $2,000 of the $6,000 which was to go to Henye. Loebt admitted he said it but declared it was in jest.

Rippich was a messenger sent by Loebt to persuade Henye to attend the meeting. Henye has denied soliciting a bribe and has resigned the strike leadership to defend the charges.

SUBMARINE IN HOT PURSUIT OF VERONA

Malriad, Nov. 20.—(Via London, 1:30 p. m.)—A telegram received here today gives a wireless message said to have been sent out by the Italian steamship Verona, stating that she was being pursued by a large submarine with two periscopes.

According to this telegram the submarine is accompanied by a steamer.

The position of the Verona was given as latitude 40, longitude 6, off Cabopalo.

The telegram was received from the town of Soller, on Majorca island, in the Mediterranean, off the Spanish coast, 110 miles south of Barcelona.

The Verona was scheduled to sail from Genoa Nov. 9, touching at Naples Nov. 10 and Palermo Nov. 11, on her way to New York. No word of her sailing, however, has been received.

Latitude 40, longitude 6, is a point in the western Mediterranean about 110 miles west of Sardinia. The Verona is owned by the Italia Socita Di Naviga Zione, a Vapore, which also owned the Ancona, sunk recently by a submarine in the Mediterranean. The Verona has been engaged for several years in passenger service between New York and Italian ports. She is 8,261 tons gross, 482 feet long and was built in Belfast in 1908.

HAD RECEIVED NO WORD.

New York, Nov. 20.—Hartfield Solari & Co., local agents for the steamship Verona, reported to have been chased by a submarine in the Medterranean said today they had not received notice that the Verona had sailed from Italy, although the line's schedule called for the steamer to leave Genoa Nov. 9, Naples the following day and Palermo, the last Italian port, on Nov. 11.

Mr. Hartfield said, however, that the present schedule had been made up some time and as the Verona did not sail from New York until Oct. 21, five days behind schedule, he thought it possible the steamer had not sailed from Genoa until Nov. 14 or 15.

yard line where Bingham fumbled. Mahan kicked again. Bingham muffed the punt and Harte grabbed the ball and dashed 33 yards for a touch down. Mahan failed to kick goal. Score, Harvard, 6; Yale, 0.

Guernsey Out by Injury.

Guernsey kicked off to King and Harvard kicked on the third down. Cowen got the ball on Yale's 33 yard line. Delayed passes and simple line smashing plays enabled Harvard to march to Yale's ten yard line. In tackling King outside the line, Guernsey was hurt by being thrown up against the fence. His right arm was injured and Chatfield Taylor went in for him. Mahan on a fake kick took the ball to Yale's 3 yard line and then went over for a touch down. He kicked goal. Score, Harvard, 13; Yale, 0.

Way kicked off to Boles on Harvard's ten yard line. The Crimson back went to Harvard's 42 yard line before he was thrown. Harvard had the ball on Yale's 47 yard line when the period ended with the score 13 to 0, Harvard.

Beginning the second period King, Mahan and Harte, with some deceptive plays, soon advanced the ball to Yale's 15 yard line. Nearly every Harvard play seemed good for four yards. A fake kick followed by a delayed pass enabled Mahan to go over for Harvard's third touch down. Mahan kicked goal. Score: Harvard 20, Yale 0.

Still Piling 'Em Up.

Mahan kicked off to Bingham on Yale's 45-yard line, who was thrown on the 24-yard line. Scovil, Yale's famous back, ran on the field and was wildly cheered. Wilson punted to Mahan on Harvard's 30-yard line. Harvard began rushing. On the first line upon Harvard's 45-yard line King was given the ball on a delayed pass. He eluded the entire Yale team and scored Harvard's fourth touchdown. Mahan kicked goal. Score: Harvard, 27; Yale, 0.

Mahan kicked off to Taylor on Yale's 15-yard line. The ball was run back to the 33-yard line. Scovil and Wilson were playing like demons but could make little impression on the sturdy Harvard defense. The period ended after Wilson punted to Mahan on Harvard's 47-yard line. The crimson captain ran the ball back seven yards. Score end first half: Harvard, 27; Yale, 0.

SEEMS TO BE UP TO M'COMBS TO GET OUT

Democratic Chairman Will Probably Be Superseded Very Soon.

By Gilson Gardner.

Washington, Nov. 20.—William F. McCombs cannot remain as chairman of the democratic national committee. He is out of sympathy with the president and the entire administration. It is an open secret that his resignation will be forced before the next national convention. The name of Fred Lynch is generally mentioned as his successor, but whether this is authoritative or not is doubtful. The one thing certain is that McCombs must go. The chairman of the national committee has embarrassed the administration in many ways, as for example, recently when he announced in an interview his opposition to the seaman's law and his recommendation that congress repeal it. In the face of a flat declaration in the democratic platform in favor of the seaman's law and the action of President Wilson in signing the bill after hearing delegations representing the ship interests in opposition to it, this is not easily explained. It has long been evident that certain interests have felt that they could use McCombs and the latter's willingness to be used has been a great embarrassment to the administration. The end is now in sight.

That Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, is bidding for the prohibition nomination is indicated by the announcement that Borah has come out for prohibition by federal amendment. This indicates how big a factor prohibition is coming to be in national as well as local politics. Borah hoped to be the compromise nominee of the standpat republicans. The latter have not encouraged this hope and now it is evident that Borah is maneuvering to secure the prohibition nomination with an idea that he could poll many progressive and republican votes in addition to the prohibition following. This would make him a formidible factor in the presidential race.

William J. Bryan may come out for federal amendment for securing woman suffrage. This is one of the political events confidently expected. Bryan began by opposing prohibition by national amendment, but lately has declared for the Hobson plan. Since President Wilson has adopted the state-by-state theory of securing woman suffrage, Bryan may be expected to adopt the national plan. There are four million woman voters in the enfranchised states and in a presidential election these are a factor worthy of consideration.

That measure is to be ready for reintroduction the instant congress assembles and McAdoo is prepared to repeat his energetic subway construction performance in securing its passage.

He alleges that on Sept. 9, last, that an automobile occupied by the defendants ran into his wagon on the Leo road, demolishing it and inflicting bodily injuries upon him. Barrett, Morris & Hoffman are the plaintiff's attorneys.

In the circuit court Saturday Henry Fleckenstein was fined $25 and costs and his liquor license was revoked for having persons in his saloon on Sunday. The case was up on appeal from the city court. The license had already been revoked by the county commissioners.

ALLEN COUNTY.

Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette.

THE FUTURE IS BRIGHT—DON'T DIM IT.

Northern Indiana and the Twelfth district particularly have a deep interest in legislation which will be up for consideration at the next session of the national congress. The future of the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago barge canal may be decided at this session. The federal authorities will be asked to lend government aid in accomplishing flood prevention. The improvement of the mail service, not only as applies to bettering the transportation facilities, but in extending the system of village free delivery to the smaller towns within the district, is due for action from the postal authorities. Fort Wayne is vitally interested in securing a new federal building commensurate with the rapidly growing needs of the city.

And while the people as a whole are interested in these things, the democratic party is desirous of adding their accomplishment to its already large list of victories won in the interest of the people.

At the same time, the Journal-Gazette feels a personal interest in the next session of congress because the questions which so closely affect the welfare of northern Indiana, Allen county and Fort Wayne are issues for which the Journal-Gazette has contended with all the force at its command, in and out of season it may be. If the things for which the Journal-Gazette has striven can be accomplished at the next session or in succeeding sessions, it feels sure of the commendation of the people, for whom it seeks to speak.

We feel sure the people will remember the political party, the individual or the newspaper helping to fight their battles, and kindly so.

So with the accomplishments of these things in view, wholly with the welfare of the people in mind, the Journal-Gazette wishes this morning to point out the splendid advantages possessed by Congressman Cyrus Cline in working for these ends.

His services as a representative of the Twelfth district have thus far been without fault. Earnest and energetic, he has stood steadfastly on the side of the people. He has shown himself possessed of those qualities as a statesman which have enabled him to gain a commanding position at the head of important committees. He is in the fullest confidence of the administration, honored and respected by his colleagues and time has already demonstrated his ability to get the things he goes after. He was chiefly instrumental in securing the appropriation for the survey of the barge canal and is vitally interested in the completion of the work. The Journal-Gazette will not be telling tales out of school when it says that there is every indication that Mr. Cline will land for Fort Wayne a new federal building. He has already secured the establishment of village free delivery of mail in several of the smaller towns and is in a position to help others to the same boon.

Justice and fairness would indicate that he be given the opportunity to reap the honor and glory of bringing to his constituents the benefits his untiring energy and effort have placed just within his grasp. The Journal-Gazette believes in the ability of Mr. Cline, it knows his honesty and loyalty, it feels certain that a change in our representation at this time would greatly delay success, if, indeed, it did not completely nullify the years of hard effort that have gone before, and it confesses to a keen interest in seeing Mr. Cline returned to congress with a vote of confidence which will render even stronger his power of accomplishment.

Monroeville Breeze.

WHY THE BREEZE WISHES CYRUS CLINE RENOMINATED.

In supporting Congressman Cyrus Cline for renomination for congress the Breeze has no word of criticism to offer in reference to the gentleman who will oppose him in the contest. The Breeze is not against Mr. Hilgemann, but it is for Mr. Cline. The Twelfth district congressman has proven his worth as a public servant. He has labored industriously in the advocacy of every measure having for its object the advancement of the interests of his people and it is with a conscientious conviction that his splendid efforts should be rewarded that the Breeze directs attention to the desirability of his renomination and re-election. The long experience of Mr. Cline in the halls of congress peculiarly fit him for the performance of the duties that must be shouldered by the people's representative. What the country needs now and will need during the coming two years, and especially so during the time that the world is embroiled in perplexing international difficulties, is men of ripe legislative experience and judgment in the American congress. The Breeze desires to make itself plain that it has no quarrel with Mr. Hilgemann. It believes him to be a man of splendid character. But it feels the imperative need of Mr. Cline's return to congress for the completion of the good work he has begun and so ably carried forward.

New Haven Tribune (Ind.)

We publish this week the announcement of Congressman Cline's candidacy for renomination. Hon. Cyrus Cline has made a success commensurate with his opportunities and to say that he has not represented the Twelfth congressional district well is to give way to political prejudice. According to republican policies, the whole system is wrong and Mr. Cline's shortcomings, whatever they may be, are the result of the system which he represents, and not a personal inability to perform well his part. The Tribune is independent in politics, as nearly so as it is possible for a republican editor to make it. The republican color of that independence is about the same hue as the democratic color of an independent newspaper when published by a democrat. Such men are not expected to decry the official acts of a public man who represents a policy opposite to that of the editor unless those acts are notoriously weak. Rather, such men are expected to tell the truth even though it be laudatory of men who represent principles diametrically opposed to their personal opinions. In short, if a man perform his duty according to a plan the independent newspaper must measure him up in accordance with his performance of duty irrespective of the political principle in question. It remains for the party paper to attack the man. With this in view, the Tribune can speak of Mr. Cline in naught but praise. Whatever the system, it must be said of him that he has done well and should the people of this country believe that the country's best interests lie in the continuance of democracy as a party government, none can better represent this district than the Hon. Cyrus Cline.

Fort Wayne Sentinel.

MR. CLINE'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

Congressman Cyrus Cline has made formal announcement of his candidacy for renomination by the democrats of the Twelfth district at the primary to be held in March next, and while it has been generally conceded that Mr. Cline would again be a candidate, the formal declaration of his entrance into the race will nevertheless be received with much interest by the voters of the district.

The Angola man's record in congress is one to which he may point with justifiable pride. He has been assiduous in his devotion to the interests of his constituents in every county in the district, and has given to the position not only close attention, but a very high order of ability. Moreover, the rank he has attained by virtue of his term of service in the house has placed him in a position to be increasingly useful to his district.

Congressman Cline has just forwarded to the chief of the board of army engineers a very strong plea for federal aid in accomplishing flood prevention in Allen county. From the inception of the movement the congressman has taken an active interest in it and has overlooked no opportunity to be of service to the people of Fort Wayne and of Allen county in this connection. His contention that since the federal government has assumed jurisdiction over the Maumee river it may fairly be expected to share the flood prevention burden is well taken, and it should prove convincing in Washington. In any event, the people may rest assured that they can depend upon Congressman Cline to render all the assistance in his power in the furtherance of flood prevention plans.

Grabill Review.

The announcement of Congressman Cyrus Cline that he will be a candidate for renomination for congress has elicited much favorable comment in this vicinity. Mr. Cline has proven a worthy representative in congress and it is the desire of many people in this locality that he should be renominated and re-elected so that he can continue in the good work that he has been doing for his constituency. Mr. Cline is a man of extraordinary ability and as a public servant he has made a good record.

Woodburn News.

Twelfth district Indiana democrats will be pleased to learn that Hon. Cyrus Cline has announced that he will again be a candidate for congressman, and his name will go before the voters at the March primaries. The News has felt the need that Mr. Cline should accept a renomination, and following the urging of the press and his many friends, he announced Tuesday to a delegation that he would yield to their desires. Congressman Cline has begun a great work in behalf of the Twelfth district and the voters in return can further the interests of this district by giving him a large majority of votes at the primary. Mr. Cline has given his best interests to his district, and in congress has gained high recognition, having been placed on the most important committees. The Twelfth district needs the services of Congressman Cline. Give to him a renomination.

DEKALB COUNTY.

Auburn Bee (Ind.)

FOR WHAT HE HAS DONE.

It is an easy matter to explain why three well known men are seeking the nomination for congress in the Twelfth district on the republican ticket; and it is also well known why a few democrats have brought out a Fort Wayne man in opposition to Cyrus Cline, but has anybody given a good reason yet why Mr. Cline should not be returned to congress for another term?

It can be expected that his political opponents in the republican party should find fault with the things "that he hasn't done," and that the disappointed ones in the democrate party should be disgruntled at "what he might have done," but after all, isn't it only fair that Mr. Cline should be given due credit for "what he has done," and if there is any advantage to be gained from experience, then surely, the people of the Twelfth district as a whole would be benefited by having Mr. Cline continue as their representative in congress.

A congressman is worth more to the community after he has had extensive experience in dealing with the big questions that come up at every session, and the record Mr. Cline has made shows that he has always been on the alert and a diligent and painstaking official.

On account of his earnestness to impartially represent his constituents he has gained those qualities as a statesman which have enabled him to attain a commanding position at the head of important committees, and in a measure he has been very successful in bringing about legislation and securing such public improvements as the people of the several communities of the district have been asking for.

Over at Garret the citizens are enjoying village mail oclivery as a direct result of Mr. Cline's efforts, and both Kendallville and Fort Wayne have been promised new federal buildings in due time, although so to deprive Mr. Cline of the great prestige already formed at the national capital would mean a loss to the Twelfth district that would be almost incalculable.

Since the voters will choose at the primary who their next representative in congress will be, it can hardly be expected that a man of Mr. Cline's ability and energy should be overthrown, and the district relegated to the experiment class.

His principles will appeal to men of all political affiliations, and when the primary votes are counted next March no doubt he will be chosen as the people's candidate, and when the election of next November rolls around his majority will be commensurate with the service he has performed, and show beyond a question of doubt that the people are willing to trust him as the Twelfth district representative in the halls of congress at Washington.

St. Joe News (Ind.)

This is the season of the year when the wise men in politics devote considerable time, energy and brain matter in reading the signs of the times. Congressman Cline is a bourbon of the old school. He will supply the personality in the coming campaign, and he will supply enough to satisfy any republican, standpat or otherwise Cyrus Cline will not only be the candidate for renomination, but his record in congress will be told and retold. That record is a record of achievement, a record of constructive legislation, a record the like of which has never been equaled before in the history of this congressional district. The editor is perfectly willing to rest the case upon the record now made by Congressman Cline. We have an abiding faith in the honest judgment of the people, and there is no doubt that Congressman Cline will win a glorious triumph. He was in town recently calling upon the voters.

DeKalb County Herald.

A writer for the Fort Wayne News says the Hilgemann candidacy "died a bornin'," and suggests that some one else get into the race. The opposing party would like to see some one put on the democratic ticket for congress that they could slaughter, but they cannot cut the mustard. Cyrus will go back with a greater majority than ever.

It will be noticed in another column that the Hon. Cyrus Cline has announced that he will be a candidate for the nomination of congressman on the democratic ticket. There are many arguments why Mr. Cline should be sent back to Washington, but it is not our intentions to enter into the "scrap" before the nominations are made. There isn't a man in the country but what would occasionally blunder if sent to congress and we believe Mr. Cline's record is as clear from mistakes as any former congressman ever sent to Washington. It will certainly stand investigation.

Garrett Clipper.

Mr. Cline has many followers because of the good record he made in Washington while serving several years. They believe his usefulness is now at its height because of his experience and his standing in the national house.

NOBLE COUNTY.

Avilla News (Ind.)

Congressman Cyrus Cline, of Angola, is going about over the Twelfth district calling on friends and making a preliminary campaign for renominatio at the primaries in March. He will soon have to return to his official duties at Washington and will not be able to make as thorough a canvass as he would like, but he feels that his past service to the party and to the people of the district will win for him the nomination.

Albion Democrat.

In another column appears the announcement of Congressman Cyrus Cline, of Angola, for the nomination on the democratic ticket. Mr. Cline has served the people faithfully and well, and as one democrat aptly put it, is stronger today before the democracy of the Twelfth congressional district than at any previous time. He has not pleased everybody, and on account of his postoffice recommendations has made a few sore spots, but that was inevitable and unavoidable. He has served his constituency conscientiously, ably and well, and occupies a commanding place in the lower hall of congress and he will undoubtedly receive large support in the democratic primaries.

Ligionier Banner.

The announcement in this issue of the Banner that Hon. Cyrus Cline will again be a candidate for congress from the Twelfth district will come as pleasing news to the people irrespective of party. There has been considerable talk indulged that rival candidates might be induced to enter the lists and the uncertainty of Congressman Cline's intentions gave room for anxiety, but now that he is formally announced as a candidate to succeed himself it gives a feeling of relief. Congressman Cline has made a splendid record in congress and it would be almost a calamity to lose his services at this time. Congressman Cline, while consistent in his progressive democracy, is not a bitter partisan and in representing his constituents in congress he recognizes no party allegiance. The announcement is most gratifying to the Banner for the publisher feels that the people wish to be represented in congress by a democrat. Cyrus Cline is their choice.

HON. CYRUS CLINE.

Congressman Cyrus Cline, in making a tour of the district before his return to Washington, December 1st, to resume his official duties, reached Ligonier Tuesday and was entertained at a luncheon at Bailey's. There were fifteen or twenty party leaders to greet Mr. Cline and he was given assurance of a united support in Ligonier. The Cline party, consisting of County Chairman Cleland, Hon. A. J. Stahl and Capt. J. W. Smith, of Kendallville, met with a hearty reception in all portions of the county and the gentlemen were in excellent spirits. As remarked by Col. Simon Straus: "Any democrat opposed to the renomination of Congressman Cline is actuated by personal feeling and has not the interest of the democratic party at heart."

It is realized that the sentiment is openly expressed that it would be a great loss to the Twelfth congressional district to retire Mr. Cline at a time when he is at the zenith of his official usefulness. The Wilson administration has no supporter more loyal and as ranking member of the congressional committee on foreign relations the gentleman occupies a most prominent position at this time when the world is rent with war. Mr. Cline will undoubtedly be the next chairman of this important committee which brings credit and distinction to the district.

Congressman Cline is unalterably opposed to a military form of government. While he will support reasonable legislation for coast defense and an increased navy he is not in favor of a large standing army. Mr. Cline favors placing the state guard under federal control and offering inducements for voluntary enlistment. In these matters Congressman Cline is in full sympathy with the sentiment of his district and state irrespective of party. A military government is inconsistent with a democratic form and the two can never be harmonized.

Lagrange Democrat.

The official announcement that Congressman Cline will be a candidate for renomination, next spring, appears on the first page of today's issue. While it has generally been understood that Mr. Cline would again be a candidate, yet no formal announcement of the fact had been made. By reason of his long term of service and experience in legislative affairs Congressman Cline has an influence and prestige in Washington which no new man could hope to attain for several terms at least. He has been a faithful worker for all the best interests of his district, and men of his ability and experience are more needed in congress now than ever before. We believe the democrats of this county are well satisfied with Cline's service and will vote almost unanimously for his renomination.

Topeka Journal.

Representative Cyrus Cline at the behest of a large majority of the democrats of the Twelfth congressional district has consented to be a candidate for renomination for congress. Mr. Cline has made an enviable record as a public servant. He has risen to the pinnacle of statesmanship in the national congress and is regarded in Washington as one of the comparatively few men who do big things and do them well. It is believed that the best interests of the district demand Mr. Cline's return to congress so that he can complete the splendid work he has begun and carried forward in the interests of his people. The people of this locality are enthusiastically supporting Mr. Cline in his campaign.

STEUBEN COUNTY.

Angola Herald.

Congressman Cyrus Cline has announced his intention of again being a candidate for congress. Mr. Cline had been urged for some time, by prominent democrats from all over the district, to make the race again, but until this week had made no announcement in the matter. His considerable experience in the halls of congress appeals strongly to party men, who feel that Mr. Cline is the most available man in the district in this trying time in the affairs of the nation. He is thoroughly in accord with the policy of President Wilson, and has made a study of many weighty problems of great importance which are sure to be up for consideration. For these reasons has Mr. Cline been importuned to announce his candidacy. His decision will of course be pleasing to his friends in this, his own county, who have had occasion to watch his career in Washington, and are loud in his praise. If Mr. Cline is renominated he will surely get a larger vote in this county than ever before.

WHITLEY COUNTY.

Churubusco Truth.

The Truth takes great pleasure this week in announcing the fact that the Hon. Cyrus Cline will again be a candidate for congress. He will be nominated and elected for the reason that he deserves it on the ground of past work for the people of the Twelfth district. We are for Mr. Cline.

He has already secured the establishment of village free mail delivery in several of the smaller towns and is in a position to help others to the same boon.

Justice and fairness would indicate that he be given the opportunity to reap the honor and glory of bringing to his constituents the benefits his untiring energy and effort have placed just within his grasp. The Journal-Gazette believes in the ability of Mr. Cline, it knows his honesty and loyalty, it feels certain that a change in our representation at this time would greatly delay, if indeed it did not completely nullify, the years of hard effort that have gone before, and it confesses to a keen interest in seeing Mr. Cline returned to congress with a vote of confidence which will render even stronger his power of accomplishment.—Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette.

The Truth begs to congratulate our esteemed Fort Wayne neighbor upon the above editorial. The Truth has always, at all times and under all circumstances stood for Congressman Cyrus Cline against the field because "by their works ye shall know them."

He has made good and his many years of experience in the halls of congress must certainly rebound to the welfare of the district. When the Truth editor was in Washington he found the Hon. Cyrus Cline in the front ranks of those members of the house who do things; he frequently presided over the house by appointment of Speaker Champ Clark and the manner in which he acquitted himself made us feel that the old Twelfth district was never represented in a better manner than we have been with Mr. Cline.

The Truth is for Cyrus Cline to succeed himself. And we wish to say that we are proud of the fact that we have always been a loyal Cline man ever since his first election to congress. Here's to you, Mr. Cline, fear not! The men who have an ax to grind or who did not get an office are of no importance if they conclude to fight. By the way, the Truth man did not get an office either, nevertheless it's not the fault of the congressman—and we are glad that we are possessed of sufficient sense to comprehend it."

South Whitley Tribune (Ind.)

If the old adage, "The early bird catches the worm," holds good, Congressman Cyrus Cline will be renominated for congressman of the Twelfth district. All doubts as to whether or not he would again be a candidate were dispelled Tuesday when the announcement of his candidacy appeared in the newspapers throughout the district.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

1 Thessalonians 1:1-10.

1 Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ; Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers;

3 Remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father;

4 Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God.

5 For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake.

6 And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost;

7 So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.

8 For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to Godward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak anything.

9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God;

10 And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.

Mr. Cline's High Standing.

Elsewhere in The Sentinel today there is reproduced a symposium of Twelfth district newspaper comment upon the candidacy of Hon. Cyrus Cline for re-election to congress from this district that is rather remarkable. Not only is its tenor distinctly commendatory of Mr. Cline's very valuable public service, but it includes almost without an exception an expression from every democratic and independent newspaper in the six counties comprising the Twelfth congressional district. To be the recipient of a tribute of this character is no small distinction, and we have no doubt Mr. Cline deeply and sincerely appreciates the kindly references and the good wishes of the folks back home whose representative at the national capital he is and has been through several busy and very important terms of congress.

It would be utterly impossible to attain the high standing and the sphere of usefulness developed by Mr. Cline, maintained and broadened and enlarged by him through the succeeding years, on any other basis than that of sheer merit and devotion to his position and to the interests of the people who have honored him. It will be cheerfully agreed without regard to political preference, we think, that Mr. Cline has been not only a tireless worker but a capable one; that he has never failed in any particular in his duty to the home district and to the country at large. He has been "on the job" continuously. He has shirked no task, great or small, in his effort to serve the people of the Twelfth district, and has achieved a conspicuously fine and influential standing in official Washington as well as at home. These are the reasons for the high regard in which he is held. They explain, too, one of the most notable tributes ever given the candidacy of any man by newspapers of the Twelfth district.

The conviction of Charles B. Munday, former Chicago financier, whose peculiar financial methods resulted in the collapse of some ten banks and trust companies in the "Lorier-Munday string" will have a most healthful effect. Five years in prison is an outlook not especially inviting even to those of the get-rich-quick ilk who are always willing to take a chance on "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." Happily Mr. Munday's system of banking is the exception nowadays, and in no quarter will convictions of this character be hailed with more satisfaction than in the realm of legitimate and substantial banking.

Nebraska republicans are apparently determined to do something erratic. Undeterred by the demand of Associate Justice Hughes that his name be taken from the ballot as a candidate for the presidential nomination, some industrious individual there has followed it up by putting Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, in the list to be voted for at the primary. Anybody who aspires to a "mention" for the presidency will be overlooking the one best chance if he fails to grasp the golden opportunity now held out by Nebraska to the ambitious ones.

Warden Fogarty has found it necessary to issue another denial of the rumor that he has resigned his place at the state prison to embark i nthe manufacturing business at Lafayette. The persistence of the report gives rise to the suspicion that some of the gentlemen who would like Warden Fogarty's present job are doing some unseemly crowding in their desire to be on a front seat if anything in the way of official fruit is to be passed out.

In a spasm of economy, Terre Haute has turned off the electric lights at its city hall, the council refusing to make an appropriation to cover the cost of the lighting for the remainder of the year. In view of the fact that the record seems to indicate that a good deal of the business of city government at Terre Haute in the past has been done in the dark, one is unable to understand the occasion for all this hullabaloo over the present instance.

Indianapolis police authorities have notified the saloons in that city that they must obey the Sunday closing law. It should be explained, in the interest of exactitude, that orders of similar import have been issued on divers and sundry previous occasions, and the saloon men are naturally harassed with doubt whether the order means again or yet.

Still, it will hardly seem like old times with another than 'Gene Debs running for president on the socialist ticket next year. The Indiana man has positively refused a fifth consecutive nomination as the socialist standard-bearer.

U. S. Lighthouse at Cape Sarichef.

The man with the lonesomest job in the United States is C. E. Peterson. Peterson is the keeper at the government lighthouse on the rocky point known as Cape Sarichef, on Unimak island, Alaska. Sarichef light is the northernmost lighthouse under the jurisdiction of the United States, except some minor river lights on the Yukon river. With its sister lighthouse 40 miles away on the south side of Unimak island, at Scotch Gap, it guards the ship lane through the Aleutian islands, known as Unimak Pass. Through this pass all ships that go to the northern coast of the territory make their way Keeper Peterson has two assistants, and the three men live at the lighthouse alone, except for the monthly visit of the supply vessel "Dora," which brings them their provisions and supplies.

THAT CHICAGO BABY.

(Kansas City Star),

It is believed that most persons will agree that the Chicago physician did right in making no effort to save the life of the malformed baby whose story has been before the public for the last day or so.

Occasionally a child is born so malformed that it would be a crime against humanity to do anything to prolong its life. Whatever protests may be made on theoretical grounds against a failure to do everything possible to save it, the wise doctor is going to make his own decision in the matter. Under circumstances similar to those in the Chicago case his decision is going to be similar to that of the Chicago physician.

The incident is merely one phase of the general problem of the unfit who, while our ancestors were still savages, were weeded out by the natural conditions of life, but who now are saved to reproduce their kind and increase the burden on society. The problem is one that must be faced. If feeble minded children are to survive, as they must under modern conditions, society will have to see to it that they are segregated or by other means are kept from bringing into the world other unfortunate beings, who cannot take care of themselves.

The problem of the comparatively few malformed children will probably in general solve itself, as it has in Chicago. There is the much more important problem of the mentally unfit, which presses for social action.

GOOD ROADS PROGRESS.

(Indianapolis News).

The good roads movement in Indiana is attaining such momentum that it is going to be pretty hard for those who have been interested heretofore in defeating proper direction of road making in this state to head it off. The recent Madison county good highway parade was eleven miles in length, including 1,300 automobiles and 5,000 people. There were many visitors from adjoining counties. A prevailing sentiment was, in effect, that muddy road legislation must soon be a thing of the past in Indiana. Such meetings are being held all over the state. There is one in progress in Dubois county today, and Jasper no doubt will have such an experience as Marion had a week ago. Luke Duffy, secretary of the state highway commission, is there preaching the doctrine of building roads well and showing the folly of a responsibility divided among 4,500 road officials in Indiana. The campaign in all directions is calculated to instruct candidates for the legislature so that the wasteful method of repairing roads that have been built or of building others haphazard, may be put to an end at the next session of the general assembly. There is plenty of money spent for roads. The trouble is in the waste. Much of it will continue to be wasted until the proper system of scientific and economic supervision is established.

This American Solved Munition Problem in France

WILLIAM F CARMODY

Chicago, Nov. 20.—When France discovered last spring that its men on the firing line were sending shrapnel into the enemy's ranks three times as fast as French machinists were making them, she asked for the best mechanic America could send to its aid. The appeal called from his job W. F. Carmody, foreman in a Chicago adding machine factory. Though he didn't know it himself, Carmody's genius was known to almost every mechanical engineer in the country. Though he worked through interpreters and had many other handicaps to meet, Carmody succeeded in revolutionizing methods in the French machine shops, which he brought to the maximum of efficiency.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhœa, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup. —Advertisement.

Distinguished Women Everywhere Are Wearing Redfern Models

A wearer of a Redfern "feels" the excellent shaping of her corset—its support is comfortable—she knows that her figure is right. She knows that every line of her gown is being "set off."

Redfern Models are designed in accord with the fashions of the day, and each model is kept "up to the minute." If you have worn a Redfern and are devoted to a particular model, you are safe in renewing that model as the slighest suggestion of a style change the designers of the Redfern instantly make in each design.

Women who have been accustomed to having their corsets "cut to order" are now wearing Redfern and enjoying figure style and correct comfort that they never knew before.

M'KINLEY MEMORIAL CORNERSTONE LAID

Niles, O., Nov. 20.—The corner stone of the National McKinley Birthplace Memorial was laid here at noon today, with ceremonies reminiscent the former president's life. "Lead Kindly Light," the hymn which clung to the murdered president in his dying moments, and the Strauss waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," a favorite of Mrs. McKinley, was played by the United States Marine Band, and James H. Hoyt, an intimate friend of the former president, recited personal reminiscences. At the conclusion of the program, Major Charles B. Hanford, head of the marine band, declaimed "The Star Spangled Banner," a bit of elocution which McKinley was wont to request in his white house days.

President Wilson was forced to decline an invitation to lay the corner stone, but he sent a representative of the national administration and promised to be present at the dedication of the building later. Other guests of the day included Senators Atlee Pomerene and Warren G. Harding, of Ohio; Representative William A. Ashbrook, of Johnstown, Ohio; J. G. Schmidlap, of Cincinnati, one of the trustees of the memorial fund; Gov. Frank Willis, of Ohio; Myron T. Herrick, of Cleveland, former ambassador to France, and L. C. Dyer, of St. Louis, a member of congress and commander of the United Spanish War Veterans; Gov. Willis, Mr. Herrick and Congressman Dyer being the principal speakers.

The day's program began with a parade in which state troops, veteran organizations, Masons and other organizations in which McKinley was interested, took part. Camps of Spanish War Veterans and posts of the grand army of the republic from Cleveland, Alliance, Canton and Akron, O.; and Pittsburg, Sharon and New Castle, Pa., were in the line of marchers. Half a dozen bands made music for the parade.

After the Masonic part of the program, a tablet was affixed to the stone, bearing this inscription:

"Erected 1915
"To Perpetuate the Name and Achievements of William McKinley, Twenty-fifth President of the United States of America.
"Born January 29, 1843.
"Died September 14, 1901."

The building itself, when complete, will be a two-story structure of severe colonial design, flanked by one-story wings of almost equal length with the main structure. The main portico is to be supported by six Ionic columns and the facade of each wing will carry as many similar supports in sectional form. The cornice will be plain, and rectangular doors and windows will emphasize the straight lines of the design.

—to his wifey said one day, "Please take this hundred dollars; buy some winter duds, I pray!" Another day he mused aloud, "I surely like your cake. I think it's so much better than my mother used to make!" Once this good man said to his son, "My boy, you're somewhat wild. Compared with your old daddy, though, I'd say you're very mild. When I was your age, every night I landed in a cell. You'll come out fine ten years from now. You're doing pretty well." This same great soul while riding home from work most every night, would beg a chance to give his seat to any girl in sight. He'd never flirt with anyone except his wedded wife; he never swore, he never took a bracer in his life. His daughter never banged the keys when others longed for rest; his dog was silent as the stars; his temper was the best. I do not know this gentle soul, I never clasped his hand, I never met his butler, nor encamped upon his land. A friend of mine was telling me. He met the man, it seems, one evening at twilight, in the "Land of Pleasant Dreams."—Charles B. Driscoll.

These three are believed to belong to the same gang as the two dangerous men arrested on Broadway Tuesday night by Officer Kennelly.

Last evening at 5 o'clock, at the home of the bride, 405 South Calhoun street, took place the marriage of Miss Jennie M. Abel and Mr. David H. Caldwell, Rev. The wedding breakfast will be served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Baker, of Old Fort place. The bride and groom will leave shortly afterwards on a wedding trip.

Mrs. H. F. Koenemann, of Madison street, gave a very pretty party on Friday evening at which she announced the approaching marriage of Miss Mildred Brendle to Carl Kollsmith, which is to take place on Thanksgiving day at the home of the bride in Delphos, O. On Monday evening Miss Brendle, who has been employed at the Y. W. C. A. for eight years, will be given a party by her friends of the association. Mr. Kollsmith is employed in the office department of the Fort Wayne Electric company. Mrs. Fern Click, of Decatur, Ill., is visiting Mrs. Koenemann and came for the party on Friday.

The cabaret next Friday evening at Minuet hall for the benefit of the Visiting Nurse and her numerous family and the opera of Joseph early in December for the benefit of the day nursery are both under management of circles of King's Daughters. Both charities are appealing to people generally because of the help they give to children, babies and invalids. The Sophie B. Wright circle has the cabaret in charge. The program is still a secret although it is openly said there are to be some pictures, for which Wolf & Dessauer donate the costumes, also that Mr. Hughes of the Orpheum theater is to sing. But everyone is assured of a good entertainment. There will be two favor dances, one being named the Snowball.

Miss Thelma Fleming entertained a number of girl friends on Thursday evening at her home on the Goshen road. The affair was quite unique in its character, being a "stag" party wherein all the guests were in male attire, ranging from the fetching costume of the typical Broadway "swell" to the common laborer wearing overalls. Boxing matches and games occupied the evening accompanied by a program of music, and winding up with a bounteous supper. So as to perpetuate the characters assumed by the young ladies a flashlight was taken of the group and this picture will serve as a pleasant reminder of the occasion in future years. During the evening the Misses Merle Emrich and Thelma Fleming, who are vocal students, favored those present with some delightful songs. Those present besides the hostess were Misses Hazel Sweet, Estella Wilkins, Margaret Bugert, Tue Koehler, Caroline Broman, Merle Emrich, Margaret Strube, Elsie Hurdehorst, Elsie Kramer, Katherine Flaharty, Helen Wilkins, Sylvia Mulligan, Ethel Brandon and Mabel Jefferies.

An Echo of Needlework Guild.

The newly elected officers of the Needlework Guild and those whose terms expired at the annual meeting this week are much pleased over the quality of contributions made as well as over the number. It was fortunate, too, that the distribution could be made in time for the colder and rainy weather and children waiting for clothing to get to school and charities like the Willing Workers and the Visiting Nurse had especially urgent cases for clothing and bedding that the Guild was able to give them. The present officers believe that the impetus and interest in the work this fall will not be forgotten in another year and that the next roundup will bring the number of garments into the four thousands. Mrs. Robert Harding is again the president; Miss Harriet Fowler, first vice-president; Mrs. F. E. Hoffman, second vice-president; Mrs. B. H. Hudson, third vice-president; Mrs. Aaron Rothschild, fourth vice-president; Miss May Jewell Smith, secretary; Miss Florence Klinkenberg, assisting secretary; Mrs. Hal Rehrer, treasurer.

OPERA "JOSEPH" COMING SOON.

Charity Entertainment Promises Big Things Musically.

Rehearsals for the grand opera, "Joseph," begins Monday. The multitude of participants will necessitate meetings at all hours of the day and evening. Special groups of leading characters and soloists will practice in the early afternoons as will also the dancers. Children from all the Sunday schools of Fort Wayne will take part in the different sections of the auxiliary choruses for the great "Temple" scene and will assemble after school each afternoon and on Saturday morning. The chorus of adult singers will meet at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and those who expect to take part should go one of these evenings to obtain copies of the music, even though unable to remain for the entire rehearsal. Singing will begin very promptly each evening to avoid late rehearsals. This is one of the most exceptional opportunities for the development of musical and dramatic ideas that has ever been offered the musicians of the city and from the preliminary interest shown it is likely that the rehearsal hall will be taxed to its utmost capacity Tuesday night. All the rehearsals of the adult chorus will be held in the Wayne Street Methodist church for the present, and the children's choruses will meet in Dehm's hall, Calhoun and Jefferson streets. The invitation committee for the opera is composed of the following well known Fort Wayne people:

Miss Margaret S. Vesey, chairman; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Worden, Mr. and Mrs. George Pixley, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Yarnelle, Mrs. Francis Haberly-Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. L. P. Drayer, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Freiburger, Mr. and Mrs. B Paul Mossman, Judge and Mrs. John W. Eggeman, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Freese, Judge W. J. Vesey, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Curdes, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Luecke, Mrs. H. B. Master, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frank, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Breen, Mr. and Mrs. Byron H. Somers, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Dunkelberg, Dr. and Mrs. K. K. Wheelock, Mr. and Mrs. Will Rohan, Mrs. Fred J. Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Perfect, Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Guldin, Rev. and Mrs. Claude C. Travis, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Thieme, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Kilbourne, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Z. Polhamus.

Written and Illustrated by IDAH M'GLONE GIBSON.

Every woman's page in the newspapers always contains the more or less frantic question:

"How shall I find beauty, and how shall I retain my beauty?"

These women, however, are in reality asking, "How shall I retain my youth?" or perhaps it would be better to say, "How shall I retain a semblance of youth?"

Beauty has been defined as many things, but after long study of the subject I have come to the conclusion that beauty only means promise; beauty in children—a promise of wonderful maturity; beauty in woman—promise of procreativeness; beauty in men—promise of strength; beauty in nature—promise of harvest, eternal vigor.

When the promise is fulfilled, or rather, when the time is past in which this promise should be fulfilled, beauty ends. Death in life comes to man, woman and nature. There must be only waiting for the end.

I do not wonder that women dread the tell-tale wrinkle, the white hair, that tells the secret that the time has come.

They try to cheat old Father Time himself. They rub out the wrinkles, dye the whitened locks and redden the fading cheeks. They change the maturing line of their figures into the curves of youth.

Without youth, woman has been taught since the earth began, there is no hope.

"You cannot become mothers any more. Make way for the women who can," says the world.

"Dear mother is so restless," says the grown-up children. "Why can't she settle down and be serene from now on?"

No matter how much capacity you feel within yourself, for hard work and the joy of living, you are relegated by your family and friends to being "serene from now on."

With more than a third of your life before you, with the wisdom that can only come from experience, there is no reason in the world why, unless you wish it, you need be "serene from now on."

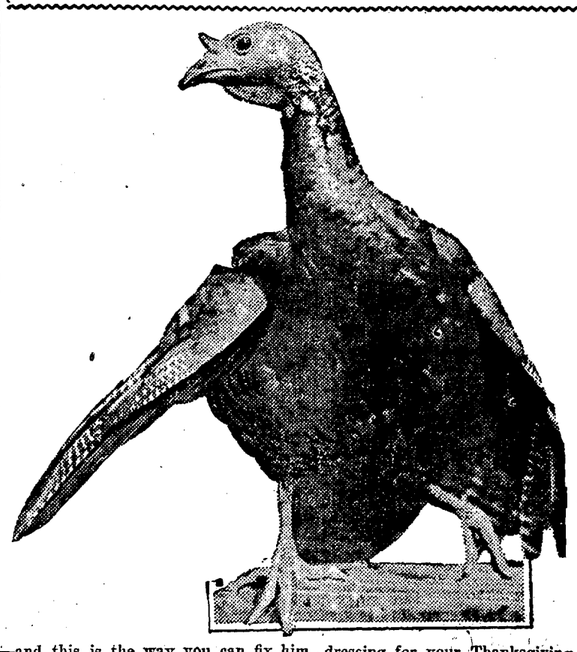
Sarah Bernhardt once said to me when I asked her the secret of her wonderful youthfulness—or rather her wonderful realization of the joy of living and the joy in living "The whole secret is in never looking back, in always looking forward—in making new promises to yourself and in starting in to fulfill them."

This woman, as she said this, was beautiful not only with the beauty of promises already fulfilled, but beautiful with the enthusiasm that new promises and the going about enthusiastically to bring their fulfillment entailed.

No self-centered woman can be beautiful whether she be 16 or 60, and every woman who has sympathy, knowledge and poise—things which only can come to the mature woman—can have beauty at its best.

Start in today, oh woman of 40, in making new promises to yourself and to the world. Come out of your soul self, but in doing so do not neglect your physical self. The splendor and beauty of this wonderful world is not over for you—it has just begun.

"Gobble-Gobble," Says The Turk—Then They Stab Him With a Dirk.



—and this is the way you can fix him for your family dinner table on November 25:

Pluck him and singe him and wash him three times; then stuff him brimfull of bread, onions and thyme. Then roast him all brown, and have Mary warm a platter, and take him to the table on that. When you serve him to the multitude have a generous helping of cranberries placed on each plate.

To stuff a turkey with chestnuts dressing for your Thanksgiving table—split with knife two pounds of chestnuts and roast them in an oven not too hot. Peel them, and finish cooking in a large saucepan. Cover the chestnuts with white stock, add a piece of raw celery, and cook again, slowly, in order to keep them as whole as possible. Drain and cool off. Have one pound of fat sausage meat seasoned with salt, pepper and sage; mix with the chestnuts and stuff the turkey

WABASH MEETS FRIAR CREW HERE SUNDAY

Championship Contest to Be Played on Local Grid Tomorrow.

The Wabash-Friar game will be played Sunday, rain, snow or flood. Nothing can hinder it. And it starts promptly at 2 o'clock. The following note from Manager Lopshire, not intended for publication, but merely to keep the newspapers posted, tells the advance story clearly and concisely.

The seat sale thus far has been very large and as a matter of fact far beyond all expectations. However, there are still seats to be had at Schirmeyer's, Pohlmeyer's and Riegel's cigar store. Come early and avoid the rush.

The game will be started promptly at 2 o'clock and there will be a band to escort the Wabash crowd from the train to the grounds.

The "Howling Hundred" will also have a band. They have been rehearsing their yells and songs at the club rooms and have everybody crazy with the awful noise they make.

This game promises more enthusiasm than any other game ever played in Fort Wayne, and, in all probability independent circles in the state.

Feeney and Pliska will be on hand for practice tonight. Kints, Denison and Zaring will arrive tomorrow. There will again be secret practice tonight and Saturday afternoon. The gates will be guarded by policemen, therefore, those that are not entitled to be inside the gate will be more comfortable uptown.

Reilly, the big end, who practiced for the first time last night, made a very favorable impression and should show something Sunday.

Captain Edwards fits into the team play in fine style and we feel sure will be of great assistance to us.

FINAL GAMES PLAYED BY WESTERN ELEVENS

Puzzling Situation Develops in Big Nine Championship.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Final games of the western football season are to be played today with interest centering on two contests—the Chicago-Illinois struggle at Chicago and the Wisconsin-Minnesota game at Madison.

The puzzling situation growing out of the "Big Nine" championship race has aroused unusual interest in these two contests because of the claims of Illinois and Minnesota, both undefeated this season, to the western conference title. Illinois and Minnesota played a 6 to 6 tie on Oct. 30.

Experts point out that a victory for Chicago, provided Minnesota defeats Wisconsin, would give the Minnesota eleven a valid claim to the championship. Illinois, on the contrary, if victorious would be proclaimed the western conference champion provided Wisconsin humbles the Gophers.

On past performances experts pick Illinois and Minnesota to win their games but because of the numerous upsets this season the results cannot be predicted with the same accuracy as in other years.

Northwestern will close its season in meeting Ohio State while Indiana and Purdue will attempt to settle their long standing question of supremacy at Bloomington.

KILBANE BOOSTS WEIGHT LIMIT TO TAKE IN LIGHTWEIGHTS.

Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, miffed at the criticism that he is picking out the soft ones in his division, has raised the weight limit from 122 pounds to 133, and announced he will meet any man in the world at that weight.

Since he became champion Kilbane has made nearly all his opponents make 122 pounds. He says there are no 122-pounders worthy of a championship match and he is ready to take on lightweights.

QUITS ORGANIZATION.

(By Brown Holmes).

Hal Church, Yale end, is more a pupil of Tom Shevlin, hero coach, than any other man on the blue eleven and Yale depends upon him to keep Mahan and the other Harvard backs from gaining ground on wing plays in the big game Saturday.

When Shevlin jumped from his business in Minneapolis to Yale in answer to an emergency call, he found Church, a youngster, with lots of speed, but lacking in the fine points of the game.

Realizing the possibilities in the young player, Shevlin took him under personal tutelage and in a week had him playing a great game. Shevlin especially drilled Church in tackling and the youngster handled Princeton runners last week like a veteran.

Church with his great speed is especially good getting down the field under punts. Shevlin has taught him in a short time to outguess his opponents and there was not a time in the Yale-Princeton game when the Tiger interferers were able to get the Yale end into a "box."

This is Church's first season on the varsity team. He is called a Shevlin-made end and his work since Shevlin took hold of him has been a fine boost for Shevlin football.

PURDUE AND INDIANA CLASH IN FINAL GAME

Season Closes Today for the Indiana School Grids.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 20—Purdue and Indiana universities close the 1915 football season with their annual clash here today. Critics predict a close struggle. Each team has been pointed for several weeks to today's game and it is believed that the rival elevens will display the best football they have shown this season. The day dawned crisp and clear, but with a wind out of the west. The probable lineup:

TEAMS' WORK AGAINST ALL OPPONENTS.

Yale has made a better record than Harvard against all opponents in the history of football at the two institutions. Yale started football in 1872, Harvard two years later. The records:

BLUE AND CRIMSON STAGE BATTLE TODAY

New York, Nov. 20.—Harvard's annual football meet with Yale, fought this year at Cambridge, is by far the most important in popular interest of today's contests in the east. Yale's apparent recovery of old time football form as shown in her defeat of Princeton, made the outcome of the game today doubtful even to the experts. Other eastern games are Syracuse vs. Dartmouth, Columbia vs. New York university, Trinity vs. Wesleyan, Fordham vs. Carlisle, Swarthmoore vs. Haverford, Army vs. Springfield, Navy vs. Ursinus, Lafayette vs. Lehigh, Washington and Jefferson vs. Bethany, Rhode Island state vs. New Hampshire state, Middlebury vs. Vermont, Carnegie institute vs. Western reserve.

Dog Only Actor to Run Blockade in the War Zone

EDNA MAYO

The only actor known to have successfully run the blockade of submarines in European waters is "Frisky," Essany's latest acquisition to its force of players. Frisky boasts of the bluest kind of blue blood in his veins and hails from Pomerania on the Baltic sea. Frisky was sent to Miss Edna Mayo, leading woman with Essanay, by a friend in London.

FOOD SOURING IN STOMACH CAUSES INDIGESTION, GAS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends all stomach distress in five minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.—Advertisement.

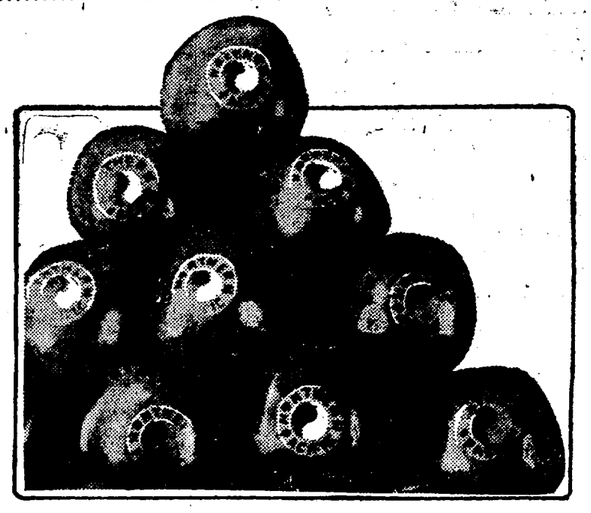
FAMILY CREST BRANDED ON APPLES.



Here is the latest stunt conceived by the dining car department of the Northern Pacific railway.

With Hazen J. Titus, head of the department, leading the movement, the Northern Pacific has adopted a unique plan for branding apples with the emblem of the road.

It is done by pasting a sort of paper stencil on them while they are green. When they ripen, the part under the paper stays green. Then the paper is torn off, and the apples find themselves "branded." Most of the apples come from the Wenatchee valley, in Washington.

Since the "branding" process was evolved, the apple growers have received orders from fashionable hotels in the east and even in Europe for apples branded with their crests. Some of these apples sell for 25 cents each to the ultimate consumer.

WILL WARN TEUTONS AS WELL AS ALLIES

Washington, Nov. 20.—Non-interference with American commerce on the high seas will be demanded of Germany and Austria as well as of Great Britain and her allies in notes to be dispatched soon on the subject of contraband.

The United States will vigorously protest against the action of the European belligerents in declaring all commerce contraband. It will largely be perfunctory so far as Germany and Austria are concerned, however, as these nations are not now in a position to interfere greatly with American shipping. The note is nearly completed now but will not be dispatched until it has been carefully revised by Secretary Lansing and President Wilson. It will challenge the right of a belligerent to extend the list of absolute contraband beyond the limits recognized by international law before the war.

The Italian foreign office has notified American Ambassador Page, at Rome that it has no reason to believe that the submarine which sunk the liner Ancona with the loss of several Americans was other than an Austrian. This with the Austrian government's acknowledgment of the act clears up the last possibility that it might have been a German boat.

MAN'S NUDE BODY IN TRUNK REVEALS CRIME

Portland Police Grappling With Murder Mystery That is Baffling.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 20.—Police are making efforts today to establish the identity of a murdered man whose nude body was found in a trunk picked up in the Willimet river last night. A deep gash in the head, exposing the brain, revealed the manner of his death. Around the neck were welts as if from a cord or rope. The man was about 40 years old.

Sealed to the inside of the pockets in two different coats found in the trunk were cards bearing the name of W. B. Flanigan, Palestine, Texas, and Charles Wagner, 173 Sumner street, Boston, Mass., A handkerchief bore the laundry mark "F. B."

PUZZLE TO WAGNER.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 20.—Charles Wagner, of Boston, whose card was found in a trunk picked up in the Willimet river containing the body of a nude man, could give no clue today as to his identity. Wagner, who is engaged in the clothing business here, failed to recall any customer or person who might have gone west with his card.

A paper written by William H. Rankin, vice president of the Mahin Advertising company, of Chicago, was read by C. J. Schoo, Friday, at the regular noon-day weekly meeting and luncheon of the Quest club.

WOMEN CAN SAVE $5 IN AN HOUR

You will never again pay enormous prices for dry cleaning after trying this. Any woman can clean and renew the appearance of yokes, ribbons, satins, laces, silks, furs, shirtwaists, Swiss, lawn, organdie and chiffon dresses, kid gloves and shoes, neckties, children's clothes, suits, caps, woolen garments, fancy vests, draperies, rugs, in fact, any and everything that would be ruined with soap and water.

Get two ounces of solvite at any drug store and put it in two gallons of gasoline, where it quickly dissolves. Then put in the goods to be cleaned. After a little rubbing out they come looking bright and fresh as new. You will find nothing fades, shrinks or wrinkles, requiring no pressing.

You would have to pay $5 at a dry cleaning establishment for the cleaning which can be done at home as easily as laundering. Any grocery or garage will supply the gasoline and your druggist will sell you two ounces of solvite which is simply a gasoline soap, then a large dishpan or wash boiler completes your dry cleaning outfit.

"As gasoline is very inflammable, be sure to do your dry cleaning out of doors or in a room away from fire or flame, with the windows left open."—Advertisement.

FUNERAL OF PHILIP ANTHES ON SUNDAY

Columbia City, Ind., Nov. 20.—Funeral services for the late Philip Anthes, a veteran business man and first chief of the Columbia City fire department, will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence, Rev. Hunter, of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Mr. Anthes, whose death took place Friday, was 74 years old and had resided here since 1870. He was born in Germany, came to America in 1868, locating in Van Wert, Ohio, where he followed his trade as a baker for seven months, then going to Fort Wayne, where he was engaged in the bakery business until August, 1870, when he came here. He first started a bakery here, but in 1872 moved up town and started a grocery and saloon. Later he engaged exclusively in the saloon business. He had a record of never having been charged with any violation of the law. He was married in 1870 to Katherine Sipe, of this city, and of ten children born to them eight survive with the widow. Mrs. George Welker, of Fort Wayne, is a daughter.

ANOTHER FARMER OF ASHLEY ENDS LIFE

Ashley, Ind., Nov. 20.—Thomas Lacey, a well known farmer residing four miles east of this place, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself. He was 73 years old. He had been irrational for some time and on Thursday had attempted to kill his wife, who saved her life by fleeing to the home of a neighbor. Lacey was found dead in bed by a daughter. He had pulled the covers over his head and put a bullet in his brain with a revolver. This is the third suicide of well known farmers in this vicinity during the past few months. Surviving Lacey are his widow and two children.

BABE A DAY ALLOWED TO DIE BY DOCTORS

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Six physicians composing a coroner's jury yesterday held that Dr. H. J. Haiselden, who permitted an infant, John Bollinger, to die when an operation might have saved him to a life of unhappiness as a defective, was morally and ethically justified in refusing to perform the operation which his conscience did not sanction. An implied disapproval of a course wherein a physician might determine if it was or was not desirable for a patient to live was contained in the concluding paragraph of the verdict. "We believe that the physician's highest duty is to relieve suffering and to save or prolong life."

Dr. Haiselden interrupted the testimony of one physician to say that from information in his hands he believed at least one baby a day was allowed to die secretly by physicians in Chicago. The statement was not contradicted.

The Daughters of Workmen will give a pedro party Tuesday, Nov. 23, in their quarters in the Lincoln Life building. The public is invited.

OUTLINES BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT TO CLERGY

L. O. Wetzel Contradicts General Idea That It is a Military Order.

Before several members of the Fort Wayne Ministerial association and several ladies interested in this movement, Louis O. Wetzel, field scout commissioner of Indiana, outlined the work of the Boy Scout movement and suggested plans for the organization of troops in Fort Wayne at a meeting held Friday evening in the assembly room of the public library. Among many interesting ideas which he advanced he contradicted the general opinion which seems to prevail among the public that the Boy Scout organization is a military one. He said rather than this it was a peace organization, but so cultivating hardiness, readiness and courage in the boys as to better fit them for war, peace, or indeed any emergency of life.

After giving a history of the Boy Scout movement from the time of its beginning, February 4, 1910, to the present day, he went on to say that the motto, "Be Prepared," has been mistaken in meaning by the average person. Instead of teaching the boy to be a soldier, this motto stands and teaches the boy to be an assistance to the community. The uniform does not make the organization military like, but brings all classes of boys on the same level and does away with the possible existence of castes.

Mr. Wetzel stated that two things that the Boy Scout work does not teach are religion and politics, but that this part of the training depends on the parents and pastors. One statement which he made, which was very favorably received, was that Sunday was not a Boy Scout day, but a day for religious training, and that it was absolutely against the ruling of the national board to have the boys do anything on Sunday. "Saturday," he said, "is the Boy Scout day over the entire world."

The object of the meeting held Friday evening and which Mr. Wetzel very emphatically brought out in his address, was: First, to secure the cooperation of the ministerial association in this work; second, to secure a man from each church who is a leader among the boys; third, to perfect an organization which will be permanent and which will secure headquarters; fourth, to discuss the financial end of the question.

Rev. Mahlon Tunison, pastor of the South Wayne Baptist church, who was formerly scoutmaster at Wochester, was appointed to speak to the members of the ministerial association next Monday on this question and urge them all to be present at another meeting to be held on the afternoon of December 4. At this time each minister is expected to bring a leader of boys from the church with him.

It is the plan of Mr. Wetzel to organize fifteen or twenty Boy Scout troops in the various churches of the city. The first thing, however, he intends to establish a school for the scoutmasters, so that they may be taught the work and in turn teach the boys.

Mr. Wetzel will meet with the boys of the Boy Scout age which is twelve to eighteen years, of the First M. E. church next Friday evening and will organize troop No. 1.

"If my plans are realized," said Mr. Wetzel," and if the people of Fort Wayne take up with the Boy Scout work, I am going to give up my state work and devote my entire time to the boys of Fort Wayne with whom I have come to live."

BOOKWALTER WILL ADDRESS REALTY MEN

While at Indianapolis this week Lee J. Ninde, president of the Indiana Real Estate association, and Albert Schaaf, member of the governing board, made arrangements with Charles Bookwalter, a probable candidate for United States senator, and Judge C. J. Orbison, of Indianapolis, to address the members of the Fort Wayne Real Estate Exchange at some future meeting.

Messrs. Ninde and Schaaf were at Indianapolis to attend a meeting of the governing board of the state association, at which William L. Elder was the principal speaker.

IS NOW ENTIRELY CURED OF RHEUMATISM

Friends of Mrs. O. S. Pierce, formerly a resident of Fort Wayne, residing in Lakeside, but now of 2440 Bellfountain street, Indianapolis, will be pleased to know that she is entirely cured from rheumatism. Since Miller's True Herb Remedy has been placed in the hands of Indianapolis druggists Mrs. Pierce was one of the first to give this great rheumatic remedy a trial and she was completely cured and gained her health and strength again. "I used only one bottle and it cured me." True Herb Remedy has since found its way into many homes in Indianapolis and is doing worlds of good to the afflicted. All along the line Miller's True Herb Remedy has been introduced and reports are coming in from all over this state, Illinois and Michigan. THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Nov. 20.—Steady liquidation caused numerous stocks to decline to the lowest prices of the week today. Dealings were light but supply was in excess of demand. Support was most often lacking, especially in war shares, where greatest heaviness was reflected. There were no definite over night developments to account for the general recessions, but the feeling of caution among traders as well as investors seemed to be on the increase. Even rails, which recently manifested a stronger tendency, lost ground with the more speculative issues. Some substantial recoveries were made later, Texas company suddenly advancing 1½ to 263. The closing was irregular. Bonds were firm.

The lethargy and lowered price trend which marked yesterday's trading was continued today, war shares and automobile issues being especially heavy. Almost the sole exception was mercantile marine preferred, which recovered a point of its decline. Canadian Pacific was a point lower at 182½, with very slight changes in other rails. Tennessee Copper, which ranks as a war stock, was down 2¾ at 56. United States Steel made a nominal recession on light offerings.

SUFFRAGE CAR RACING FROM PACIFIC COAST TO WHITE HOUSE.

Over the Sierra and Rocky mountains, across the Great American desert, through Iowa prairies and Kansas mud holes a suffrage car is speeding from San Francisco to Washington. It is now passing through Ohio.

It is carrying Sara Bard Field, elected envoy of the Woman Voters' convention, recently held in San Francisco, and a petition asking congress to pass an amendment to the constitution enfranchising all women. This petition bears over a half million signatures and will be delivered to President Wilson. The car is owned and has been driven all the way by Maria A. Kindberg and cared for by Ingeborn Rindstedt, both of Providence, R. I.

Wood-Cutting Made Easy

Wood-cutting shouldn't be hard work. The trouble is lots of people think it doesn't deserve a good tool. The right saw will make the work easier than you ever thought it could be.

Atkins Wood Saws

Go through the wood in a jiffy, with little effort. The blade is tapered, so that the tooth-edge is the thickest part. Doesn't bind or stick in the wood. Made of high-grade steel, which holds a keen cutting edge. The handle permits a comfortable position. Cost no more than the old "good enough" kind.

Buy an Atkins—be sure it bears our name. If it doesn't make you feel more friendly to your wood-pile, bring it back to us and get your money back.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BETTER CONDITIONS ALL OVER INDIANA

Reports on Business Situation All Optimistic in Tone.

By Willis S. Thompson.

Indianapolis, Nov. 20.—In a pretty thorough review of the local business conditions the Indianapolis Star has made a survey of both wholesale and retail districts. In both these they find not only larger volumn of business with each week that passes, but the collections are also showing well in size and promptness. Extra men have been placed to take care of the business over the state.

A special story is devoted to the Central Union telephone business, as indicating unmistakable show of better conditions. It is pointed out that the long distance calls have increased so much that it hardly appears the same exchange that was in operation a few months ago. Not only is the record of the distance calls very much improved, but the Bell exchanges, both in the city and over the state are recording hundreds of new applications every day for the installation of new telephones. This business is coming unsolicited and so is accepted as evidence of business revival. Only a few months ago "such orders were very few."

Just as an evidence of appreciation of this good business feeling, the Central Union Telephone company is giving a demonstration of the trans-continental wire service to the men of Indianapolis and Indiana on the night of November 23. About a thousand telephones are to be placed in the German House, where the guests will assemble and listen to conversations with mayors, governors and others in California and other parts of the country.

In addition to the many excellent reports from the newspapers of the state, to which reference has been made, the Lagrange Democratic-Call says the farmers in that part of the state have such large crops and large prices that automobile salesmen and business houses have all felt the results of the distribution of increased wealth. Cement works and other plants increasing capacity, two new banks opened in their own buildings, and "we can discover nothing that indicates anything but prosperity."

New Albany Public Press declares the good times continue better there all the time. The manufacturers have had to go outside for men to supply the labor. Business fifty per cent. better than two months ago. Not a single industry idle and all increasing capacity and output.

The Garrett Clipper leaves no doubt that business is growing in a way that the country round about Garret has not before known. And it is all creditied to the good work of the national and state administration.

Columbia City Post, representing the community made famous by having supplied to the country a much-talked-about democratic vice president, declares if they had any better business it would bother them to handle it. All the manufacturing plants, large and small, busy all the time and growing larger. Banks hold larger deposits than ever in their history. Hundreds of new homes in city and new farm houses, new barns, new automobiles at all the farms. Not a man out of work and nobody has time to listen to calamity.

Monticello Observer—"Nothing wrong here. Everybody employed. Crops good." What more could any community have or ask for?

Poseyville News says farmers have money and ride in new automobiles. Farm labor well paid. General business revival very encouraging.

Martinsville Democrat complains because some republican newspapers actually comment about hard times. It is pointed out that the complaint seems to have been prepared at some central source. When nothing worse can be said they howl because of what will happen "after the war." The Democrat calls attention to the fact that there is not a newspaper in Indiana in which the advertising columns do not speak community prosperity.

Osgood Journal says weather was not as good to farmers as in some sections but business generally getting better every day and things are "progressing in fine shape."

Hartford City News continues to report progress—nothing stands still there. Everybody at work. Not an idle plant. Not a vacant house. Demand for good houses.

Richmond Item says conditions better than a year ago. Many more men employed than this time last year. Business looking up.

Pulaski County Democrat — Crops good. Nobody out of a job if he wants to work. Good democratic prospects.

New Castle Times has whole columns every day about new homes being built, new factories, old factories enlarged, more orders than can be handled, banks bulging with money, larger weekly pay rolls than ever before known, will pass more than 15,000 population in 1916 and if an outsider may judge conditions it looks like most of that 15,000 will be supporting the democratic national and state ticket in a year from now. They surely can want no political or business changes.

Connersville Examiner shows a large amount of individual improvement. It talks much of the splendid business conditions in the city and county. All factories working overtime. More money than ever before in the banks. Demand for more houses, not being a vacant one in the city. Prospects for future could not be brighter.

And of the more than one hundred other reports on file not a line of serious complaint with present conditions or future prospects.

BULGARIAN KING MUCH IN EVIDENCE

Fredinand Has Taken Very Decidedly Democratic Trend of Late.

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 10.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press).—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria has been by all odds the most talked-of figure in the public eye of Hungary since he took the step which arrayed his country on the side of the Germanic [illegible]. Many columns of newspaper space have been especially devoted to descriptions and anecdotes of the popular monarch, who appeals especially to the Hungarian heart because of his long and close connection with Hungarian affairs.

It is remarked particularly that Ferdinand, once the embodiment of the autocratic ruler, has of late years shown more and more democratic tendencies, until now, "without in any way derogating his royal dignity and the majesty of his appearance, he moves about among all classes and ranks in the attitude of a brother rather than that of a king.' There is said to be a great enthusiasm for him among his soldiers, and he is constantly seen with the troops, even as far as the extreme firing line, encouraging them and appealing to them frequently with words of recognition.

Since Ferdinand entered on the war he has received innumerable messages congratulating him on his action and on the bravery displayed by his troops. Telegrams and letters have reached him from all parts of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey. He reads all these messages personally, it is said, and takes great pleasure in them. "When he receives a bundle of letters of this kind," remarks one correspondent, "his countenance, usually so gloomy, lightens up."

The whole Bulgarian campaign centers at the king's headquarters, which is connected by wire with every section of the field in which Bulgarian armies are operating. The strict court etiquette which has been always a matter of great pride in Sofia, has been relaxed, and the king has requested his generals to interrupt him at any time, even at dinner, if there is urgent business to be discussed. At headquarters the king and his generals are said to constitute "one big family." When matters of war are not pressing he talks with them of past times and of his travels in all parts of Europe. He is especially proud of his popularity in Turkey. He was a great friend of the old sultan, Abdul Hamid, who on one occasion spoke of Ferdinand as "the greatest man in the Turkish empire save only the sultan."

The religious side of the Bulgarian monarch receives due attention in the newspaper tributes. Ferdinand never misses attending the orthodox mass on Sunday, but he is tolerant in his religious views and the orthodox and Catholic clergy receive like treatment in his armies.

SKIN DISEASES

LITTLE CHILD HAD ECZEMA ALL HER LIFE—CURED IN TWO WEEKS

My little girl had eczema on her face from the time she was born till she was about three years old. It was so sore and irritating that we had to watch her day and night to keep her from scratching her face and making it bleed. It seemed to annoy her almost constantly and we tried many remedies without any benefit till we consulted Dr. Wells who cured her in two weeks. Over a year has elapsed and there has been no evidence of its return. I am pleased to recommend his treatment to others.

SYNOPSIS

Old Cyrus Martin, the head of the American soap trust, makes a bet of $30,000 with a friend, John Clark, a rival soapmaker, that his (Martin's) son Rodney would be making more money at the end of a year than Clark's son Ellery.

Martin takes his pretty secretary, Mary Grayson, into his confidence and enlists her co-operation. Rodney has been a spendthrift, and the father wants to make him reform and go to work.

Mary meets Rodney, and the son proposes marriage to her. Rodney tells his father about his proposal, and the old man pretends great anger. He tells Mary he will disinherit Rodney.

Rodney defies his father, and Mary is deeply touched at the lad's genuine affection for her. Mary makes a financial bargain with Martin to encourage the son to go to work.

Ambrose Peale, press agent, meets Rodney and agrees to go into business with the lad on a salary basis. Rodney has resolved to go into the soap industry and buck the trust.

Rodney, Peale and Mary go into the soap trade together. Rodney then endeavors to borrow $10,000 as capital for his newly formed company.

The offices of the "13 Soap company" are opened, and they advertise it as "the most expensive soap in the world." Peale talks advertising continually.

The 13 Soap company finds its expenses very heavy, and financial rocks loom ahead. Their chief business seems to have been to spend money for advertising under Peale's directions.

An alleged countess, who has appeared on the scene, desires to purchase the French rights for the sale of "13 Soap" and produces a draft for $20,000, which she desires to have cashed.

CHAPTER XI.

A Visit From Father.

DURING this trying month old Cyrus Martin, the soap king, had sat in his library in Fifth avenue, or in his swivel chair at his office, and wondered how things were going with the boy anyway. From such information as reached him, he was not so encouraged as he would have liked to be. A month was not long enough to tell, of course, in the normal course of things, but that fool advertising made another matter of it. Those huge billboards and electric signs and balloons and sandwich men—piffle all of it, but Martin knew what such things cost, and was sure that Rodney's company could not possibly stand it. He was worried. And he was annoyed too. These abominable sandwich men; he had had one set of them arrested that afternoon on the avenue. He couldn't stand it. People might know who were in this ridiculous 13 Soap company, and he should be well laughed at.

Another and contradictory thing was the rumor he had heard downtown yesterday that the Andover Soap people were backing Rodney's company, going to build a plant for them. In fact, putting one thing and another together, he decided he would drop down and give the boy a call at his office. It wouldn't be bad to see him again, and Mary Grayson too. So he presented himself at the new soap company's office, on Broadway, and was kept waiting for his pains. A Miss Burke took in his name, and he guessed that it caused some excitement, for he could hear Rodney's voice and another chatting inside while he cooled his heels.

When he was at last ushered in the place looked like a real office, on the whole, and there at a desk sat Rodney, talking through the telephone. His father caught something about "not considering it," and "not having any stock for sale"—"quite out of the question," et cetera, et cetera, as he took a chair.

"Well, well," thought Mr. Martin, rather pleased and proud. "What's this?"

Rodney in a moment dropped the telephone and espied his father.

"Why, hello, father!" he greeted him genially.

"Hello, son!" said Mr. Martin. He observed with astonishment that Rodney was very busy filing papers, opening and closing drawers and that every now and then he signed a typewritten letter viciously with a rubber stamp.

"Sit down, won't you?" said Rodney presently. "I'll be with you in just a moment."

"Thanks," said his father dryly.

"Have a cigar?" said Rodney, handing the old gentleman a box in an absentminded way.

"Thanks," said Mr. Martin, biting off the end and lighting it at the match which Rodney held for him. Rodney lighted one too.

"Surprised to see me, I suppose?" said his father presently.

"Not a bit," said Rodney, flourishing a contract and signing it. Mr. Martin had some curiosity to see what it could be, this thing which really looked like a contract, but his son turned it upside down and blotted it ostentatiously on his desk pad.

"There, that's done," he added. "Now, father, what can I do for you?"

"Well, my boy," said Mr. Martin, "I just dropped in for a social call. The fact is I've rather missed you."

"I've missed you, too, father," said Rodney.

"Thought I'd have a look in and find out how things were going," said Mr. Martin abruptly.

"Fine—fine!" said Rodney. "Everything breezing right along. Of course I'm always glad to see you," he added, pushing the buzzer, "but right now, father, I'm pretty busy, so you'll excuse me if"—

He got very busy indeed again with big papers.

"Well, if you can spare the time I'd like a little business talk with you, Rodney," said Mr. Martin, with a certain sarcasm.

"Certainly, in just a minute," said Rodney, still preoccupied with his papers, but pricking up his ears.

Ambrose Peale, coming in, stopped suddenly when he saw who their visitor was. Rodney looked up at him.

"That's all right; come right in," he said. "Father, you remember Mr. Peale? Peale, my father"—

"Indeed, yes, I recall very well," began Peale effusively.

Mr. Martin gruffly cut him off.

"How are you?" he said.

Rodney Lighted One Too.

Buffalo, where we're conducting a big campaign."

"Is that so?" said Martin, senior, crustily.

"Perhaps you've heard about it?" inquired Rodney, looking at his father.

"No. Why should I hear about it?" said that gentleman for Peale's benefit especially.

"I don't know," said Peale helplessly.

"You see, Mr. Peale handles all our advertising, and perhaps"— began Rodney.

"Oh, he does, does he?" said Mr. Martin dangerously. "Then it is to him I should address myself."

"Either or both of us," chirped Rodney.

"Then both of you listen to me," Martin began. "You've got to cut out this nonsense you call advertising"—

"What nonsense?" asked Rodney.

"Yes, what?" echoed Peale weakly.

"This morning there was a parade of sandwich men in front of my house for two hours," Mr. Martin went on indignantly. "I had to have them arrested. I got to the office to find another bunch. It annoys me."

"I'm sorry, father," said Rodney.

"You're trying to make a fool of me," said his father. "I open a letter. It's a circular for 13 Soap. I open my newspaper; you have a page ad. I look out of the window; there's a billboard. I take a train; the porter apologizes because he's all out of 13 Soap."

"Well, of course, all that proves how wonderful our publicity is," said Rodney bravely.

"You're a grand young bluff, my son," said Martin grimly.

"Why, father, what do you mean?"

"I'll tell you exactly what I mean. I've let you ramble on to see just how far you would go, but you've been spending a lot of money advertising, hoping that by annoying me I'd buy out your business to get rid of you. Well, I'm not going to. Now what have you got to say to that?"

"Nothing—absolutely nothing," said Peale, taking heart again, and Rodney resumed quickly:

"But I have a lot to say. We may not have a big business now, but we have got a trademark—the catchiest trademark ever invented for soap. We're a growing concern. Just because our advertising annoys you you mustn't think it's valueless. Why, it's so good that capital is chasing us. Our money is practically unlimited. Is that a fair statement, Peale?"

"Bluff, son, bluff," Mr. Martin repeated.

"Not at all," protested Rodney, "and since you're so skeptical, father, I don't mind letting you see the plans for our new factory. These are the offices. Here is the power house, and this is my office, and here is Mr. Peale's"—

"Aren't you going to make any soap? Who's putting up the money?"

"Now, father," said Rodney reproachingly, "you cannot expect me to divulge a business secret to you, a rival manufacturer."

"Oh, why not tell him. He is your father," said Peale nobly.

"Well, Peale, if you really think it's wise," said Rodney.

"Oh, yes, I think it's quite wise," said Peale.

"It's the Andover Soap people," declared Rodney boldly.

Mr. Martin was at once impressed and annoyed.

"Yes, the Andover Soap people," echoed Peale, rubbing it in.

"You mean John Clark?" asked Mr. Martin, getting out of his chair.

"Yes," said Rodney.

"Absolutely," said Peale.

Mr. Martin turned and reflectively walked up and down. Peale very obviously picked up a push button and pushed the buzzer twice. There was a pause, and then in a moment Ellery Clark stuck his head through a door on the left. Mr. Martin did not know it, but this was all by prearrangement with Ellery. Peale, when he had come in just now, was fresh from tutoring Ellery in a little speech. The idea was to impress Mr. Martin overpoweringly on the subject of the Clark family's connection with the new factory. But Ambrose was, to tell the truth, a little nervous as to Ellery's ability to overpower the soap magnate. Ellery's first idea, too, seemed to be of bolting.

"Oh, excuse me. I didn't know your father was here," he began politely.

"That's all right, Ellery," said Rodney very genially.

"Yes, come right in," said Peale.

Ellery came in.

"How do you do, Mr. Martin?" he inquired.

"How are you, Ellery?" Mr. Martin responded gruffly.

He didn't like all this, but what was the matter with Ellery?

"Well, I really can't wait any longer," began that youth. "The party downstairs in the taxi—you follow me?"

"Yes, Ellery, you told us that," said Peale, shutting him off.

"Well, goodby, then," said Ellery.

"Was that all you came in to say?" Rodney took him up hastily, looking at Peale, and Peale added sharply:

"Yes. Have you decided about that deal?"

Ellery's mouth fell open, and a look came over his face as of one remembering a lesson.

"Oh, of course. If you'll keep it open until Monday I'll have the money for you then," he said.

"But we can't wait till Monday," said Rodney.

"But Mr. Peale told me"— Ellery answered, puzzled.

Peale came quickly to his rescue.

"We'll see what we can do, but just now, Ellery, we're very much occupied," he said, taking him by the arm and starting toward the door.

"Oh, just a minute," said Rodney. "You'd better give your father back the plans—say they're quite satisfactory."

"What plans?" queried Ellery helplessly.

"Oh, didn't he tell you about them?" Peale put in. "Perhaps after all, Rodney, I'd better give them to Mr. Clark myself. You remember I have an appointment with him today?"

"Oh, yes, it was today, wasn't it?" said Rodney.

"But father's out of town," Ellery protested.

"I know he is. Otherwise I could have kept the appointment," said Peale.

"We'll give you a definite answer tomorrow," added Rodney.

"But I don't understand," Ellery persisted. "Really, now, you say one thing, and Mr. Peale came in and"—

But already Peale was leading Ellery gently and firmly to the door.

"We'll have to see you later in the afternoon, Ellery," he said politely.

"But what did you want me to come in for?" quavered Ellery.

"Don't you see?" said Peale.

"No."

"That's too bad. Well, goodby, Ellery."

"I say, I do find business very confusing. I prefer the countess," murmured Ellery, going out.

"Ellery talks too much," said Rodney when Peale came back.

"He is very indiscreet," Peale agreed. "If it had been anybody but your father he'd have given our whole plan away."

"What's he doing here—acting for his father?" inquired Mr. Martin. His ideas of Ellery were undergoing a change.

"Absolutely," said Peale.

"You're not going to take him in;" said Mr. Martin, "that pinhead? Why, he didn't even seem to know what he was trying to get at."

"No, he didn't, did he?" agreed Peale. "But, after all, he does represent Andover soap," said Rodney.

"Great soap, Andover—ninety-nine and fifty-seven hundredths per cent pure," said Peale.

Mr. Martin grunted. There was something funny here, some kind of play acting, though he couldn't quite make out what it was. Old Clark's Ellery was a fool; you could see, that with your eyes shut. Yet a fool made a good go-between sometimes, and you never could tell what John Clark would be up to. Ellery sounded for all the world as if he were trying to recite some piece that Rodney and that fellow Peale had taught him. And yet what did he happen to be doing there in the 13 Soap company's offices? That couldn't have been prearranged. John Clark was up to anything.

CHAPTER XII.

"I'll take my medicine."

AS Cyrus Martin paced up and down the office he caught an exchange of gleeful glances between Peale and Rodney. That decided him.

"Andover soap!" he grunted. Then to Rodney in a more propitiatory tone he added, "Have a cigar?"

Rodney took one of his father's Havanas and threw away his own stub.

"Thanks," he said.

There was a pause.

"Have a cigar, young fellow?" said Mr. Martin to Peale next.

"Thanks," said Peale, surprised.

"Allow me," said Mr. Martin, lighting his cigar and then walking over to Rodney.

"Well, thinking things over, why should you and I fight?" he began.

"You started it, father," said Rodney.

"Quite true," said Martin, "and therefore I should be the one to call it off. Now, son, here's the idea: I'd rather have you with me than against me. The money doesn't matter much. In your way, while I don't indorse that kind of publicity, I suppose you boys have done some good advertising."

"Thank you, sir," chimed in Peale.

"Not at all," said Martin, then added to Rodney, "And if you're going to have a backer shouldn't I be better than the Andover soap people?"

Rodney's throat gave an involuntary cluck of pleasure.

"After all, blood is thicker than business. What do you suggest?" he said.

"Suppose I buy you out," Mr. Martin said, "including your trademark and good will?"

"Oh, you have our good will now, sir," put in Peale.

Rodney reflected:

"Buying us out might be expensive for you, father."

"Oh, I guess it won't take all the money I've got. What's your proposition?"

"What's yours?"

"How is the business—what are the assets and the liabilities?"

"How fortunate! It was only this morning that Mr. Peale roughly copied off the totals from our books," said Rodney.

"I try to keep up with every detail of the business," chirped Peale.

Rodney passed out the pink statement.

"There you are, father," he said.

"And 9 cents," added Peale.

"That's a remarkably good showing," admitted Mr. Martin. "Well, I'll give you $50,000 for your business as it stands."

Rodney took a good hold of himself.

"But we don't want to give up our business," he protested. "I like business. I wish you'd made me go into it years ago, father."

"We wish to continue in our chosen profession," added Peale grandly.

"Well, suppose you take 25 per cent of the profits," suggested Mr. Martin.

"It's wonderful weather, isn't it," said Rodney; "these crisp, cold, bracing mornings?"

"Well, I hardly thought you'd grab at that," said Martin. "What will you take?"

Rodney rose to the occasion quickly.

"One hundred thousand dollars cash," he said; "you assume all the contracts and obligations of this company, give us 40 per cent of the profits, a contract for me at $20,000 a year, for Miss Grayson at $10,000"—Peale coughed audibly behind him—"and another for Mr. Peale at the same figure."

Mr. Martin looked at the two men a moment, chewing his cigar.

"Done," he said finally. He could see, out of the corner of his eye, Peale and Rodney exchange looks and shake hands. Well, he had come down to buy them out.

"I congratulate you, father," Rodney said.

"You needn't," said Mr. Martin. "As a business proposition I don't think much of it, but I guess it'll show old John Clark he can't butt into my family affairs or get Ellery mixed up with my boy's business."

"Yes, father, we'd much rather have you than Ellery," asserted Rodney.

"Oh, much rather," echoed Peale.

This important deal was no sooner agreed on than Miss Burke came in inopportunely and conveyed to Rodney the information that the agent of the landlord wanted to see him at once.

"Yes," said Rodney. "You see, father, we're thinking of taking larger offices," he added. "Come, Peale. We'll be right back, father."

"Yes, father, we'll be right back," echoed Peale as they went out.

Mr. Martin stood there watching them proudly.

"Bully kid!" he said; then changing to a contemptuous tone, "Ellery Clark!"

Well, that was a load off his mind at any rate, he reflected contentedly. Of course he had bought a pig in a poke, more or less. You couldn't tell whether their books were carefully audited or not. If Mary Grayson kept them they were probably pretty straight. He was glad to have the boy back anyway. And there would be no more sandwich men parades.

Altogether he was in a quite mellow mood when Mary Grayson opened the door and came in. From the look on her face she was glad to see him and extraordinarily relieved too. Alas for the soap king! He did not realize how short his satisfaction was to be.

"Why, Mr. Martin!" cried Mary happily.

"Hello, Miss Grayson!" he said. "It's mighty good to see you again."

"Oh, Mr. Martin," responded Mary, "I'm so glad Rodney finally sent for you!"

"Sent for me?" repeated Mr. Martin in surprise.

"Have you talked to him?"

"Oh, yes. He's just gone out for a minute to see the agent of the landlord."

"Oh, then he told you about that too?"

"Yes, he told me. Why not?" asked Mr. Martin, puzzled.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've settled with him. You have settled, haven't you?"

"Yes; sure."

"Oh, good! Isn't it wonderful for him?"

The relief in Mary's voice was genuine, absolutely, as Ambrose Peale would have said. Poor Mary had had a trying day. There had been that dreadful man Jones to begin with. Rodney's $2,500 check must have gone through the clearing house in double quick time, Mary had thought, as the advertising dun appeared again. The fact was, it seemed that he had gone to the bank to get it certified and was furious to find that there were no funds there of the 13, Soap company to meet it with. He roared loudly about the sheriff. Unless the check was made good at his office in an hour he would have the sheriff round and sell them out, cover up their billboards and send them all to jail.

Mary didn't know much about sheriffs, and they sounded terrifying. She had heard about the law's delay, but the law sounded swift and terrible as interpreted by the irate Jones. She couldn't laugh about it and chaff about a cell with a sunny exposure, as Ambrose Peale did. That awful countess too! A woman swindler who had tried to get into them for $5,000. And the electric agent threatening to turn off the light from all their beautiful signs if he wasn't paid at once. How unreasonable people were! How could you pay them when you hadn't any money? And now, last of all, the rent agent making a fuss. No wonder Mary had begged Rodney to send for his father and give in. She was sure old Mr. Martin would help Rodney if he was sent for. Very naturally Mary thought on seeing Cyrus Martin smoking his cigar there contentedly that he had come in answer to Rodney's summons. She went on, sighing:

"Just think, without you he couldn't have lasted out the day."

"Couldn't what?" ejaculated the astonished soap king; then, recovering himself swiftly, he added: "Quite so. Quite so. Oh, by the way, in our negotiations the one thing Rodney didn't go into fully was the nature of the assets."

"The assets!" laughed Mary gayly. "They must have amused you. Why, we haven't any."

"Ha, ha! Haven't any?" echoed Mr. Martin, trying to laugh with her.

"But everything's all right now," went on Mary sweetly.

"Oh, yes! Great, great!" said Mr. Martin. "By the way, there was a report on the street today that the Andover Soap people were going to make a deal with Rodney—build him a factory"—

"Oh, there's nothing in that," said Mary innocently.

"Are you sure? As I got here I thought I saw Ellery Clark."

"Oh, that wasn't business. He just came to try to borrow some money from Rodney. Wasn't that funny?"

"Oh, what have I done?"

"Oh, yes, very funny," said Martin; then, changing his whole manner, he added angrily:

"The young scoundrel!"

"What!" said Mary.

"Thank you, Miss Grayson, for telling me," said Mr. Martin. "Do you know what he tried to do to me? Hold me up for $100,000, and but for you he'd have succeeded."

"Oh, what have I done?" cried Mary in distress.

"You've saved me a lot of money and kept me from being a fool. That's what you've done. Thank you. Good morning."

"You mean at last he had succeeded in getting you to back him?" cried Mary.

"At last! So that was his scheme all the time, was it? He didn't go into business on the level, but just for my benefit? And you were helping him. Well, he can thank you again for having failed."

"It's all my fault," cried Mary, breaking down.

"Yes, it was from the start. You got up the plan of my pretending to put him out of the house—a mighty silly idea."

"Oh, but I tell you you must help him," pleaded Mary.

"Help him yourself. You've got $5,000."

"But I gave it to him," cried Mary.

"My son took money from you!"

"He didn't know. I pretended it was from a friend. It made him awfully jealous, too," blubbered Mary.

"Well, you got him in, now you can get him out," declared the soap king.

"But your bet," asked Mary—"you bet $30,000 with John Clark. You don't want to lose that, do you?"

"Well, if Ellery's trying to borrow money from Rodney it looks like an even break. And anyhow I'd lose this bet twice over, rather than have my own son think he could make a fool of his father."

"But he is a good business man," pleaded Mary bravely. "He'd make you proud of him. If he could keep on a little longer I know he'd succeed. If you'll just help him he'll make money, you'll see he will."

"Of course, you want him to make money," said Mr. Martin brutally. "You're thinking of that percentage contract with me."

"I'm not—oh I'm not!" cried Mary. "I can't see him fail. I don't want you to pay me. I'll try to give you back what you've given me."

"By George, I believe you really are in love with him, Mary."

"It's up to me, and nobody else, to get out of this. Please go."

"Yes, I am—now," admitted Mary proudly. "But that doesn't matter. We've got to save him—save his business."

"I won't give him a nickel. Goodby!"

"But you can't go like this," Mary cried. "He'll be disgraced. He's in debt—in danger."

"Let him get out of it himself, then," said this Roman father. "It'll do him good. I've been a sentimental fool. I've made it all too easy for him."

"But that's your fault, too," persisted Mary.

"Yes, it is, and I don't propose to repeat the error. He's lied to me all the way through. We'll let him face the truth now. We'll see what he's made of."

Mary just sat and looked at him quite limply, letting her hands fall idle in her lap. What could she do? To make matters worse she could hear the rumble of men's voices outside as Rodney and Peale tried to soothe the rent agent's righteous indignation. Rodney and Peale came back, trying to look cheerful, but really quite crestfallen, as Mary could see very well.

"Well, we're going to move," said Rodney.

"Yes, nice chap, that fellow," said Peale.

"Well, Mary, have you heard about our deal?" asked Rodney next.

"The deal's off," Mr. Martin interrupted brusquely.

"Yes, off," repeated Mr. Martin brusquely. "Because you took me for a bigger fool than I am. My own son can't do that to me. I've found out now that you're broke."

"Oh, Mr. Martin!" protested Mary, crying.

But Mr. Martin stopped her.

"And all the time you were lying to me about the Andover Soap people and the factory they were going to put up. You thought you could make a fool of me—get the best of me, did you? Well, you can't. I'm finished with you and your 13 Soap. You're a smart Alec. You're a complete fake."

"I guess you're right," said Rodney.

"Ah!" said Mr. Martin.

"I did try to be smart," Rodney said. "I was stuck on myself. I thought business was a cinch. But you're right. I have been a fake. This whole thing never seemed real. It was just fun—like a game. But I've waked up, and now it's serious. I tried to get the best of you, but I'll take my licking. I don't want any charity. I know what's coming to me, and I'll take my medicine."

His father looked him over curiously.

"Well, maybe I've said a little too much," he said, relenting a little.

"No; it's all true," said Rodney.

"But, see here, I don't want you disgraced," said his father. "I"—

"You told me never to come back to you for a nickel," said Rodney bravely, "and I won't."

"Now, see here," began Martin.

"Please, father," Rodney went on. "It's up to me, and nobody else, to get out of this. Please go."

He held out his hand.

"Goodby, son," he said gently and went out.

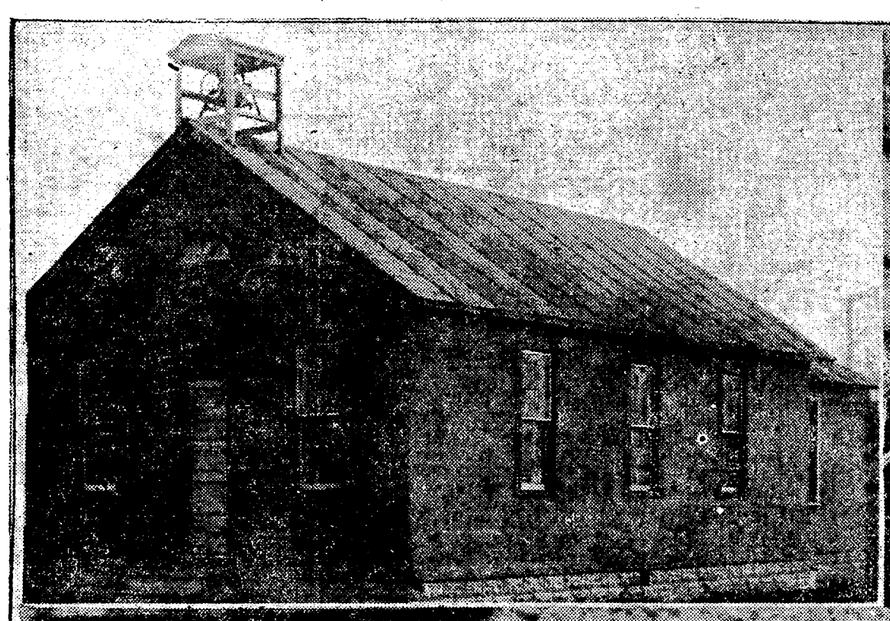
WESTFIELD FRIENDLY HOUSE WHERE CHILDREN FROM THE FAR PLACES LEARN TO BE AMERICANS



Out in the rolling mill district beyond the St Mary's river a little man and a little woman are stirring constantly and unendingly at a melting pot that is always on the boil. This caldron is the "Friendly house," the mission settlement of Westfield, as proud householders call their district, and the ingredients that go to make up the conglomerate mass comes from the ends of earth.

Roumanian, Hungarian, Gypsie, Pole, Russian, Jew—they come to their friendly house, each stamped with the brand of his fatherland, and they come out unhyphenated Americans And they come out good Americans, loyal Americans, hopeful, helpful young citizens.

A number of years ago the Rev. F. Pliney Potts and his wife left their Pittsburg home, where the Rev. Mr. Potts was pastor in a large Presbyterian church. For a number of years they had wanted to leave the old field for the mission. So at last they broke away and came to Fort Wayne.

And they found the rolling mill district awaiting them. It was a place in those days in which the unarmed feared to venture alone, and in which murder was looked upon as one of the daily pursuits of those athletically inclined.

The rolling mill district was a place of terror, but somehow or other Mr. Potts felt no fear as he walked out into the midst of it one Sunday afternoon, unbidden and unheralded, and conducted a religious meeting. It was perhaps the first religious ceremony ever performed there, except for perhaps the Oriental semi-barbaric rites that mark certain occasions in the calander of the foreign residents.

After the Sunday meetings had been conducted in the street for a time, the idle curiosity that had caused the gathering of the little knot of residents about the minister had developed into interest. The preaching had its effect. That is the story of the rolling mill Friendly House and Westfield chapel.

Another year found the workers in possession of a little house that they had built, a cheaply constructed affair and cheaply furnished, but it served to keep out the cold and rain, and within its sheltering walls the poor foreigners began to learn and to understand.

For a time Mr. Potts collected about him the men of the district, and Mrs. Potts worked with the women. And although there were many interested, and some who joined in the labors of the missioners, they were all too few. The men seemed satisfied, they were without a conception of a life other than that they led. Some of the younger men came to learn English, some of the women learned housekeeping. But it was a long and uphill grind, one that went on and on and on with little semblance of a termination. It was labor wasted, it seemed, for there was no idealism, there was no striving for anything better among the sodden workers of the mills. They lived in poverty and disease and filth. Their standards were not the standards of men. They seemed satisfied.

The Children, of Cource.

So Mr. and Mrs. Potts turned their attention to another phase of Westfield life. Allowing their classes of the elders to die out naturally they turned their attention to the children. Here among the younger generation they discovered that for which they searched. Here was interest, here was life, the children were striving to lift themselves to a higher level. They were enthusiastic.

That is why every Wednesday afternoon finds some twenty or thirty kiddies collected at the Friendly house for their regular weekly instruction, for the kindergarten classes and their story hour, for their little lessons in domestic science.

Mr. and Mrs. Potts have found that they can get better results and faster results and more lasting results from the children, and it is in this direction that they now are bending their efforts. And they certainly are getting results.

The youngsters are divided into two classes, the kindergarteners and the older ones, the little kiddies coming early in the afternoon and the boys and girls of school age making their appearance shortly after four o'clock.

When one realizes that the public school kindergartens accept no children under five years old, and that babes of one and a half are found in the Friendly House classes, it is easy to see that a difficult proposition is encountered.

And, too, the rolling mill youngsters, or the majority of them, know absolutely no English when they first begin to come, and it is largely through the aid of the mission that English is taught the infants. Their parents rarely know a word of the language of the tongue of their adopted land.

The older boys and girls are taught—first, last, always—that cleanliness is next to Godliness, and such instruction certainly is essential. And it certainly is having its results. This is done in many ways, but chiefly by example and experience.

For instance, nothing that is not absolutely clean is tolerated in the house. And the matter of cleanliness is drilled into the boys and girls. After each lesson the boys form in two lines, and under the direction of "Captain Potts" they clean up the room with military precision. At the same time the girls are engaged in the culinary arts.

No hard bread and soup, no mulligan cooking is that at the Friendly House. For the idea is to break the youngsters away from the old ideas and the old standards of living. They are taught to cook eatable things, and healthful things, and to cook them without using both hands and feet and the coal shovel.

"And when you roll the meat and put it in the pan, do you use your fingers?"

"No-o-o," of course not and their eyes all say "perish the thought."

Another pair of pictures shows the two classes, and the upper lefthand one the Friendly House. In the center are two of the more youthful members of the class.

Now the new Friendly House is finished and occupied, and it has everything from stained-glass windows to a bell that's lots of fun to play with. It is the result of years of striving, years of sacrifice on the part of a plucky couple. It is a monument to their labors and their trials and their ultimate success in a life work that is wholly unselfish, that is the true spirit of christianity.

Iola, Kas., Nov. 20. Dread death is stalking a Kansas family, and picking out its members, one by one and no one knows how, or why!

From out of the night, unseen hands are striking down a generation and the victims don't know an enemy!

Shots from the darkness, and other devices so mysterious and devilish as to baffle the best detectives, have been employed in the systematic wiping out of a peaceful, hard-working line.

In mortal terror a whole township is frantically asking:

Who, and for what terrible reason, sent Mrs. Roy Ard, young wife of a respected Elsmore farmer, to an early grave with a bullet in her back?

What midnight assassin waylaid Roy Ard in the darkness of a roadside culvert and sent a bullet whizzing past his ear?

What strange influence caused Elbert Ard, Roy's normal boy cousin, to be adjudged insane and sent to an asylum before the family knew what was going on?

What eerie phantom of the night brought death by terror to Jacob Ard on a deserted river bank—above high water mark without a trace of violence on his body?

Whose unseen pistol fired on Ora Ard, Roy' brother, as he fed his horses in the barnyard in the duck of early evening?

Where is the untraced source from which threats of death have come to the country prosecutor if he dared push his investigations in the Ard series of tragedies?

So far these questions are unanswered, and the remaining members of the tragedy-stricken family are grimly going about their daily tasks, prepared at any instant to meet death face-to-face.

The tragic events that have distraught Elsmore began in November, 1914, when Mrs. Viola Ard was shot as she rode home in an automobile with Roy Ard, her husband, and a sister.

But not until the murder of Roy Ard was attempted did Elsmore realize that a relentless and hidden vendetta was being enacted in its quiet byways—that a mysterious vengeance without apparent reason was abroad in its very air!

The attempt on Roy's life was made last May; the next month came the secret insanity proceedings against Elbert, a normal, healthy boy, and the awesome death of Jacob Ard; and this month bullets whistled past Ora Ard's head although there wasn't a person in sight!

The county officials, baffled by the mystery, have brought detectives from Kansas City, but they, too, after weeks of investigation, have not solved the mystery.

And the question still remains unanswered:

Why does death pursue this family?

NOV. 11, 1914 MRS. VIOLA ARD SLAIN AS SHE DROVE IN AUTO.
OCT. 10, 1915: A BULLET FIRED AT ORA ARD
JUNE 20, 1915: THE BODY OF JACOB C. ARD FOUND ON THE BANK OF THE MARMATON RIVER.

Marked by death! The above sketches show the mysterious series of tragedies that has fallen the Ard family of the little town of Elsmore, Kas. No one knows who is responsible or what the motive is, not even the members of the family.

Scene from "On Trial," Cohan & Harris' Big Dramatic Production which comes to the Majestic for three days, starting Monday.

IN THE THEATERS

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Again tonight—"A Little Girl in a Big City."

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday (Wednesday matinee)—"On Trial."

Thanksgiving Matinee and Night—"Lavender and Old Lace."

"A LITTLE GIRL IN A BIG CITY" TONIGHT.

"A Little Girl in a Big City," which will be the attraction at the Majestic again this evening, is said to be not only an intensely interesting play, but it is a great sermon on the abolition of a great evil. It holds up the mirror of actual truth of conditions now prevailing in most any large city, and it has a powerful influence in arousing public sentiment.

NOTABLE OFFERING MONDAY.

Cohan & Harris Present "On Trial" for Three Days.

At the Majestic, beginning Monday, for three days, with a matinee on Wednesday, Cohan and Harris will present the sensational success of the New York season, "On Trial." This promises to be one of the most novel offerings of the season. It will furnish the opportunity to see not only melodrama at its best, that is to say, its modern development, but the structure of the play is wholly individual. The theme of the story belongs to the much repeated seven, which are said to constitute the basis of all dramas and all novels. But the handling of the theme is so different from anything hitherto attempted, and the work is so faithfully and efficiently performed that the audience is treated to a succession of thrills which stir the very soul.

It is commonplace for a man to rush wildly out of his house to kill the man who wrongs his wife. That has been done so many times that the confirmed theatergoer doesn't care particularly for it unless some of the actors are famous. But in "On Trial," the commonplace has been reconstructed and redressed until it appears new and instead of a succession of yawns, the audience meets the continuous series of exciting episodes with a series of gasps.

The curtain goes up on a court room. The scene is the trial of Robert Strickland for the murder of Gerald Trask. Mrs. Trask is called to the stand to testify to the events which took place in her home on the night of the murder. She barely begins her testimony when the stage is shrouded in darkness and the scene is shifted to Trask's home. Instead of the testimony the actual scene is enacted. When it is completed darkness shuts out the home and as suddenly the court room reappears. Mrs. Trask completes her testimony and the trial proceeds.

These changes are made six times and this constitutes the effective feature of the play. A commonplace story is worked out so effectually and originally that the audience sees what takes place instead of listening to the testimony. And it is a pleasing variation of the old method of handling such a theme It affords opportunity for strongly emotional scenes which are worked up to so naturally that they do not appear forced, and which carry the audience forward so irresistibly that every person actually lives through the scenes with the actors. It would be difficult to conceive anything more calculated to stir the emotions of the audience.

The author of the play is Elmer L. Reizenstein, a young man scarcely twenty-three years old when the work was completed. It was his first attempt and the play was accepted by the producing firm of Cohan & Harris, because of its fresh treatment of story and plot. The play has been running for months in New York to crowded houses.

MISS GLEASON, AN EMPRESS FAVORITE

There has been but few stock theaters [illegible] enjoyed the success of having their people become favorites the first one or two weeks that they are in the city. Not so with Miss Gleason, for everywhere you go you can hear patrons of the Empress saying that they certainly have enjoyed the performances and that every one of the people are "just great." Miss Gleason has become very popular in her short stay in this city.

CLAUD AND FANNY USHER.

Presenting "The Straight Path" at the Palace Thanksgiving Week.

LAVENDER AND OLD LACE.

Majestic's Thanksgiving Offering, Matinee and Night.

In "Lavender and Old Lace," which appears at the Majestic Thanksgiving, theater patrons will have an opportunity to see a play, while different in its makeup, still as entertaining as "Peg O' My Heart."

The attraction is under the management of the Putnam Producing Co. (Inc.) "Lavender and Old Lace' is a story of a quaint corner of New England, where bygone romance finds a modern parallel. It is a gentle, old-fashioned love story, full of the kind of sentiment that rings true. Probably no work of fiction in recent years has enjoyed such well merited popularity. It is said that more than two million people have read the book and as the years go by the sale of it increases rather than diminishes. Some of the quotations from it have come to be household maxims.

"There isn't a new sorrow in the world—they're all old ones—but we can all find new happiness if we look for it in the right way."

"If women couldn't cry, they'd explode."

"Sometimes, out of bitterness, the years distill forgiveness."

"We deliberately make nearly all of our unhappiness with our own unreasonable discontent, but nothing will ever make us happy, dearie, except the spirit within."

"Men folks have got terribly curious minds."

"Some people are happier when they are sympathizin' with theirselves."

"In spite of the advanced age in which we live, I can't help thinking home is the place for a woman, after all."

AT THE EMPRESS.

Your last opportunity of seeing the greatest comedy ever written comes tonight when the final presentation of "Charlie's Aunt" with Walter Poulter in the leading part, will occur at the Empress theater. "Charlie's Aunt" is the funniest, most enjoyable comedy ever penned and that Fort Wayne audiences enjoy it thoroughly is evidenced by the big audiences which have greeted its every performance.

Next week the attraction at the Empress will be that famous success, which has never before been seen in this city. "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." McLain Gates and Miss Helen Gleason, the popular leading man and leading woman of the Empress organization, will play the leading roles in this most pretentious production yet made at the Empress since stock was instituted at this theater.

The action of "Hawthorne" is laid in a mythical kingdom where Hawthorne, who is proud that he is a citizen of the United States, does things that made the residents of the kingdom sit up and take notice. He does things so easily and so effectively that he gets by with stuff that simply makes the natives gape with astonishment.

In the original production Douglas Fairbanks and Miss Irene Fenwick played the principal roles and made the greatest successes of their careers. "Hawthorne" not only has never been seen in this city but it has never been presented so sumptuously at such popular prices. It is a great treat that is in store for local people at the Empress theater next week.

AT KEITH PALACE

For the big Thanksgiving bill which opens at the Palace Monday matinee, Manager Stouder has secured a list of attractions for which theater goers should be truly thankful. Heading the bill will be Claud and Fanny Usher, presenting their latest success, "The Straight Path." The playlet is full of heart throbs and tears, but for every one there is a laugh to chase it away. Miss Usher as usual, plays the part of a child, a little girl temporarily blind, and the play deals with the efforts of the child to win back to his home her brother who has become entangled in the meshes of business.

The big dancing feature, "The Six American Dancers," are next on the bill. They will present a number of dances that have set New York talking, closing with their "Six Periods in American History." The dance represents six periods, each produced in appropriate costume.

Charles Olcott will appear in his travesty on grand opera stars. He has studied the idiosyncracies of the international celebrities and his impersonations are wonderfully like the characters from which they are drawn. Mr. Olcott was for two years the star with "The Matinee Girls."

There are tongoists and tangoists, but only one Bertie Ford who does the tango on the wire. He flits and skips about, sending thrills chasing each other up and down every spine in the audience. He seems to have no difficulty in maintaining his balance on the wire and does with ease some feats that many can not perform on a floor.

Fay & Templeton will present "Loose Pages From the Book of Fun." As the name indicates the act is a laugh producer, and comes with a guarantee.

Breathing a spirit of good cheer, John T Ray and Grace Hilliard will present "Hello Sally." The playlet, by Herbert Winslow, offers unusual opportunity for good acting, genuine fun and excellent singing. The work of the two artists upholds their reputation as capable actors, while the vehicle itself is one of the best of the late crop of playlets.

Request Week.

Following a number of requests from Temple patrons that this or that act be brought to the Palace, Manager Stouder has inaugurated "Request Week." This special period will be during the week following Thanksgiving and on the bill then will be the seven acts for which the most requests have been received. Every act on the bill is now playing as a headliner in the east.

AT THE JEFFERSON.

A MIRACLE OF LIFE.

A Problem Play of Unusual Quality at Jefferson.

The Miracle of Life, interpreted by the impressive emotional actress, Margarita Fischer, is a real novelty. This virile drama handles the problem of race suicide with great force and delicacy. This play cannot help affecting every one that sees it. The rich are just as much interested as the poor. Public sentiment has been stirred, and there is no doubt but that The Miracle of Life will have a marked effect on the whole country.

Pauline Frederick

Lest the famous plot be forgotten—Bella Donna is an adventuress whose beauty leads the Hon. Nigel Armine to marry her, unsuspecting that the stories which have been circulated in London concerning her escapades are based upon fact. They go to Egypt, where Bella Donna, soon tiring of Armine, becomes fascinated by Baroudi, a powerful native, who induces her to poison her husband. Before Bella Donna succeeds in carrying out her intention to the full, Dr. Isaacson, an old friend of Armine, arrives in time to save his life. Her purpose defeated, Bella Donna pours out a tororent of hate and abuse upon Armine's head and departs for Baroudi's home.

To her horror, Baroudi discards her and when she returns repentant to her home, she is turned away by Isaacson before she can appeal to the sympathies of her husband. Alone and forlorn, she stands looking out into the black night across the bleak desert that typifies her wasted life.

By Leon Starmont.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 20.—This introduces Patience Worth—poet, philosopher, woman of wisdom—who lived 200 years ago and talks today!

Her habitat is the hereafter, but she speaks to the world at large from the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Curran, at 1363 Union-blvd, St. Louis.

She speaks by means of the ouija-board, a little heart-shaped contrivance, mounted on two wheels, with a pointer at the tip. This pointer spells out words on a lettered board—words, in this case, which the operator cannot always understand.

From the pointer at the tip of this heart have come poetry, humor, gripping drama—and a running fire of comment on the foibles of this century that has kept her hearers laughing and bewildered!

Also a novel, "Telka," of 60,000 words!

Persons of Prominence Convinced.

Mrs. Curran usually has her fingers on the tip end of the heart, and it is through Mrs. Curran as a medium that the best results are obtained. Mrs. Curran is not a spiritualist; she started using the ouija-board largely as a "joke"—quite as you or I would start it.

She is a woman of education, but not of a higher education—she does not understand the origins of the English language, or the forms of words in use 200 years ago.

Yet the messages from Patience Worth are couched entirely in ancient English—not a word of modern origin has been found in them. Mrs. Curran couldn't "fake" these messages. Neither could you, or anybody else.

Among the persons who came to scoff and who have been converted, are Wm. Marion Reedy, editor of the St. Louis Mirror, and "discoverer" of Elbert Hubbard; Casper S. Yost, editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, a widely known literary critic; C. Edwin Hutchings, secretary of a city park commission, and Mrs. Hutchings, who most frequently holds her hands on the board with Mrs. Curran. Curran himself is a former state immigration commission, who is now in business in St. Louis.

How the Messages Are Received.

Picture, then, this scene:

A brilliantly lighted parlor in the Curran home. Mrs. Curran and Mrs. Hutchings with their hands on the ouija-board; Mrs. Curran's mother, Mrs. Pollard, at their side with pencil and note-book. Grouped about are several others.

One, a physician, skeptically remarks: "I hope Patience will come; I'd like to find out what her game is!"

Almost instantly the board, under the fingers of Mrs. Curran and Mrs. Hutchings, begins to move. Mrs. Hutchings calls out the letters as the pointer jumps to them, and Mrs. Pollard takes down the message. This is it:

"Dost, then, desire the plucking of another goose?"

The physician smiled. "Right there with the grease, isn't she!" he remarked.

"Enough to baste the last upon the spit!"

The doctor wanted the board turned over so he could see what was under it. This was done. Then Patience spelled:

"Thee'it bump thy nose to look within the hopper!"

That's Patience Worth's manner of speech.

The other day she called William Marion Reedy "thou fat-awide!"

When she has "kidded" those present a little while she generally indicates that they have had enough amusement, and will now have to do a little work for her.

Dictates Dramas and Poetry.

"Think ye I be a doler o' wares without a price?" the pointer said. "Yea, and do ye work for the tale of me, I do for to fetch out sweets!"

Then came a few chapters of a story which the Currans have named "Panda," and which they have been taking for a few weeks. Patience scorns all titles, either for her dramas, novels or poems.

When poetry is coming from the ouija-board the house is in absolute silence, save for occasional expressions of wonder from the listeners. Much of the poetry is fragmentary, but all of it has a primeval beauty, which has led the enthusiastic Yost to say that it rivals Shakespeare! Yost is even collecting some of the verses into a book, which he is to publish soon under the title, "The Mystery of Patience Worth!"

(Note by Editor—Our correspondent has promised a few samples of the verse, which will be published tomorrow).

Patience Worth's answers to questions make it appear that she was "alive" in the year 1649, although whether that is the date of her birth she does not state. At one time the ouija-board followed the date 1649 with 94, which some among the company took to be the year of her death; but questioned on this point, she refused to say.

"Across the sea" is the only answer she has given as to her home on earth. From some of her nature references the Currans believe she was born in England and came to the American colonies.

May Answer Mysteries of the Ages.

Patience expressed disapproval one evening when Curran and Hutchings had gone together to a musical comedy in a St. Louis theater.

"Mayhap thou sendest thy men for barleycorn," the pointer spelled. "'Twould then surprise thee should the asses eat it!"

"What is she driving at?" Mrs. Hutchings wondered.

"Patience, what are they seeing there?" Mrs. Hutchings asked.

The answer came:

"Ne'er a timid wench, I vum. My pettieskirt ye may borrow for the brazens!"

Reedy has started asking questions along religious and historical lines. One was:

"Did Bacon write Shakespeare's plays?"

"What hath earth but stones for him to walketh shoon o' skins, sewn o' thong and crusts?" asked the ouija-board.

Reedy interpreted the "shoen o' skins" to refer to Shakespeare's being an actor of sock and buskin, and believes the answer of Patience to mean that Shakespeare wrote his own plays, but the world withheld credit, as actors in his days bore ill repute.

Reedy hopes, by persistent questioning, to obtain a clue as to the state of the hereafter.

Whether you have faith in these revelations or not, don't you agree that it is a most remarkable narrative?

THE OUIJA-BOARD; WHAT IT IS.

The ouija-board is a later and "improved" form of the planchette, which was invented in 1855 and was the object at that time of considerable superstition. The original planchette was a heart-shaped board seven or eight inches wide, mounted on two wheels and a pencil. The pencil was supposed to write words and messages when two persons with the proper psychic touch put their hands on it.

The ouija-board does not write with a pencil. It has a pointer, at the tip of the heart, and points out letters and figures on a board provided for that purpose. The letters are arranged in two semi-circles; in the upper corners of the board are the words "yes" and "no" and at the bottom are numerals.

Serious scientists never have attached any importance to the messages, maintaining they were the results of involuntary thoughts of the operators.

No communication of importance ever was received in this manner before the present manifestations at the Curran home in St. Louis.

Mrs. John H. Curran, of St. Louis, through whose finger-tips on the Ouija-Board have come some of the most remarkable poems, novels and dramas in the English language!

IT'S RATHER UNUSUAL

—for three little girls in one family to have their birthday on the same day each year, but that's the fun the youngsters in the above picture have. They're the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McGowan, of Birmingham, Ala., and all were born on Nov. 9 of different years. They're 8, 6 and 2.

Hon. Perry A. Randall left Saturday for Tulsa, Okla., where he will spend the week looking after business.

TRACK ELEVATION PLANS EXAMINED

Mayor William J. Hosey, Members Kelly, Singrey and Hilgeman, of the board of works, City Attorney Guy Colerick and City Engineer F. M. Randall spent Saturday forenoon in a minute examination of the plans submitted by the Pennsylvania and Wabash railroads for track elevation east of Calhoun street, and at the conclusion of the labor prepared letters to Vice President J. J. Turner, of the Pennsylvania, and President Edward F. Kierney of the Wabash, setting forth the official view of the proposals. The letters were forwarded Saturday afternoon. The examination of the plans was to enable the officials to ascertain what exceptions should be taken to the proposals as to grades, clearances and other details in which the city is vitally interested. The officials had no details to give out, but it has been known that the plans submitted by the railroads were not in their entirety satisfactory to the city. The letters just forwarded will bring the differences to an issue.

EXAMINE MONUMENT SITES.

On invitation of the Anthony Wayne monument commission, the board of works joined the commission, Saturday afternoon, for a tour of inspection of the various sites proposed and suggested for the location of the monument to be erected to the memory of General Anthony Wayne, for which funds are now in large part in hand. Swinney park, Old Fort park, Hayden park and points along Wayne trace were on the schedule of places to be visited.

BOARD WANTS ADVICES.

The board of safety has deferred any action looking to better regulations for the parking of automobiles down town until after advices have been received from the five business organizations interested in an improved situation. At the meeting of the board Friday night Chief of Police Charles Lenz reported a new schedule for the traffic officers. The board acceded to the request of Chief Lenz for an automobile for emergency work of the department, and the board will ask the controller to recommend an appropriation of $1,000 for the purpose. The board is preparing specifications for the new patrol wagon for which the council appropriated $1,500.

MANY ADMIRE THE NEW OVERLAND CAR

Expectancy regarding the new Overland car known as Model 75, which has been at fever heat for several weeks since its announcement was made, has been more than realized to the hundreds of people who have seen this beautiful wonder at the Fort Wayne Overland company's salesrooms in the past two days. This marvel of automobile production at $595 and $615 is a surprise to the motoring public as nothing approaching it has even been offered, and that it will be a general favorite and a big seller goes without saying. Model 75 possesses all the lines of beautiful style and at the same time has the economical advantages that are coming to be such an important factor in car construction these days. This car, completley equipped, makes a strong bid for public favor, and the business of the Fort Wayne Overland company already the most important distributing agency in the state, will be largely increased by the introduction of this new Overland 75.

SHOW DRY-CLEANING IS SUPERIOR TO WET

The essential difference was that Conductor Ray Dodson was entirely sober, whereas Taylor Glusenkamp and George H. Craig were soused when the pair got aboard a West Main street car, Friday night, and avowed their intent to "clean up" the crew. Conductor Dodson refunded their fare and told them to get off. They didn't betray any notion of getting off and received instant and efficacious help from the conductor. Dodson polished both rowdies neatly and Saturday morning had them in the city court on charges of disorderly conduct, both of them being found guilty and fined $25 and costs each. They paid. The trouble occurred shortly after the stoning of a car had been reported on West Main street.

Junk Buyers Are Fined.

Rudolph Guthman, a buyer in the employ of William Wunderlin and company, and Louis Uecker, employed in a similar capacity by Weil Bros. & Company, entered pleas of guilty in the city court, Saturday, to charges of purchasing junk from minors. Each was fined $25 and costs. The two men had bought brass, lead and rubber from Ralph Mentzer and John Bowers, both 14-year-old lads, who had stolen the stuff they sold. Investigation of several thefts by Detective Sergeants Walter Immel and Martin A. Rundell led to the arrest of the junk buyers.

Other City Court Cases.

Earl Stevens, formerly a street car motorman, who came here at the beginning of the strike, but has returned to Indianapolis, was found not guilty of malicious trespass, a charge brought against him by Herbert Gladbach, who said Stevens had purposely run his car into the complaining witness' jitney bus at Calhoun and Baker streets, one night a week or two ago. It was developed in the hearing that it was from Conductor Ross Dickinson and not Motorman Stevens that a bottle of whisky was taken by the police that night.

Pearl Farber, arrested several days ago, during a police raid on Barr street, was fined $15 and costs and given a suspended jail sentence of fifteen days on a charge of prostitution.

Frank Porter, who had been living for some months at the Rescue Home mission on Columbia street, was charged with disorderly conduct and continued until Tuesday under $200 bond. He was arrested on complaint of those in charge of the mission after he had been flourishing a knife in the place, Friday night. The man is thought to be demented.

William Murray, an actor, was arraigned on a charge of petit larceny for stealing a typewriter. He had borrowed a ring of a fellow actor and pawned it, and then stole the typewriter, it is said, to get money to redeem the ring. Judge Kerr continued the case for further investigation and Murray went to jail in default of $300 bond. Joe Shay and Arthur Dolan, drunks, and George Aber and Kenneth Evans, [illegible] disorderly conduct, were turned loose.

[illegible] was tried on a charge of assault and battery on Frank W. Rastenberg. The men are related and the trouble grew out of a family row. Judge Kerr continued the case a month and released Neireiter on his own recognizance.

ADMITS HE IS GIFFORD.

To Chief of Police Charles Lenz admission was made by Charles L. Warren of Commodore Perry Hull, the check swindler and husband of Beulah York-Warren, that he is the escaped convict B. J. Gifford, wanted by the authorities of the Kansas state prison at Lansing to complete a term there for obtaining money by false pretenses. He denied, however, that he has a wife in Leavenworth, known as Cora Gifford. He said he had been married once, but that his former wife is dead. When first arrested Warren denied that he ever had been married.

LOCATE MISSING GIRL.

Hazel, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mays, of Eliza street, who has been missing from home since Tuesday, has been located at the home of an aunt in Auburn. She was found by Sheriff John Hoff at Auburn, from whom Motorcycle Officer John Lynch, of the city police, learned the facts.

Overland

The New Model 75 Is Here

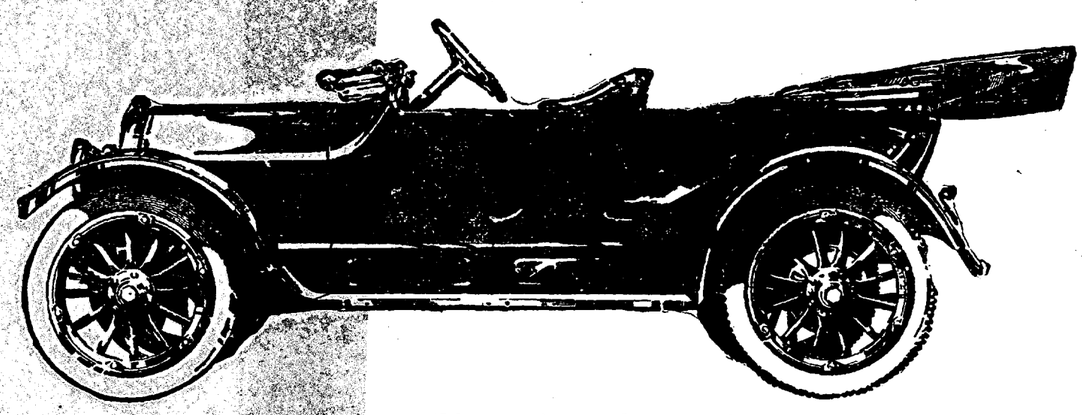
Four-Inch Tires



The opinion of all who have seen this car at our salesroom, the past few days, is that this is the greatest accomplishment in a car for the money that has ever been offered to the American public.

There will be a big demand—order early.

HERE is another Overland model. A brand-new car at a brand-new price.

Many people prefer a car that is smaller, lighter and more economical to run, but with the advantages of the larger and higher priced cars.

Model 75 is a comfortable family car with virtually all the advantages of the very large cars at a price which is well within your reach.

The price is only $615!

It has a powerful motor; electric starting and lighting system; high-tension magneto ignition; 104-inch wheelbase; cantilever springs; four-inch tires; demountable rims; streamline body design.

This season the Willys-Overland factory capacity has been increased to 600 cars a day.

This, in itself, explains our ability to give so much car for so little money.

It has demountable rims with one extra.

The tires are four-inch all around, because we believe in the advantage of large tires.

They insure greater mileage and comfort than can be obtained from the smaller size used on other cars of similar specifications.

The motor is four-cylinder, long-stroke en-bloc type, having a 3⅛-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. Horsepower is 20-25. It is of the most modern design.

It has high-tension magneto ignition. This is the kind used on the most expensive cars.

The large electric headlights have dimmers.

This car is very easy to handle. It responds quickly. Anyone in the family can drive it.

The electric switches are conveniently located on the steering column. This is the same arrangement used on the highest priced cars.

It has the easy working Overland clutch which any woman can operate. The pedals are adjustable for reach. The steering wheel is large and turns easily.

The brakes are large and powerful.

The rear springs are the famous cantilever type. These are probably the easiest riding and most shock-absorbing springs ever designed. With these springs riding comfort is assured.

It has a mohair one-man top.

In short, there is everything that makes this car up-to-date and comparable with many cars costing considerably more money.

You will be delighted when you see it. And when you ride in it you'll know instantly that this is your ideal of a modern automobile at your idea of a moderate price.

Other Overland models are—Model 83 five-passengers touring car $750; the famous Overland Six seven-passenger touring car $1145. All prices being f. o. b. Toledo.

See the Overland dealer in your town.

MARGARET READ.

Miss Margaret Read, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. George W. Read, and one of the most popular among the social buds who have not yet "come out," will make her first bow to Washington society Dec. 2. She will be presented at a tea dance given by Gen. and Mrs. S. B. M. Young, U. S. A., the former the grandfather of Miss Read.

"If I Could Have Legally Prevented Birth of Hopeless Baby, I Would Have Done It," Declares Dr. Haiselden

BY DR. H. J. HAISELDEN.
Written for The Sentinel.

The case of the Bollinger baby is a strong argument for birth control. The mother's condition was undermined by illness, had no vitality to give the child. She feared it would be subnormal, and expressed this fear as soon as the baby was born though she never saw it. She said: "I know there is something wrong."

If I could have legally prevented the birth of the child I would have done it. I am not her physician; I was not asked for advice.

Parents rendered defective, even temporarily defective, by disease, should prevent the birth of children. I am an advocate of birth control among defectives.

By letting this half alive baby die I have saved hundreds of human beings from suffering.

He could perpetuate the race though there is nothing else that he could do.

There'd be no power in his mind or body to help himself, yet he could breed his kind, and help people the world with defectives.

Sterilize defectives in this generation and we will have 50 per cent. less defectives in the next.

Sterilize defectives for three generations and we will have a nearly normal race.

"I LET MY BABE DIE BECAUSE I LOVED IT," ASSERTS MOTHER.

By Mrs. Anna Bollinger.

"I loved my baby and because I loved it, I let it slip painlessly out of this world rather than keep it here to live a life of ceaseless pain," declared Mrs. Anna Bollinger, of Chicago, a few hours after her baby, a defective, was allowed to die.

"I suffered to bring my baby into the world. I suffered to see it taken away again. But the suffering is mine.

"I saved my baby from a life that would be filled with humiliation and sorrow. If I was sure I would always be near him to watch over him I might not have consented to let him die. But how could I tell I would be spared to him, and without a mother's protection he would be a burden to the world.

"He is better out of the world!"

DR. HAISELDEN HAS TWO ADOPTED DAUGHTERS

Chicago, Nov. 20.—It was not because he is reckless with the lives of little children but because he loves them that Dr. Harry J. Haiselden let the Bollinger baby, a newly born defective, die rather than perform an operation that might have saved its life.

He wants the world to know this, he declared, shortly after the painless death of the tiny misshapen infant that has made him the center of a nation-wide storm of discussion.

And he wants the world to know that even though he is a bachelor, he has two adopted daughters upon whom he lavishes all the affection and care of a devoted father.

One is Beulah Hope Wesley, a pretty, curly haired baby of 17 months, the other is Dorothy Riggs, a strong, happy, romping girl of 15 years.

It was the same love and tenderness for children that prompted him to take these two waifs into his own life and make a home for them that led him to refuse to even try to save the little Bollinger baby, for the life of misery that it had in store for it—had it lived.

"I shall adopt more children from time to time. I shall try to give them a real home, for no one has seen more of the pitiful end of institutions for children than I have."

As he made this statement, Dr. Haiselden, branded by millions as a man without a conscience and a "murderer," and as a twentieth century humanitarian by many other millions, sat at a table in his comfortable residence in Diversey parkway.

DR. H. J. HAISELDEN

On each side of him sat his adopted daughters, Baby Hope carefully tucked in her high chair, while Dorothy, the older, was kept busy jumping up from her chair to answer the telephone, which was ringing incessantly with messages of praise and criticism.

"Ten years ago when 20 small orphan children were sent on from New York I secured homes for five of them. The one, a girl of 5, came and sat on my knee. I adopted her. That is Dorothy. She is now 15 years old and doing nicely. I hope to send her through high school and give her a year or two at college.

"Little Hope's mother abandoned her in the German-American hospital and so I took her to raise. She is 17 months old now.

"I have only my conscience as a guide," declares Dr. Haiselden. "Dr. Robertson, commissioner of health, asked me to operate just to clear the atmosphere, but after he had looked at the child he said it would have but one chance in a thousand to live, and I refused to recede one-sixteen thousandth of an inch from my position."

Where Eugenics Originated.

The theory of eugenics originated in ancient Sparta, in Greece. A child born to Spartan parents had no legal standing until its physical fitness had been passed upon by certain officials, who determined whether it should live or die. If it gave promise of developing into an able bodied citizen, capable of withstanding the intensive physical training in youth, preparatory to a service of arms, beginning about the age of 21, the child was permitted to live.

If the baby was weak and possibly defective its parents were compelled to turn it out on the mountains to perish or to dispose of it in other ways.

This practice also was followed by the Athenians, not so much as a measure in military efficiency, as a purely social one, to insure a strong, vigorous, virile country. And the Greeks continued for ages to be the most militant, unconquerable people in the world. There were few feeble minded and no cripples, save those wounded in war.

BIG GUNS MAY BE ENGULFED IN SNOW

Caution Required in Territory Where Italians and Austrians Clash.

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 30.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.—In the semi-circle from Trent to Trieste, where Austro-Germans and Italians are fighting for supremacy, military operations will be seriously affected by snow. Neither side dares to advance large guns which may be lost in a night, owing to a heavy snowfall.

On the Austro-Italian frontier where fighting is taking place at ten thousand feet above sea level over several miles of mountains where every little pass means a small battle, weather conditions and snow are important factors. On these mountains ordinary regiments, however brave, are practically useless as they cannot stand the climate and only Alpine troops on both sides are being utilized.

Since the beginning of October several feet of snow has fallen in the Swiss Tyrolese and Italian Alps above 9,000 feet and there is besides always the danger of an avalanche. Under these conditions Alpine warfare will be impossible even for a strong force. The men and mountain artillery are practically buried in deep snow in the higher Alps and the attack must be postponed until spring. Thus Italy feels secure from an invasion of Lombardy and Venetia during the winter and can employ her reserve forces for other spheres.

On the Isonzo(] however, it is another matter for the country around is a plain and there is little doubt that the Italian army will attempt to force its way to Trieste and Fiume via Tolmino and Goritza this winter. Daily the attacks on these two towns on the main railway are becoming fiercer. The Italians continue to bring up more heavy artillery which now is in a semi-circle around both cities.

LEISURE
Try and Enjoy Some Time for Yourself.

BY EDNA EGAN.

AS children we frequently heard our elders quote the old saying: "Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do." We heard it when we preferred to play tag outdoors rather than study school lessons; when we wanted to read "Rob Roy" and let somebody else do the dishes; whenever, in fact, we wanted to do something different from what our elders thought we ought to do. At least that's the way we felt about it—when we were youngsters.

And now we are told that "idleness breeds crime."

And it is probably true that if we were to turn the vast masses of workers out of their jobs and let them roam the world without anything to keep their noses to the daily grind, a good many of them would take up criminal pursuits to get some excitement out of life.

But I would like to modify the blunt statement that "idleness breeds crime." Let us rather say that idleness coupled with poverty is the great crime breeder. I am speaking of adults in this connection. Children are in a different class.

It's the idle man who has tramped the streets looking for work, who's come down to his last nickel, who perhaps has a dependent family waiting for the bread he hopes to bring them, who in time grows desperate and begins to take what nobody will give him in exchange for his labor.

One cannot say that the professional criminal is idle. He isn't. He is a mighty busy man. He has to be. He is probably putting in more licks of hard work and hard thinking than many an honest worker who complains of long hours and insufficient pay. He may have started life with criminal tendencies. He may have become contaminated by associates of his youth. He may have the get-rich-quick spirit and think he can accomplish luxuries and leisure by a quicker route than that of honorable toil, so he is willing to use all his energies and to labor overtime until he gets what he wants, worrying about getting caught at his game.

It is true that work is good for most of us. But so is leisure, and most of us don't have enough of the latter to get the best out of this one life.

There is another proverb that we sometimes overheard our parents quote (when they thought we weren't listening)—"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

For a good many years we had a creed that the only way to keep men or women good was to work them to death. We didn't consider ourselves virtuous unless we ended each day so toil-wearied that we had no ambition for anything but bed. When we had a holiday we didn't know how to use it, and either slept it away or did something that landed us in jail.

The doctors are telling us now that there is a fatigue poison; that we owe it to ourselves not to overwork. The great labor unions are demanding shorter hours and graded work, so that men and women workers shall not be overtaxed, and so that the few may not be overworked and underpaid at the expense of the many.

We are learning very, very gradually, that man was not created to labor eighteen hours out of the twenty-four in order that he may have the privilege of eating and sleeping. Very, very gradually we are being taught that we are partners in God's pasture and that, rich or poor, we have the right to take our share of sunshine and fresh air and idle time to enjoy them.

A fair measure of leisure in each day is necessary to cultivate sweetness and sanéness of soul, and the man or woman, boy or girl, so overworked that there is no opportunity for recreation never reaches the higher planes of being. Indeed, too much work has often been as much a breeder of crime as too much idleness.

I believe it is in one of Aesop's fables where we are told of the man who was so busy grubbing in the muck heap that he never had time to look up and see the crown above his head.

ODDS AND ENDS

MANY women realize the importance of the afternoon nap, which, to be of any value, should be taken in the quiet of her own sleeping room. One hesitates to crumple the regular bed pillow cover, hence the necessity of the slumber pillow. It should be as dainty and cool-looking as possible and have little embroidery except in the corners. Linen is the most satisfactory material, as it may be washed often and kept sweet and dainty. The cover may be made of a delicately tinted linen embroidered in white or white embroidered in white. The design should be worked in French embroidery, the flower petals lightly padded. The leaf sprays inclosed groups of French knots.

TO fringe with the least possible trouble, clip the edge of the crash or linen up from the bottom at distances of six to eight inches. Each clip should be the depth of the fringe you intend to make. The drawing out of these shorter threads will often prove less laborious and not so injurious to the material. It is well to know, also, that the drawing of linen threads is made easier if the dressing has first been removed. Brush a heavy lather made from good white soap along the space from which you wish to draw the threads. Let this dry in and it will disturb the original dressing so that the threads may be more readily drawn out.

NOW that veils are so fashionable, and every well dressed woman has half a dozen or more different sorts of veils to take care of, the resourceful needleworker is busily evolving convenient receptacles in which to keep them. One veil may be folded up, thrust through with a pin and tossed into the bureau drawer, but when there are six or seven veils to look after disaster will certainly follow this method, and the moment a veil becomes crushed and tangled up among half a dozen of its fellows its freshness and becomingness are ruined. The best way to keep a number of veils spick and span is to have a long veil case of cretonne or silk, in which the veils may be kept, each folded flat over a separate piece of cardboard. When the veil is removed from the hat, fold it immediately around the cardboard, which should be long enough to reach from one edge of the veil to the other. The case should be a little longer than the cardboard strips and a little wider than their width—say about five inches wide by eighteen long.

WHEN hot cake or waffle batter is left over, try adding flour to make a fairly stiff batter and a little sugar and flavoring. Drop by spoonfuls in a flat pan and top with a canned cherry or strawberry, bake in a quick oven. This makes excellent soft cookies for the children.

A USEFUL and simple test to try the heat of an oven is by means of a piece of white paper. If too hot, the paper when placed in the oven will blaze up or blacken. When the paper becomes dark brown, the color of meat pie crust, then the oven is suitable for small pastry. When light brown, the color of real nice pastry, then the oven is ready for pies, etc. When the paper turns dark yellow you can bake bread, large meat pies or large pound cakes. If the paper is just tinged, the oven is right for sponge cakes and meringues. The temperature of an oven may be easily reduced, while cooking, by placing a bowl of water in it.

DAME FASHION'S DECREES
New and Chic Ideas Are Now Paramount in Milady's Favor.

BY MRS. KINGSLEY.

ELABORATE evening gowns are developed in chiffon, the skirts being ruffled with taffeta, velvet or faille. Rich silver brocaded gros grains are also a favored material for evening gowns.

The tight-fitting seamed waists of the 1836 period worn with full cloth or satin skirts are a marked feature. Many of these were seen, the bodice of which being developed in brilliant colored velvet—turquoise, rose, old gold, etc.—with short full basques, and the skirts being of white satin or of spangled lace.

Black velvet waists are also shown with skirts of black gros grain, the skirts banded at the bottom with wide black velvet ribbon.

Very pretty and useful is a tea gown of weak tea color, in the finest and softest of chiffon finished broadcloth, finished with a quantity of tea colored lace, and completed by a high girdle of black jet interspersed with silver.

We have already mentioned the prevailing vogue for combining widely differing fabrics in one frock. It was specified among other combinations, the happy marriage of woolens and silks.

For the benefit of those who recall the presentation of such combination in former years, for those who fail to discern wherein its smartness resides, it must be stated that the combination recipe is reversed. Yesterday's formula specified the woolen fabrics as the material for the costume proper with silk as the ingredient used for embellishment. The prescription for the prevailing mode calls for silk as the frock fabric with woolen weaves for trimming.

Practically all of the Parisian style creators have sponsored this combination. One finds it employed in many of the imported afternoon frock models, while here and there it is noticeable among French coat suit models. In the last named, of course, the idea is not attempted in any but suits for after noon, church or reception wear. The silk coat suit has no place among the wardrobe's garments destined for strictly practical purposes.

French serge, chiffon gabardine and broadcloth—only the woolen fabric of soft, pliable weave lends itself to this mode. As for the silk partner of the combination—here one may indulge one's fancy to the limit. Taffeta is good, but it recognizes a formidable rival in satin. Faille is favored for afternoon costumes. The dignified severity of brocade is softened and modified by trimming of woolen weave.

"It's all very well for you slim women," sighed a plump person the other day after she had spent an afternoon in shopping, looking for a suitable and becoming frock, "but what is a woman of my proportion to do when she is asked to wear the present styles? Now, any one knows that full skirts, baggy coats, which flare at the hips and button up tight at the throat, will accentuate all the bad points of the person who is given to avoirdupois. I'm not holding forth for the hobble—that was as bad in its way for fat woman as the skirt which is four yards round at the hem—but I do decry the tendency of fashions to cater only to the slim woman and to refuse to recognize the fact that her fatter sister is just at much, if not more, in need of the right clothes.

"Now, take any one of the suits I saw this afternoon in the shops. All of them were ridiculously short and this is fatal to a fat woman. What she needs is height to take away from her breadth, and with a skirt cut to her ankles she has no chance of lengthening her inches. Then the coats invariably flare at the hips. This is usually a sore point with the plump person, and to exaggerate her size by a flare is a cruel trick of Dame Fashion. As for the 'choker' collar, so chic at the present moment, it is torment to the stout woman, who is, as a rule, short necked. It is quite impossible to force a five-inch upstanding collar onto a two-inch neck, and yet this is just what we poor plump women are asked to do.

"As for evening gowns, they include draperies at the hips, full flounces and other sartorical impossibilities for the woman whose chief aim in dressing is to disguse the fact that she tips the scales at 165 or 170 pounds. Now, what is one to do when all fashions are made for the slim and you happen to be proportioned on more generous dimensions?"

The answer is comparatively easy after you know it. It is simply this: Take the best features that fashion offers, adapt them to your needs, ignore the others, and you will appear well dressed.

ART OF SUCCESS

THE convictions that you are going to succeed is one that goes a long way to help in success.

"A successful business career is just one conviction after another," said a woman who has made an extraordinary success with a diet kitchen.

You cannot convince another of the value of what you have to give, be it service or goods, unless you have first convinced yourself. The conviction that you have a good thing is half the battle with a salesman or saleswoman, or the agent for a company.

The conviction that what you propose to do you can do well will get you a situation about as quickly as anything. And once secured you aren't liable to be chucked. For a conviction to be a real power must be based on the truth. Only the fool is convinced of something that does not exist.

But many a girl who has every right to the conviction that she is worth a good salary, that she has the goods to deliver and can prove it, lacks it. She doesn't believe in herself with sufficient energy to make any one else believe in her.

Convictions are the best sort of advertisement, and today we live by advertising. No successful business would last a day without the conviction of the men behind it that it's a corker. Many a poor business grows to be a fine one because its owner is convinced that the opportunity exists, and has the same strong conviction that he is the man to meet it.

Study up on convictions, girls. If you know you can do a thing well, have the courage to say so, and to say so in a way that will carry conviction to the other fellow. Don't be timid; be confident. We are told that faith will move mountains. Without it many a good thing has gone to waste. Faith in yourself is an essential to business success as a proper education for the job you are trying for; maybe more essential.

BEAUTY

BEAUTIFUL hands are a sign of good breeding, it is said, and certain it is that no one who neglects her hands can expect them to look well. Only regular attention and steady care bring forth any results in beautyfying the hands. The girl who works for her living need not despair, however, for if she will devote a few moments each night to her hands they will look almost as well as those of the lady of leisure.

Be careful first of all, as to how the hands are washed, in tepid water is the most satisfactory, for it is not too cold to remove the dirt and not too hot to redden the flesh. Constantly changing soap is very bad for the skin. A good soap should be selected and be used regularly without change. Be sure that all the soap is off the hands then dry thoroughly, so that the flesh is not left damp and moist.

Careless washing and imperfect drying are the reasons for more red, unsightly hands than anything else. The slightest dampness of the skin in cold weather will make the hands chap and crack. Hot water should not be used more than once a day at most for washing the hands, and then they should be rinsed in cold.

At night, before retiring, when the hands have been well washed and dried, rub in a fair quantity of a good cold cream or camphorated ice. Then powder them lightly with a fine talcum and slip on loose old gloves reserved for this purpose. This will whiten the hands and keep them soft and smooth even in cold weather.

Once a month is none too often to go to a professional manicurist, but, by watching attentively how the work is done, you may be able to do your manicuring at home the rest of the time. The monthly visit will just serve to keep the nails shaped rightly if you do them yourself once or twice a week. Invest in a good nail file, some emery boards, a cuticle scissors, a nail bleach, an orange stick, a polish and some powdered pumice stone. These are the necessary implements.

First soak the finger tips in warm water. Then clean in under the nails, first with the file and then with a bit of cotton rolled around the orange stick, moistened and dipped in the powdered pumice. This will clean out any stains. Soak the fingers again and file the nails to the desired shape. Then soak them for the last time and shove the cuticle back gently with the orange stick. Use the cuticle scissors (which should always be kept very sharp), to cut away all the loose cuticle and hang nails.

HOMEMADE DRINKS

Mix eight ounces of good cocoa with sufficient hot water (not boiling) to make a stiff paste. Then thin the paste with more hot water. Do not use too much water the first time in the hope that this will make a thin paste. If you do the mixture will be lumpy. The result will be the same as when flour is mixed with too much water at first. Next make a syrup with water and sugar in equal proportions. Rock candy makes a much richer syrup than ordinary sugar and is more delicate in flavor. Six pounds of the syrup to eight ounces of cocoa is the right proportion. To every pint of water allow one pound of sugar. Thus, to sweeten eight ounces of cocoa three pints of water and three pounds of sugar will be necessery. Put the syrup and cocoa paste into a vessel. Set on the fire and bring to a boil. Cook for three minutes, then the syrup is ready for use. It can be used not only as a drink, but also as a sauce for ice cream.

A home-made soda water is sure to be enjoyed. Boil together two pounds of granulated sugar, three pints of hot water, and two ounces of tartaric acid for five minutes. When cold stir in the beaten whites of three eggs and one ounce of any preferred flavoring. Bottle. When ready to use put one tablespoonful in a glass half full of water, add a scant quarter teasponful of baking soda, beat and drink while foaming.

THE KITCHEN

Deviled Crabs.

In the proportion of 12 boiled crabs add the following mixture: Rub one tablespoonful of butter and two of flour together in a sauce pan; add half a pint of milk and bring to a boil. Mash the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs and add to this sauce, and then all together to the crab meat; fill into the back shells, and cover with beaten egg, yolks and bread crumbs. Place in the frying basket. Plunge in hot fat and cook for one minute. Serve with tartare sauce.

Fish Pudding.

Flake one pound of cold boiled fish and place in a greased pie dish. Mix one ounce of flour, half a teaspoonful salt and quarter teaspoonful pepper to smooth paste with a little milk. Boil half pint of milk and pour over the paste, return to saucepan and boil up. Add one dessertspoonful of chopped parsley and pour over the fish. Mash one pound of potatoes with a little milk and spread smoothly over fish. Ornament and place in a quick oven to brown the top.

Sandwich Biscuit.

Boil one quart of milk and pour over one cupful of butter and lard, equal quantities. Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one of grated potato. When nearly cool stir in flour to make a thick sponge. Add a little salt with flour, then stir in the whites of two eggs, well beaten, and half a cake of compressed yeast. When very light, roll out, using as little flour as possible; cut into small biscuits and place in buttered pans. Set in a warm place to rise. When very light, bake quickly in a hot oven. Delicious for luncheon or tea.

Veal Loaf.

Take two pounds of lean veal, grind, put in kettle with just enough water to cover, simmer slowly three-quarters of an hour, add butter the size of a walnut, season with pepper and salt. Remove from fire, add the beaten whites of three eggs. Drop in three whole hardboiled eggs, put in deep bread tin, set in refrigerator, when ready to serve turn out on platter and cut in slices.

Lexington Sweet Potatoes.

Bake sweet potatoes until well done, cut a slice of the peeling from the side of each potato, scoop out the potato into a hot pan, mash well, with a large lump of butter, a dash of cinnamon, a pinch of salt, a little sherry wine to moisten, and, unless the potatoes are very sweet, a little sugar to taste. Return the mashed potato to the empty shells and place in the oven for ten minutes or until the mashed potato has browned.

Leopard Cake.

White part—White of five eggs, one-half teacupful of butter, three cupfuls of granulated sugar, two cupfuls of white flour, one cupful of sweet milk, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; vanilla flavoring.

Dark part—One cupful brown sugar, one-quarter cupful of butter, one-half cupful sweet milk, one-half cupful molasses, two cupfuls of flour, one egg, and one-half teaspoonful soda, spices to taste. Put into a greased pan by the spoonful. The different colors will give it a "leopard-like" effect.

Liver and Pepper.

Lay some strips of fat fresh pork in a small earthenware dish and place over the fire until they begin to brown, add half an onion sliced, two ripe peppers, also sliced (rejecting the cores), and two pounds of fresh pig's liver, deeply gashed and larded on top with more strips of pork. Dredge thickly with flour and fry slowly for ten minutes, turning the meat once. Scrape half a dozen carrots and cut strips lengthwise, place these around the liver with a handful of minced parsley or celery tops and salt and sweet herbs for seasoning, lastly add one cup of boiling water and half a glass of currant jelly; cover closely and bake in a moderate oven for two and one-half hours. This makes a most savory and satisfying dish from an inexpensive piece of meat.

Thanksgiving Eddytoriul

Well this is the last Bugle that will appear before next Thanksgivving Day arrives whitch it will do in a few days rain or shine snow or hail.

In other words before next wks Bugle apears on the scene as we might say Thanksgivving Day will of been past & went so if we be a going to dash off a eddytoriul on Thanksgivving Day now is the oppertoon minnit to dash it off or forever after hold our peace on the subjeckt as fur as regards this Thanksgivving Day in partickler.

Heretofore it has allus been our custum to write a Thanksgivving eddytoriul for the Bugle a few days in advance of Thanksgivving and we dont perpose to depart from this custum in this instants. If we did depart from it the Bugle wouldnt seem to be complete and we persoom our army of subscribers inclooding them as borrers the paper from their nabers to git outen of subscribing for the Bugle theirselfs and thus saving money would be turrible disappinted. Therefore here goes for a eddytoriul on Thanksgivving.

Being as we have wrote so menny eddytoriuls on Thanksgivving in the past we will take it for granted that even our most ignorunter subscribers is already familyur with whot Thanksgivving Day means & whot it is for therefore we will not discuss that faze of the questshion.

On the other hand we will discuss the follering faze of the questshion, namely, viz, to wit, I. E.; "What Have We To Be Thankful For If Ennythink?"

Well as for that crops in and around Bingville has been a leetle mite bettern ushual and we persoom our farmers and all them as erns their bread in the swet of their brows if we may be alowed the expreshion are thankful for that.

There was a good crop of corn and wheat and oats and potaters and vegetybels & as a result the mows is full of hay and the bins is full of grain and the cellers is full of vegetybels for whitch we all ort to be dooly thankful.

The farmers will sell some of their crops and receive therfore munney whitch they will spend for clothes et cettery to keep em from freezin to deth during the cold winter wether whitch has alreddy set in. For this reason let us be thankful. If a animul wassent sitch a dum critter the cattel & horses and sheep and cows would also be thankful for sitch bounteful crops whitch will keep them slick and fat during the winter munths when the ground is cuverd with snow but what can you expeckt from a horse or a ox or a sheep? Nothink, we anser.

Also there was a turrible good crop of fruit espeshially appels. All the appel trees in the orchards hereabouts was simply groanin under the weight of this delishus fruit and as a result the lims on some of the trees whitch wassent propt up broke down as a result.

Therefore the housewife ort to be thankful as well as the farmer becuz all this fruit give her a chanct to put up perserves and make jam and can all the garden truck she can and what she cant can she can give to her nabers whitch we hope she done or she can give em some of her cand truck if she be so generous minded whitch we persoom she aint becuz a woman sets a good eal of store by jellies and jams whitch she has swet over the hot stove over and she hates to give it away without no remoonerashion.

We persoom that every man hereabouts is thankful for the big crop of appels this yr becuz it enabeld him to make at least one barl of hard cider maybe two whitch will help to while away the long winter evgs and will also go good next harvest time in the hay field perviding there is enny hard cider left by that time whitch there probly wont be.

Personals

It is purty cold for this time of year.

Abe Withrow paid us $2 on subscripshion last week. Thanks Abe. Every little bit helps.

Wes Woodruff bought a barl of hard cider from Cy Hoskins recent, paying Cy $3 for same, whereas if Wes had of bought the cider of Cy before it turned hard it wouldn't of cost him but $1.50.

Miss Millie Hoskins will give a taffy pull at her home next week, date not fixed yet.

Lafe Whittaker had a narrer excape from nearly having his back broked on Tuesday. Lafe went behind his 2-year-old colt in the stable, and the colt kicked at him, barely missing him. Lafe now offers the colt for sale which he says is as gentle as a lamb.

Mrs. Hoskins is at present engaged in knitting Cy Hoskins, her husband, an extra supply of wool socks for winter use. Mrs. Hoskins has already knit 11 pairs which we would think would be enough socks to last Cy for quite a spell in the fuchure.

Miss Sarah Ann Whittaker and Clem Gookins are keeping company again after a little love spat.

Sime Henderson's wife's grandmother had another sick spell one day last week, but what can you expeckt of a woman who is in her 89th year. You couldn't expect her to be well all the time, could you? No!

They begin the game at about 6 o'clock and kept on playing until after 10, which is a hour later than Hen ushually closes the store.

It was also a hour later than the Deacon's bedtime, and consequently he napped off to sleep, and before he woke up Doc managed to change the checkers around on the board so that he won the game.

The Deacon has a suspishion that Doc tampered with the checkers when he was asleep, but he wouldn't say so to Doc, being as Doc is quick-tempered and very strong with his fists when he gits mad.

The Deacon has challenged Doc to play another game for the championship, but Doc says he don't consider that it's necessary for him to beat the Deacon twicet at checkers in order to be the champion of Bingville.

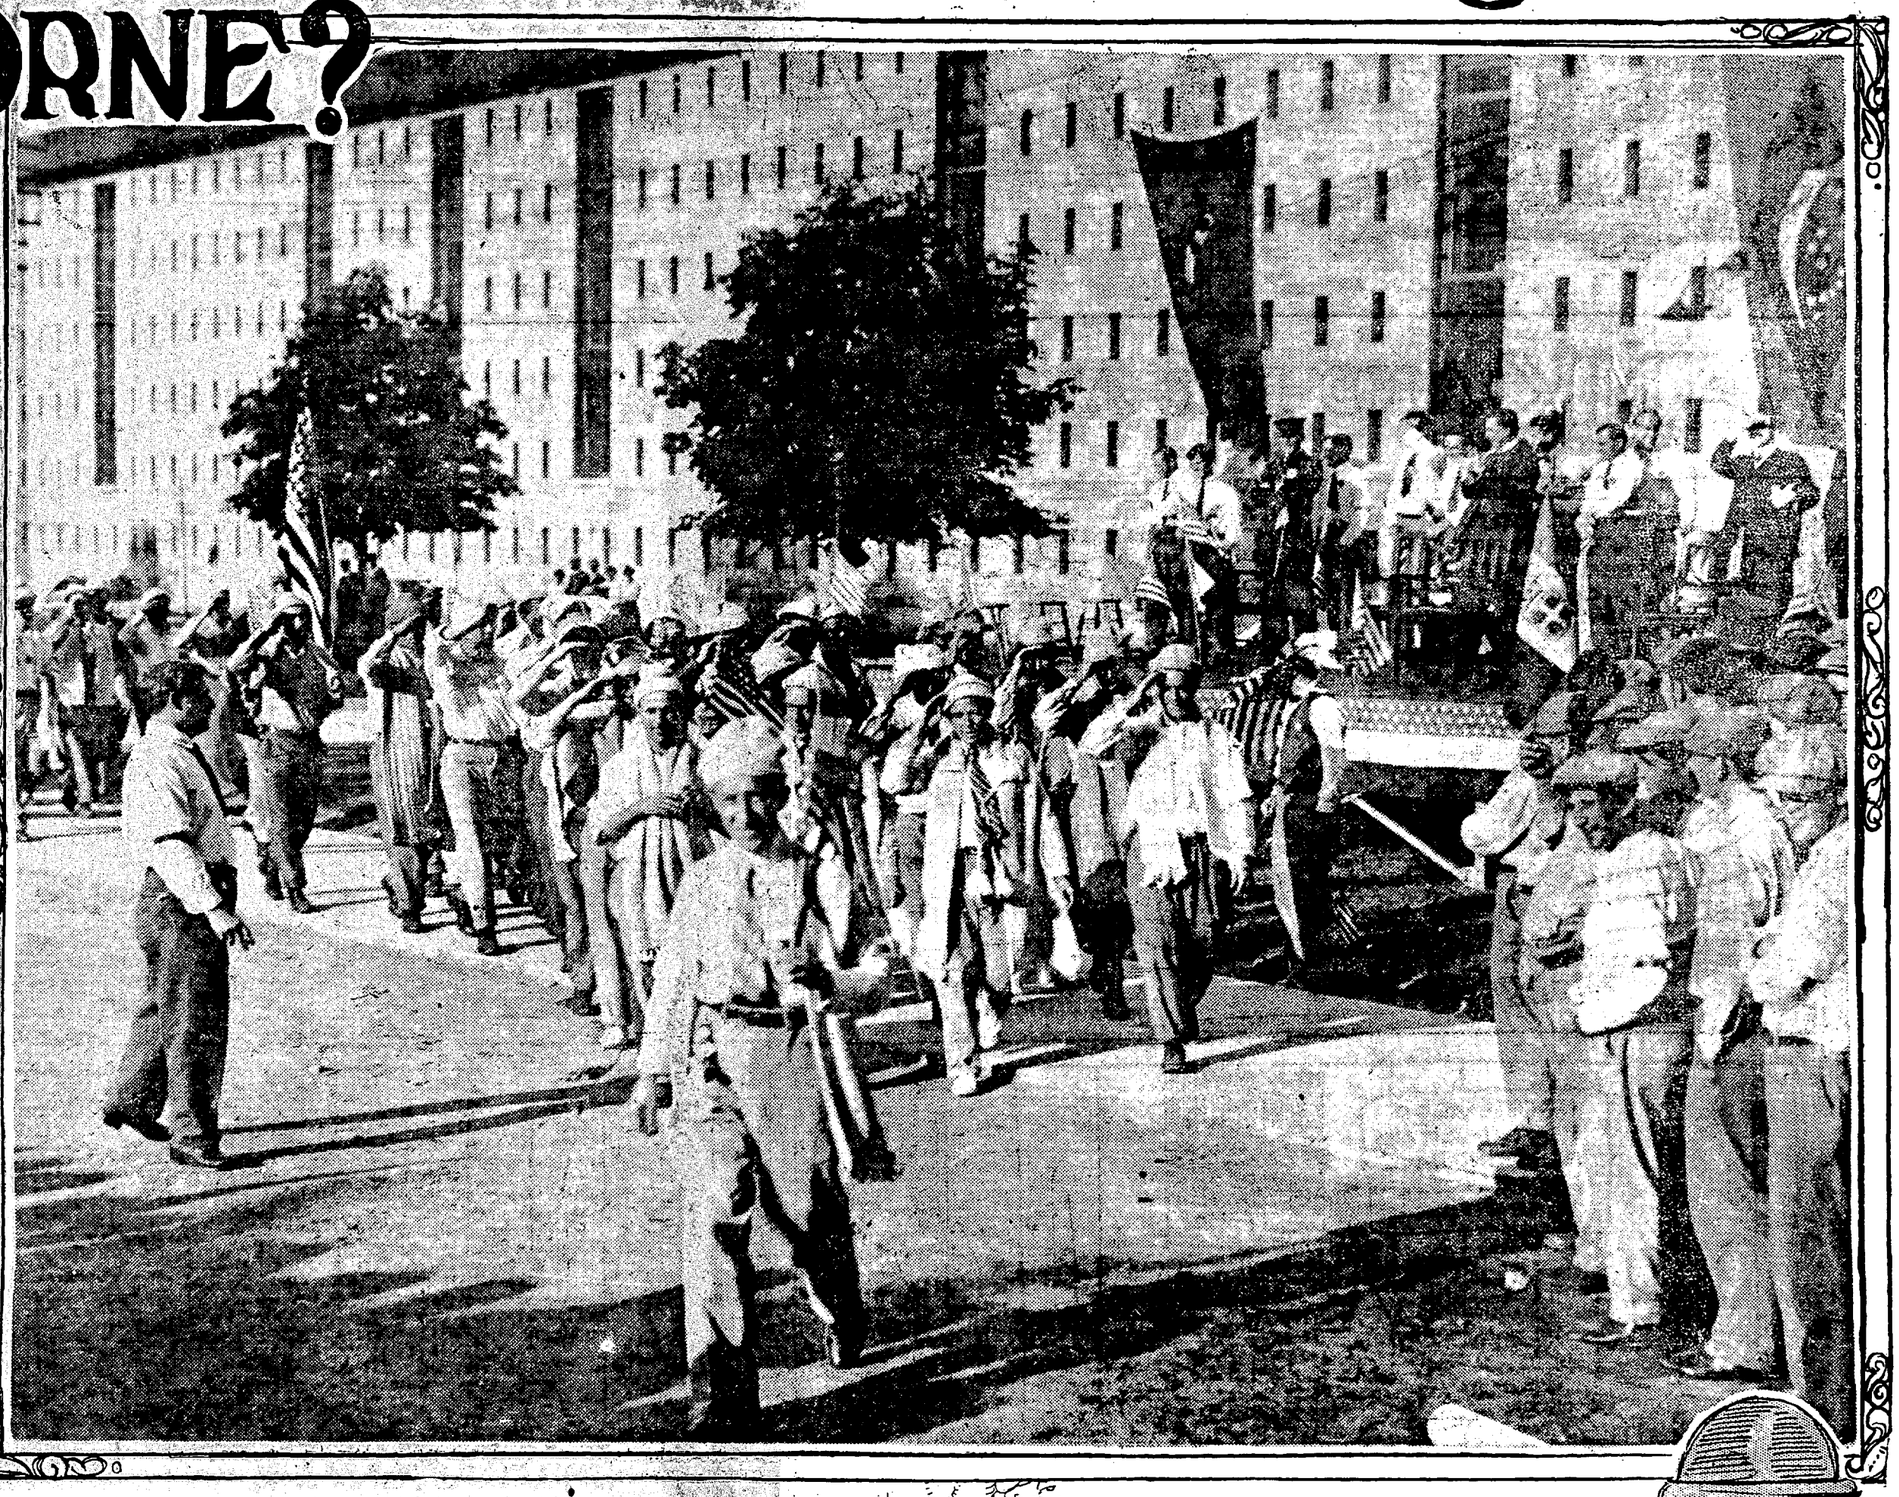
BINGVILLE.

WILL THE CRIMINAL SYSTEM GET OSBORNE?



The "system," that gigantic criminal and political force that has closed its hand on the heart of New York now is out to get Thomas Mott Osborne, warden of the Sing-Sing state penitentiary at Auburn, New York.

The forces of evil, the police who become criminals and the criminals who become police, the thugs and murderers who lurk in the dark of this city and the highwaymen who work boldly under apparent protection, and the politicians higher up, who, gain their political support and their daily bread through the criminal element, all are out for Thomas Mott Osborne for one reason—they have found he is straight.

For years they have known that the man who controls the greatest prison institution in the world was on the level, but they dared not attack him for that very reason. Even in a state like New York, where crime of all the diverse natures under the sun are daily the rule rather than the exception, the criminal element have dared not attack this man who went straight.

But now they are prepared to bring all their political influence against him for they have found his one weak point—he is a mental and moral giant, but he is a political Lilliputian. He has only honesty to back him—honesty and good deeds in the prison service, but he has incurred political enmity for he has refused to admit the power of political pull in the treatment of convicts and so the great criminal system has declared war upon him.

SHY ON POLITICS.

Thomas Mott Osborne has treated all men as equals in his conduct of this greatest of world penitentiaries. Regardless of pull or influence he has sought to make better men out of all of his charges. But he failed to realize that those humanitarian actions that have won the approval of the world at large and have transformed Sings-Sing from the worst into the best prison in the United States, hurt him politically. In other penal institutions the office of warden is a political one and it is the political duty of the head to see that the political favorites get the better of all things and that after the memory of their crimes have died down in the public gaze, that they be recommended for parole.

It had been a former custom of Sing Sing to treat prisoners of political backing with a great deference, while those without pull were subjected to all the hardships.

Men from the depths did not object going to the penitentiary. That was part of the system. When New York reads the papers and is informed of a crime it calls upon the police for a victim to expiate that crime. The police are compelled to get the perpetrators, lock them up and secure their conviction, all of which is with the consent of the criminal himself and in deference to his realization that in New York there must be some prisoner and convict for every crime committed.

POLITICAL PRISONER.

So in past years the yeggmen, the highway robbers, the burglars and the pickpockets went to the penitentiary after all had been arranged with their political backers and men who profited from their crimes, that they were to be given the best of treatment while in prison and that they be paroled on recommendation of the warden as soon as the public forget their particular offense to gaze upon some more offensive crime.

Only prisoners without money or political backing were to feel the full vengeance that Sing Sing then bestowed on the less fortunate of its inmates.

Finally there came to Sing Sing an honest warden—a man who believed that prisons were meant to reform and not break men—to make better citizens of them and not change them into the beasts that under bitterest training would become the foes and the prey of society.

OSBORNE'S PRINCIPLES.

Osborne went to the prison with the idea that all men are born and remain free and equal and that their incarceration is for mental and not for physical punishment? He changed the old system. His rules were stringent. Guards, who before had gone about with the fear that sooner or later their skulls would be crushed with a blow from behind, were disarmed at his order and not allowed to carry concealed weapons.

Corporal punishment ceased. Osborne found that it was necessary only when men had nothing in prison life to look forward to—when abuse and attack was their only punishment and when attack and abuse was their only reward for being good.

He gave the men liberty in the prison yard. He was one of the first in the country and perhaps in the whole world to give his subjects recreation. He introduced to them the great national game of baseball that brought to the convicts a temporary mental respite that took them soaring beyond those dread gray prison walls and left them during the excitement with the one great emotion—that all were just ordinary human beings, with human hearts and human minds, and with those forgotten gray walls as the only thing that barred them from association with their fellow men.

Did the plan take? Nothing could have been more popular even if the warden had ordered the walls torn down and had given those men freedom to depart. There was something left in life for them. The warden had given it to them. From a mental viewpoint he had reversed those dreary walls that before had sheltered so much sorrow and misery for men without political influence.

A REMARKABLE GATHERING.

Warden Osborne demonstrated to his charges that the outside world was not protected from them—that they were protected from the great outside world, from dishonest men who contaminated and made criminals of those about them and from the police who made criminals of the innocent by persecution and not by prosecution.

There in the prison enclosure with the daily ball game before them the convicts became happy and it is even said to this day that men—many of them—would go back to Sing Sing if they were allowed to rather than face the outer world. In this connection it may be called to mind that several months ago a number of men that might be termed "ex-convicts," in former days but now under the Osborne system are successful business men in New York, gathered together in a great New York hotel and with their former warden and their perpetual friend—Thomas Mott Osborne—as their guest gave a banquet in celebration of the kindness that had been their reward while in Sing Sing—the kindness that sent them back into the world with the object of making successes and not with the object of paying back society with all their vengeance for their enforced incarceration.

When Thomas Mott Osborne became warden of Sing Sing he was a very wealthy and influential man in New York. He wrote his associates and got them to take his discharged prisoners and make men of them, sending the defaulting bank cashier to bank upon his return to the world and sending the embezzling clerk to a good office position when the man left the gates of Sing Sing. It takes a bit of persuading to get a banker to take a former thief into his office as a trusted clerk but Thomas Mott Osborne succeeded in doing this and it is said that he offered to pay from his own wealth for anything that the men might take.

CONVINCES HENRY FORD.

He convinced Henry Ford of his absolute success in reforming criminals and the millionaire left Sing Sing with the promise that he would give employment to every man released from the penitentiary and Osborne never has failed to take advantage of this offer, just as he has sent his men forth into the business life of New York with his personal guarantee that they would make good and that if they didn't he would make good any amount they might embezzle.

Osborne also reached the hearts of the prisoners through another and perhaps a more effective means than through granting them their natural desire for recreation. As an experiment he found what everyone from policemen to prison warden knows—that a convict without sweets is dead heart and soul.

No more severe punishment can be meted to a man who is confined in a cell than to deprive him of some sort of sugar. In many penitentiaries it is one form of the perpetual punishment to deprive the men of sweets and it is in such prisons that murders, outbreaks and other crimes are more frequent. In such places a man will treasure a bit of sugar wrapped up in paper and hidden in his waist, more dearly than he would his life. It seems his whole sustenance—it is that bit of sweetness that saves his mind from turning into the absolute blank of insanity.

Osborne ordered that the prisoners be given sirup for breakfast. The grapefruit, the sliced orange, the dainty browned toast and the luscious bacon that are part of the morning menu of well regulated families would have no appeal to the convict if he were given his choice between them and his longing for sweets.

TEACHING HIS CHARGES.

So with this and other innovations the new warden won the hearts of the men under him. He taught them useful trades. He induced a big public corporation to install telegraph service in the prison and put his men at the key to learn telegraphy. Prior to that time there had been but one wire into the prison. This was and still is manned by a regular union operator. But the click of the key became so attractive and alluring to the prisoners that Osborne finally persuaded the telegraph company to install a number of keys with which his men might experiment.

There was a complaint from several sources that "Osborne was teaching convicts to become telegraph operators," and deprive honest men of a living. The telegraph company was so convinced of Osborne's sincerity and of the good he was doing for the inmates through the installation of this service that there was never an order issued to take out the receiving and sending apparatus, although in several strikes one of the main basis of attack was that the telegraph company was making operators of convicts and that these men were to take the places of fathers and more deserving men when they left prison.

New York and its underworld has long been active and even efficient in the matter of ending the careers and activity of men who sought to reform it. It held Anthony Comstock, the post office inspector and reformer by his own right and by right of his own money, that he used to back his crusades, up to the ridicule of the world. The newspapers ridiculed Anthony Comstock for his attitude toward certain papers and in this first burst of laughter from an unthinking public the efficacy of this man's work for over a quarter of a century was forgotten.

So all has been arranged for the political end of Warden Osborne unless the clamor of the public itself holds him in his present niche of country wide fame. Otherwise the greatest men of the state itself must yield to the clamor that he must be put out of public life.

The criminals of New York intend to show him through the little green door of political death.

Go to Church Tomorrow

Why should a young man go to church? That is like asking: Why should he breathe? The church is the breathing spot for the best in a man. Physical suffocation is of small consequence compared to spiritual suffocation. A wise young man will not sell his birthright in God's family for a Sunday morning automobile ride. If fresh air makes a young man glad he's alive physically, the Breath of Heaven will certainly make him not only glad, but thankful, that he's alive spiritually. — — — Merton A. Albee, Secretary of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

ALLIES TOO LATE TO SAVE THE SERBIANS

Today's War News Given in Summary

Important progress for the Teutonic forces invading Serbia is reported by Berlin today, The Serbian line of retreat was further narrowed by the taking of Sienica, nearly half way down the Montenegrin frontier line, while further east Field Marshal von Mackensen's forces occupied Raska. The Berlin report announces the capture of 2,800 Serbians and four cannon.

A London News agency correspondent at Berne telegraphs that it is understood in diplomatic circles that a declaration of war on Germany by Italy is imminent.

Allied monitors again have bombarded the Belgian coast, the wireless and cable versions of Berlin statement differing as to whether Ostend or Westende was the point attacked.

Italian guns continue to sweep the Austrian defenses of Gorizia in an intense bombardment.

The comparative quiet prevailing on the western battle front is indicated by the Paris report today, which mentions only artillery exchanges and grenade fighting.

A wireless message said to have been sent by the Italian steamer Verona, in the Mediterranean, reported the steamer was being pursued by a large submarine, a dispatch from Madrid states. The Verona is owned by the company which owned the Ancona, the liner recently sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean.

The Italian official report states that the Austrian air raid on Udine resulted in the death of 12 persons and the wounding of 27 others. In the air attack on Verona four persons were injured. It is declared that the material damage done was unimportant.

London, Nov. 20. (3:30 p. m.) -The correspondent at Berne, Switzerland, of the Central News telegraphs: "Diplomats understand that an Italian declaration of war on Germany is only a matter of hours."

Although no official confirmation has been received of the report that the Bulgarians have captured Monastir in southwestern Serbia, little hope is felt in England that the announcement is premature. Accepting it as true, the impression is growing that the entente allies arrived too late to give any service to the Serbians.

The only thing certain in regard to the plight of Serbia is that its military situation is going from bad to worse. In the north the main Serbian armies are giving way slowly before the battering Austro-German forces, which probably would move more rapidly if weather conditions were better. It is established that the Bulgarians are in Prilep and at least have made Monastir untenable. The Anglo-French armies based on Saloniki seem to do no better than hold their positions.

Optimistic feeling in regard to the diplomatic situation in Greece still persists in England. The reasons for this optimism, however, continue to be obscure.

The weather seems to have intervened again in Russia. Little activity is re-

SEEKING TO HEAL BREACH

Much Bitterness Develops in Debate at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Nov. 20.—The problem of attempting to heal a breach in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor growing out of the presentation late last night of a resolution calling for the suspension of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners is before the concluding session of the thirty-fifth annual convention today.

The union in question is the second largest international union in America. Had the resolution been adopted it would have meant the loss of 200,000 members of the federation and threatened the disruption of the organization, according to officials. After a debate a substitute resolution not calling for expulsion but offering a means of reaching an understanding was adopted.

The resolution to withdraw the charter of the Carpenters' union was presented by the adjustment committee. It was the result of failure of the carpenters' organization to refrain from alleged encroaching upon jurisdiction awarded the machinists coupled with the carpenters' union's attitude toward the federation.

In the course of the debate Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, said: "We are not safe from disintegration and failure if we lose sight of the ideals of human brotherhood."

Andrew Furuseth, secretary of the Sailors' union of the Pacific coast, declared his belief that the Carpenters' union was deliberately seeking to compel the federation to withdraw the charter. During the hour in which charges were hurled at them and speaker after speaker taunted them with bad faith, the big delegation of carpenters sat silent. The Carpenters' union was accused of repairing, dismantling and setting up machinery in buildings in various cities, and with claiming the right to do such work in defiance of the express commands of the federation convention last year.

The federation's program today calls for the presentation of more than fifty resolutions and for the election of officers. It is believed no candidate will be named in opposition to President Gompers for re-election.

STRONG FOR NATIONAL TICKET FOR MOOSERS

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 20.—Two leaders of the progressive party—one in state and one in nation—told a conference of Missouri members who gathered here today that the progressives should have a national ticket in 1916. One of the speakers, George W. Perkins, chairman of the national executive committee, said the only thing for the party to do was to continue its organization and have a ticket in 1916, while the other—Judge Albert D. Norton, of St. Louis—said he was in favor of selecting Roosevelt and Johnson as standard bearers for another national struggle.

MERCHANTS AGREE TO HELP.

The committee appointed by the electrical men to call upon the merchants from Jefferson street north on Calhoun street, with the request to donate a part of their show windows to an electrical display on December 1, 2, 3 and 4 has met with great success. Without exception the merchants have agreed to assist in every way possible.

35-POUND TURKEY FOR WILSON THANKSGIVING.

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson will take Thanksgiving dinner with his family and his fiancee, Mrs. Galt, at the white house. A thirty-five pound turkey, fattened by a South Trimble clerk of the house of representatives, on his Kentucky farm, will be shipped Monday for the occasion and it is said the Trimble turkey actually will be served on the white house table. This distinction is claimed annually for a flock of a dozen or more from all parts of the country.

20,000 People Rode Cars on Friday, Says Company

According to figures given out Saturday by officials of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, a total of 20,000 people road the street cars in Fort Wayne on Friday and about the same number on Thursday, notwithstanding the strike that has been in progress since September 27. Labor leaders declare the traction officials' figures are about 10,000 too high.

Because of the greatly increased number of passengers on the cars, members of the car men's union have established systematic picketing on all the principal street corners in the city. The picketing will be done throughout the entire day and at night and those assigned to picket duty will be armed with pencil and small scratch pads and the names of those riding will be jotted down and reported at the headquarters of the Federation of Labor. It is understood that a systematic effort will be made to keep the people from using the street cars.

Four more cars were stoned Friday night as follows: No. 214 and No. 215, on the Pontiac-Lakeside line; No. 180, on East Creighton-Hoffman line, and No. 199 on the West Main-Lewis line. Car No. 216 came into the barns Friday night with a badly bent trolley pole, indicating that the trolley rope had been tampered with.

The Federation of Labor committee appointed to investigate the legal side of the auto bus line proposition will make its report Monday night at a meeting of the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor.

Mrs. Robert Mercer sustained serious injuries to her right hip and Mrs. Verba Scherer a bad gash above her right eye when the Ford automobile in which they were riding was struck by an inbound interurban car on the Huntington line at Ewing and Main streets at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Leslie B. Mercer, who was driving the car, which was occupied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mercer, sister, Mrs. Scherer, and daughter, and a Mrs. Monroe, all of Poe, Ind., became confused because of the great number of jitney buses and automobiles, a city car and an interurban car which met at the street corner at about the same time. He succeeded in dodging the automobiles only to drive directly in the path of the big interurban car. The Mercer car was badly damaged. Mrs. Robert Mercer, the most seriously hurt, was removed to the St. Joseph hospital in the police ambulance and was later taken to her home by her son.

City Cars in Collision.

As the result of an open switch in front of the interurban station on West Main street Lewis street car No. 514 collided with westbound Jefferson street car No. 74 at 10:30 o'clock Friday evening. The glass in the front vestibule of the Lewis street car was shattered as were several panes on the left side. Four passengers were on the Lewis street car and one woman on the Jefferson street car. No one was injured. A. E. McKee, motorman, and W. C. Jester, conductor, were in charge of the Jefferson street car, and C. Crakes, motorman, and Close, conductor, of the Lewis street car.

Another Accident.

An automobile driven by E. W. Smith, 1021 Degroff street, and a horse and buggy driven by Mrs. Leonard Stolte, of Washington township, collided at Main street and Maiden lane, Friday afternoon, one of the rear wheels of the buggy being badly damaged. No one was hurt.

EXPIRES FOLLOWING A VERY BRIEF ILLNESS

turned home Friday afternoon, suffering from an attack of acute indigestion which caused his death Saturday morning. He was fifty-two years of age and resided at 333 East Berry street.

Wednesday afternoon he took sick at Franklin, Ohio, and seeing that his condition was getting worse, he asked to be taken home. The members of the family knew nothing of his illness until the ambulance drove up in front of the residence Friday. His condition at this time was regarded as critical. Only a few of his many acquaintances knew of his condition, and the news of his death comes as a great shock.

The deceased was born and raised in Fort Wayne, and after finishing his work at the St. Paul's parochial schools he entered the Rurode Dry Goods Company's store where faithful work soon earned for him the position of traveling salesman. Twenty years ago he left their employment and accepted a position with the George DeWald Company store. He was one of their best salesmen, having as his territory, Indiana and Ohio.

Besides the grief-stricken wife he is survived by a daughter, Miss Helen at home; one brother, William Grage, of this city; and two sisters, Mrs. A. I. Hattersley and Mrs. Henry Lageman, both of this city. Mr. Grage was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran church, of the B. U. V. and of the traveling Men's Protective association.

AGED FARMER DIES ON A TROLLEY CAR

Overexerting himself in running to catch an interurban car at stop No. 15, six miles out on the Bluffton line of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, William Dafforn, 75 years old, a well known farmer residing northwest of Sheldon, passed away Saturday morning about 9:30 o'clock, soon after taking his seat in the car.

Dafforn was about twenty-five rods away when he saw the car approaching some distance down the track and by running as rapidly as he could for a man of his advanced years, succeeded in reaching the crossing in time to board it. He was completely exhausted and soon after taking his seat in the front part of the car told those about him that he was ill. He soon lost consciousness and died before the car had reached the city limits.

Passengers on the car did everything they could to revive him and when the car reached the office of Dr. E. H. Underwood, 2610 Broadway, it was stopped and Dr. Underwood was summoned. He pronounced the man dead.

The body was brought to the interurban station and after an examination by Deputy Coroner R. B. Garmire was ordered removed to the Peltier undertaking parlors. He was apparently in the best of health when he left home early Saturday morning and had intended to spend the day here attending to a number of business matters. Among those on the car who knew the deceased were: John Woods, residing on rural route 14 out of Ossian; George Moses, Albert Harber and Enoch Smith, all of Yoder.

The deceased was a veteran in the civil war, having served with the Fifteenth Indiana Volunteer infantry. He was also a member of Sion S. Bass post and the Union Veteran Legion. He is survived by a wife, four sons and three daughters. For years he was a veterinarian and was well known in the southwestern part of the county.

COMPANY IS FORMED TO DRILL FOR OIL

Two thousand acres of land have been leased in Jackson, Maumee and Monroe townships by the Baldwin Oil, Gas & Mining company and within the next few days a number of oil wells will be started. John H. Tillman and Louis Centlivre own the controlling interest in the new company, which will be incorporated within the next week with a capital stock of at least $20,000. A dozen or more men are interested in the project.

In 1900 and 1902 wells were operated for a short time on a portion of the same territory, leased by the Baldwin company. Those interested at that time sold out to the Standard Oil company and the wells were shut down within a few weeks.

It is recalled that twenty years or more ago oil drilling operations were conducted near Baldwin, and that oil was discovered, but the field was never developed. Two men lost their lives as the result of burns in flaming oil which caught fire from an engine after it had spurted far into the air.

New York, Nov. 20.—Inspectors of the state bureau of industrial hygiene began today an examination of 200 shops, most of them in the lower east side of this city, as a precaution against anthrax. Cat farms on Long Island and other sections near by will be examined and any infected animal found will be killed.

NEAR 50,000 SEE CONTEST

HARVARD QUICKLY STARTS SCORING

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20.—The football elevens of Harvard and Yale universities played their annual contest here this afternoon before an assembly of spectators which just fell short of 50,000. The huge horse shoe shaped stadium had been made elliptical by the addition of temporary wooden stands at the open end and long before the teams lined up every available foot of space held its share of cheering humanity.

Harvard won the toss and chose the west goal with the wind at their backs. The wind blew the ball off the mound twice before Guernsey could kick off for Yale. Watson caught the ball on Harvard's ten yard line. Mahan kicked on the first down and soon was forced to punt again on his own 5 yard line. A series of Yale rushes and end runs took the ball to Harvard's 20

New York, Nov. 20.—Fresh and dramatic details of what happened in the Mediterranean on the morning of Nov. 7 when the Ancona was torpedoed by a submarine flying the Austrian flag were brought to New York today by the Italian steamer Giuseppe Verdi, here on her maiden voyage. The Verdi heard the Ancona's wireless death cry, flashed it on to shore stations which the feeble batteries of the sinking steamer could not reach and then rushed, at full speed, to the Ancona's aid, her boats swung outward, her passengers lined on the deck and her officers momentarily expecting a death blow themselves from submarines known to be lurking nearby. The Verdi steamed as near as she dared to the spot where the Ancona went down but her lookouts saw nothing. Then turning swiftly she fled for Gibraltar and security. Luigi Moroni, the youth at the key of the Verdi's wireless told the story here today.

ASKS REPUBLICANS TO DISCUSS DEFENSE

Mann Says He's Willing to Consult, But Not to Take Orders.

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson today asked Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, republican leaders of the senate and house, respectively, to confer with him before the opening of congress on legislation for national defense. The time of the conference will be arranged to suit the two leaders.

Just before the opening of congress the president will confer with republican members of the senate and house military and naval committees. When he sees Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann the president will discuss other legislative questions.

While it was being made known at the white house that the republican leaders had been invited to a conference Representative Mann, who was at the state department asking for protection of American planters who have been driven out of Mexico, made a statement on the president's proposal.

"The president may give orders to the democrats in congress," said he, "but he certainly cannot call me to the white house to give orders. I am perfectly willing to consult with him but not to go up there to be told to do what he has decided upon. Everybody is for preparedness of course, but I am not willing to say what attitude the republicans in the house will take toward the administration's defense program until I know just what it is from the documents, not from the newspapers. I am for all defense preparation that is necessary. I believe in treating such an issue as a non-partisan question."

Mr. Mann said he had heard that the president had written a letter to him but that he would not discuss it until after he had seen it.

CONDUCTOR TIBBLES GETS A STIFF DOSE

Fine and Penal Farm Term Penalty Appealed to Higher Court.

Frank Tibbles, employed as a conductor on the city car lines, was found guilty in the city court Saturday of assault and battery on Theodore Bruick, a 17-year-old lad, son of J. T. Bruick, 1805 East Creighton avenue, and was fined $25 and costs and fifty days at the state penal farm. Attorney S. L. Morris, who appeared for Tibbles, appealed the case to the circuit court, bond of $300 being furnished at once. The Bruick lad was found not guilty of assaulting Tibbles. The trouble occurred Sunday, Oct. 17, when Tibbles left his car at the east end of the Creighton avenue line to take a switch hook from some boys. A fight followed in which Tibbles fractured young Bruick's skull with the switch hook and in turn had his own fractured by a brick thrown by Bruick. After regaining his car Tibbles got a revolver and fired three shots at the group of boys. The testimony of John Palmer, conductor on the car, showed that Tibbles had gone out of his way to look for trouble.

City Officials Ousted After Strike Activity

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 20.—Louis Loebt, city immigration commissioner, and Louis Rippich, his assistant, both Hungarians, resigned today, as a sequel to their activity in the strike of 2,200 workmen at the war order plant of the Theodor Kundtz company here into which bribe charges had been injected. Mayor Newton D. Baker accepted their resignations, but would neither affirm nor deny that he had requested them to step out.

Baker conducted an investigation of the affair. Albert Henye, strike leader, first preferred charges of undue activity against Loebt, who replied by charging that Henye solicited a $6,000 bribe to "sell out" the strikers and end the tie-up. This was said to have taken place at a secret meeting, a record of which was made by a private detective with a dictagraph. Baker was told later that Loebt had said he was to get $2,000 of the $6,000 which was to go to Henye. Loebt admitted he said it but declared it was in jest.

Rippich was a messenger sent by Loebt to persuade Henye to attend the meeting. Henye has denied soliciting a bribe and has resigned the strike leadership to defend the charges.

SUBMARINE IN HOT PURSUIT OF VERONA

Malriad, Nov. 20.—(Via London, 1:30 p. m.)—A telegram received here today gives a wireless message said to have been sent out by the Italian steamship Verona, stating that she was being pursued by a large submarine with two periscopes.

According to this telegram the submarine is accompanied by a steamer.

The position of the Verona was given as latitude 40, longitude 6, off Cabopalo.

The telegram was received from the town of Soller, on Majorca island, in the Mediterranean, off the Spanish coast, 110 miles south of Barcelona.

The Verona was scheduled to sail from Genoa Nov. 9, touching at Naples Nov. 10 and Palermo Nov. 11, on her way to New York. No word of her sailing, however, has been received.

Latitude 40, longitude 6, is a point in the western Mediterranean about 110 miles west of Sardinia. The Verona is owned by the Italia Societa Di Naviga Zione, a Vapore, which also owned the Ancona, sunk recently by a submarine in the Mediterranean. The Verona has been engaged for several years in passenger service between New York and Italian ports. She is 8,261 tons gross, 482 feet long and was built in Belfast in 1908.

HAD RECEIVED NO WORD.

New York, Nov. 20.—Hartfield Solari & Co., local agents for the steamship Verona, reported to have been chased by a submarine in the Mediterranean said today they had not received notice that the Verona had sailed from Italy, although the line's schedule called for the steamer to leave Genoa Nov. 9, Naples the following day and Palermo, the last Italian port, on Nov. 11.

Mr. Hartfield said, however, that the present schedule had been made up some time and as the Verona did not sail from New York until Oct. 21, five days behind schedule, he thought it possible the steamer had not sailed from Genoa until Nov. 14 or 15.

yard line where Bingham fumbled. Mahan kicked again. Bingham muffed the punt and Harte grabbed the ball and dashed 33 yards for a touch down. Mahan failed to kick goal. Score, Harvard, 6; Yale, 0.

Guernsey Out by Injury.

Guernsey kicked off to King and Harvard kicked on the third down. Cowen got the ball on Yale's 33 yard line. Delayed passes and simple line smashing plays enabled Harvard to march to Yale's ten yard line. In tackling King outside the line, Guernsey was hurt by being thrown up against the fence. His right arm was injured and Chatfield Taylor went in for him. Mahan on a fake kick took the ball to Yale's 3 yard line and then went over for a touch down. He kicked goal. Score, Harvard, 13; Yale, 0.

Way kicked off to Boles on Harvard's ten yard line. The Crimson back went to Harvard's 42 yard line before he was thrown. Harvard had the ball on Yale's 47 yard line when the period ended with the score 13 to 0, Harvard.

Beginning the second period King, Mahan and Harte, with some deceptive plays, soon advanced the ball to Yale's 15 yard line. Nearly every Harvard play seemed good for four yards. A fake kick followed by a delayed pass enabled Mahan to go over for Harvard's third touch down. Mahan kicked goal. Score: Harvard 20, Yale 0.

Still Piling 'Em Up.

Mahan kicked off to Bingham on Yale's 45-yard line, who was thrown on the 24-yard line. Scovil, Yale's famous back, ran on the field and was wildly cheered. Wilson punted to Mahan on Harvard's 30-yard line. Harvard began rushing. On the first line upon Harvard's 45-yard line King was given the ball on a delayed pass. He eluded the entire Yale team and scored Harvard's fourth touchdown. Mahan kicked goal. Score: Harvard, 27; Yale, 0.

Mahan kicked off to Taylor on Yale's 15-yard line. The ball was run back to the 33-yard line. Scovil and Wilson were playing like demons but could make little impression on the sturdy Harvard defense. The period ended after Wilson punted to Mahan on Harvard's 47-yard line. The crimson captain ran the ball back seven yards. Score end first half: Harvard, 27; Yale, 0.

SEEMS TO BE UP TO M'COMBS TO GET OUT

Democratic Chairman Will Probably Be Superseded Very Soon.

By Gilson Gardner.

Washington, Nov. 20.—William F. McCombs cannot remain as chairman of the democratic national committee. He is out of sympathy with the president and the entire administration. It is an open secret that his resignation will be forced before the next national convention. The name of Fred Lynch is generally mentioned as his successor, but whether this is authoritative or not is doubtful. The one thing certain is that McCombs must go. The chairman of the national committee has embarrassed the administration in many ways, as for example, recently when he announced in an interview his opposition to the seaman's law and his recommendation that congress repeal it. In the face of a flat declaration in the democratic platform in favor of the seaman's law and the action of President Wilson in signing the bill after hearing delegations representing the ship interests in opposition to it, this is not easily explained. It has long been evident that certain interests have felt that they could use McCombs and the latter's willingness to be used has been a great embarrassment to the administration. The end is now in sight.

That Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, is bidding for the prohibition nomination is indicated by the announcement that Borah has come out for prohibition by federal amendment. This indicates how big a factor prohibition is coming to be in national as well as local politics. Borah hoped to be the compromise nominee of the standpat republicans. The latter have not encouraged this hope and now it is evident that Borah is maneuvering to secure the prohibition nomination with an idea that he could poll many progressive and republican votes in addition to the prohibition following. This would make him a formidible factor in the presidential race.

William J. Bryan may come out for federal amendment for securing woman suffrage. This is one of the political events confidently expected. Bryan began by opposing prohibition by national amendment, but lately has declared for the Hobson plan. Since President Wilson has adopted the state-by-state theory of securing woman suffrage, Bryan may be expected to adopt the national plan. There are four million woman voters in the enfranchised states and in a presidential election these are a factor worthy of consideration.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo is back on the job with one thought uppermost—the passage of his ship purchase bill. That measure is to be ready for reintroduction the instant congress assembles and McAdoo is prepared to repeat his energetic subway construction performance in securing its passage.

Albert Uplegger Sues Dallas and Katherine Butler for Damages.

Alleging that by reason of the carelessness and negligence of the defendants a scaffold on which he was obliged to work was faultily and insecurely constructed of old and rotten timbers, he received a broken hip and other injuries that have left him a cripple for life, Albert Uplegger has begun action in the circuit court against Dalles E. Butler and Katherine Butler for $6,000 damages. He says he was employed as a mason tender on a dwelling the defendants were erecting on Fairfield avenue and that on the 14th of last May, as he was about to ascend a ladder placed against the scaffold, which was twenty feet above ground, the scaffold collapsed and fell on him. He says his left leg is now one and one-half inches short, that he will be compelled always to go on crutches or canes and that his right arm is useless. John H. Aiken is his attorney.

Koenig for $300. Charles J. Ryan is the plaintiff's attorney.

The Randall Auto Sales company has brought suit in the superior court against the New Hupp-Yates Electric company, James A. Matthews and the First National bank, on account and attachment, demanding $100. Leonard, Rose & Zollars appear for the plaintiff.

David Lutz has filed an action in the circuit court against James Peddicord, Earl J. Malone, Helen Ittenbach and Lena Ittenbach, demanding $2,000 in damages for personal injuries. He alleges that on Sept. 9, last, that an automobile occupied by the defendants ran into his wagon on the Leo road, demolishing it and inflicting bodily injuries upon him. Barrett, Morris & Hoffman are the plaintiff's attorneys.

In the circuit court Saturday Henry Fleckenstein was fined $25 and costs and his liquor license was revoked for having persons in his saloon on Sunday. The case was up on appeal from the city court. The license had already been revoked by the county commissioners.

Roy O. Geesman has begun suit in the superior court against Ernest W. Cook, receiver of the Bash Fertilizer & Chemical company, Charles S. Bash and William H. Witcomb, to recover $3,000 for stock purchased in the company. Fraud is alleged. The suit is the same tried in the circuit court and then withdrawn before it was submitted to the jury. T. E. Ellison is plaintiff's attorney.

Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette.

THE FUTURE IS BRIGHT—DON'T DIM IT.

Northern Indiana and the Twelfth district particularly have a deep interest in legislation which will be up for consideration at the next session of the national congress. The future of the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago barge canal may be decided at this session. The federal authorities will be asked to lend government aid in accomplishing flood prevention. The improvement of the mail service, not only as applies to bettering the transportation facilities, but in extending the system of village free delivery to the smaller towns within the district, is due for action from the postal authorities. Fort Wayne is vitally interested in securing a new federal building commensurate with the rapidly growing needs of the city.

And while the people as a whole are interested in these things, the democratic party is desirous of adding their accomplishment to its already large list of victories won in the interest of the people.

At the same time, the Journal-Gazette feels a personal interest in the next session of congress because the questions which so closely affect the welfare of northern Indiana, Allen county and Fort Wayne are issues for which the Journal-Gazette has contended with all the force at its command, in and out of season it may be. If the things for which the Journal-Gazette has striven can be accomplished at the next session or in succeeding sessions, it feels sure of the commendation of the people, for whom it seeks to speak.

We feel sure the people will remember the political party, the individual or the newspaper helping to fight their battles, and kindly so.

So with the accomplishments of these things in view, wholly with the welfare of the people in mind, the Journal-Gazette wishes this morning to point out the splendid advantages possessed by Congressman Cyrus Cline in working for these ends.

His services as a representative of the Twelfth district have thus far been without fault. Earnest and energetic, he has stood steadfastly on the side of the people. He has shown himself possessed of those qualities as a statesman which have enabled him to gain a commanding position at the head of important committees. He is in the fullest confidence of the administration, honored and respected by his colleagues and time has already demonstrated his ability to get the things he goes after. He was chiefly instrumental in securing the appropriation for the survey of the barge canal and is vitally interested in the completion of the work. The Journal-Gazette will not be telling tales out of school when it says that there is every indication that Mr. Cline will land for Fort Wayne a new federal building. He has already secured the establishment of village free delivery of mail in several of the smaller towns and is in a position to help others to the same boon.

Justice and fairness would indicate that he be given the opportunity to reap the honor and glory of bringing to his constituents the benefits his untiring energy and effort have placed just within his grasp. The Journal-Gazette believes in the ability of Mr. Cline, it knows his honesty and loyalty, it feels certain that a change in our representation at this time would greatly delay success, if, indeed, it did not completely nullify the years of hard effort that have gone before, and it confesses to a keen interest in seeing Mr. Cline returned to congress with a vote of confidence which will render even stronger his power of accomplishment.

Monroeville Breeze.

WHY THE BREEZE WISHES CYRUS CLINE RENOMINATED.

In supporting Congressman Cyrus Cline for renomination for congress the Breeze has no word of criticism to offer in reference to the gentleman who will oppose him in the contest. The Breeze is not against Mr. Hilgemann, but it is for Mr. Cline. The Twelfth district congressman has proven his worth as a public servant. He has labored industriously in the advocacy of every measure having for its object the advancement of the interests of his people and it is with a conscientious conviction that his splendid efforts should be rewarded that the Breeze directs attention to the desirability of his renomination and re-election. The long experience of Mr. Cline in the halls of congress peculiarly fit him for the performance of the duties that must be shouldered by the people's representative. What the country needs now and will need during the coming two years, and especially so during the time that the world is embroiled in perplexing international difficulties, is men of ripe legislative experience and judgment in the American congress. The Breeze desires to make itself plain that it has no quarrel with Mr. Hilgemann. It believes him to be a man of splendid character. But it feels the imperative need of Mr. Cline's return to congress for the completion of the good work he has begun and so ably carried forward.

New Haven Tribune (Ind.)

We publish this week the announcement of Congressman Cline's candidacy for renomination. Hon. Cyrus Cline has made a success commensurate with his opportunities and to say that he has not represented the Twelfth congressional district well is to give way to political prejudice. According to republican policies, the whole system is wrong and Mr. Cline's shortcomings, whatever they may be, are the result of the system which he represents, and not a personal inability to perform well his part. The Tribune is independent in politics, as nearly so as it is possible for a republican editor to make it. The republican color of that independence is about the same hue as the democratic color of an independent newspaper when published by a democrat. Such men are not expected to decry the official acts of a public man who represents a policy opposite to that of the editor unless those acts are notoriously weak. Rather, such men are expected to tell the truth even though it be laudatory of men who represent principles diametrically opposed to their personal opinions. In short, if a man perform his duty according to a plan the independent newspaper must measure him up in accordance with his performance of duty irrespective of the political principle in question. It remains for the party paper to attack the man. With this in view, the Tribune can speak of Mr. Cline in naught but praise. Whatever the system, it must be said of him that he has done well and should the people of this country believe that the country's best interests lie in the continuance of democracy as a party government, none can better represent this district than the Hon. Cyrus Cline.

Fort Wayne Sentinel.

MR. CLINE'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

Congressman Cyrus Cline has made formal announcement of his candidacy for renomination by the democrats of the Twelfth district at the primary to be held in March next, and while it has been generally conceded that Mr. Cline would again be a candidate, the formal declaration of his entrance into the race will nevertheless be received with much interest by the voters of the district.

The Angola man's record in congress is one to which he may point with justifiable pride. He has been assiduous in his devotion to the interests of his constituents in every county in the district, and has given to the position not only close attention, but a very high order of ability. Moreover, the rank he has attained by virtue of his term of service in the house has placed him in a position to be increasingly useful to his district.

Congressman Cline has just forwarded to the chief of the board of army engineers a very strong plea for federal aid in accomplishing flood prevention in Allen county. From the inception of the movement the congressman has taken an active interest in it and has overlooked no opportunity to be of service to the people of Fort Wayne and of Allen county in this connection. His contention that since the federal government has assumed jurisdiction over the Maumee river it may fairly be expected to share the flood prevention burden is well taken, and it should prove convincing in Washington. In any event, the people may rest assured that they can depend upon Congressman Cline to render all the assistance in his power in the furtherance of flood prevention plans.

Grabill Review.

The announcement of Congressman Cyrus Cline that he will be a candidate for renomination for congress has elicited much favorable comment in this vicinity. Mr. Cline has proven a worthy representative in congress and it is the desire of many people in this locality that he should be renominated and re-elected so that he can continue in the good work that he has been doing for his constituency. Mr. Cline is a man of extraordinary ability and as a public servant he has made a good record.

Woodburn News.

Twelfth district Indiana democrats will be pleased to learn that Hon. Cyrus Cline has announced that he will again be a candidate for congressman, and his name will go before the voters at the March primaries. The News has felt the need that Mr. Cline should accept a renomination, and following the urging of the press and his many friends, he announced Tuesday to a delegation that he would yield to their desires. Congressman Cline has begun a great work in behalf of the Twelfth district and the voters in return can further the interests of this district by giving him a large majority of votes at the primary. Mr. Cline has given his best interests to his district, and in congress has gained high recognition, having been placed on the most important committees. The Twelfth district needs the services of Congressman Cline. Give to him a renomination.

DEKALB COUNTY.

Auburn Bee (Ind.)

FOR WHAT HE HAS DONE.

It is an easy matter to explain why three well known men are seeking the nomination for congress in the Twelfth district on the republican ticket; and it is also well known why a few democrats have brought out a Fort Wayne man in opposition to Cyrus Cline, but has anybody given a good reason yet why Mr. Cline should not be returned to congress for another term?

It can be expected that his political opponents in the republican party should find fault with the things "that he hasn't done," and that the disappointed ones in the democrate party should be disgruntled at "what he might have done," but after all, isn't it only fair that Mr. Cline should be given due credit for "what he has done," and if there is any advantage to be gained from experience, then surely, the people of the Twelfth district as a whole would be benefited by having Mr. Cline continue as their representative in congress.

A congressman is worth more to the community after he has had extensive experience in dealing with the big questions that come up at every session, and the record Mr. Cline has made shows that he has always been on the alert and a diligent and painstaking official.

On account of his earnestness to impartially represent his constituents he has gained those qualities as a statesman which have enabled him to attain a commanding position at the head of important committees, and in a measure he has been very successful in bringing about legislation and securing such public improvements as the people of the several communities of the district have been asking for.

Over at Garret the citizens are enjoying village mail delivery as a direct result of Mr. Cline's efforts, and both Kendallville and Fort Wayne have been promised new federal buildings in due time, although so to deprive Mr. Cline of the great prestige already formed at the national capital would mean a loss to the Twelfth district that would be almost incalculable.

Since the voters will choose at the primary who their next representative in congress will be, it can hardly be expected that a man of Mr. Cline's ability and energy should be overthrown, and the district relegated to the experiment class.

His principles will appeal to men of all political affiliations, and when the primary votes are counted next March no doubt he will be chosen as the people's candidate, and when the election of next November rolls around his majority will be commensurate with the service he has performed, and show beyond a question of doubt that the people are willing to trust him as the Twelfth district representative in the halls of congress at Washington.

St. Joe News (Ind.)

This is the season of the year when the wise men in politics devote considerable time, energy and brain matter in reading the signs of the times. Congressman Cline is a bourbon of the old school. He will supply the personality in the coming campaign, and he will supply enough to satisfy any republican, standpat or otherwise Cyrus Cline will not only be the candidate for renomination, but his record in congress will be told and retold. That record is a record of achievement, a record of constructive legislation, a record the like of which has never been equaled before in the history of this congressional district. The editor is perfectly willing to rest the case upon the record now made by Congressman Cline. We have an abiding faith in the honest judgment of the people, and there is no doubt that Congressman Cline will win a glorious triumph. He was in town recently calling upon the voters.

DeKalb County Herald.

A writer for the Fort Wayne News says the Hilgemann candidacy "died a bornin'," and suggests that some one else get into the race. The opposing party would like to see some one put on the democratic ticket for congress that they could slaughter, but they cannot cut the mustard. Cyrus will go back with a greater majority than ever.

It will be noticed in another column that the Hon. Cyrus Cline has announced that he will be a candidate for the nomination of congressman on the democratic ticket. There are many arguments why Mr. Cline should be sent back to Washington, but it is not our intentions to enter into the "scrap" before the nominations are made. There isn't a man in the country but what would occasionally blunder if sent to congress and we believe Mr. Cline's record is as clear from mistakes as any former congressman ever sent to Washington. It will certainly stand investigation.

Garrett Clipper.

Mr. Cline has many followers because of the good record he made in Washington while serving several years. They believe his usefulness is now at its height because of his experience and his standing in the national house.

NOBLE COUNTY.

Avilla News (Ind.)

Congressman Cyrus Cline, of Angola, is going about over the Twelfth district calling on friends and making a preliminary campaign for renomination at the primaries in March. He will soon have to return to his official duties at Washington and will not be able to make as thorough a canvass as he would like, but he feels that his past service to the party and to the people of the district will win for him the nomination.

Albion Democrat.

In another column appears the announcement of Congressman Cyrus Cline, of Angola, for the nomination on the democratic ticket. Mr. Cline has served the people faithfully and well, and as one democrat aptly put it, is stronger today before the democracy of the Twelfth congressional district than at any previous time. He has not pleased everybody, and on account of his postoffice recommendations has made a few sore spots, but that was inevitable and unavoidable. He has served his constituency conscientiously, ably and well, and occupies a commanding place in the lower hall of congress and he will undoubtedly receive large support in the democratic primaries.

Ligonier Banner.

The announcement in this issue of the Banner that Hon. Cyrus Cline will again be a candidate for congress from the Twelfth district will come as pleasing news to the people irrespective of party. There has been considerable talk indulged that rival candidates might be induced to enter the lists and the uncertainty of Congressman Cline's intentions gave room for anxiety, but now that he is formally announced as a candidate to succeed himself it gives a feeling of relief. Congressman Cline has made a splendid record in congress and it would be almost a calamity to lose his services at this time. Congressman Cline, while consistent in his progressive democracy, is not a bitter partisan and in representing his constituents in congress he recognizes no party allegiance. The announcement is most gratifying to the Banner for the publisher feels that the people wish to be represented in congress by a democrat. Cyrus Cline is their choice.

HON. CYRUS CLINE.

Congressman Cyrus Cline, in making a tour of the district before his return to Washington, December 1st, to resume his official duties, reached Ligonier Tuesday and was entertained at a luncheon at Bailey's. There were fifteen or twenty party leaders to greet Mr. Cline and he was given assurance of a united support in Ligonier. The Cline party, consisting of County Chairman Cleland, Hon. A. J. Stahl and Capt. J. W. Smith, of Kendallville, met with a hearty reception in all portions of the county and the gentlemen were in excellent spirits. As remarked by Col. Simon Straus: "Any democrat opposed to the renomination of Congressman Cline is actuated by personal feeling and has not the interest of the democratic party at heart."

It is realized that the sentiment is openly expressed that it would be a great loss to the Twelfth congressional district to retire Mr. Cline at a time when he is at the zenith of his official usefulness. The Wilson administration has no supporter more loyal and as ranking member of the congressional committee on foreign relations the gentleman occupies a most prominent position at this time when the world is rent with war. Mr. Cline will undoubtedly be the next chairman of this important committee which brings credit and distinction to the district.

Congressman Cline is unalterably opposed to a military form of government. While he will support reasonable legislation for coast defense and an increased navy he is not in favor of a large standing army. Mr. Cline favors placing the state guard under federal control and offering inducements for voluntary enlistment. In these matters Congressman Cline is in full sympathy with the sentiment of his district and state irrespective of party. A military government is inconsistent with a democratic form and the two can never be harmonized.

Lagrange Democrat.

The official announcement that Congressman Cline will be a candidate for renomination, next spring, appears on the first page of today's issue. While it has generally been understood that Mr. Cline would again be a candidate, yet no formal announcement of the fact had been made. By reason of his long term of service and experience in legislative affairs Congressman Cline has an influence and prestige in Washington which no new man could hope to attain for several terms at least. He has been a faithful worker for all the best interests of his district, and men of his ability and experience are more needed in congress now than ever before. We believe the democrats of this county are well satisfied with Cline's service and will vote almost unanimously for his renomination.

Topeka Journal.

Representative Cyrus Cline at the behest of a large majority of the democrats of the Twelfth congressional district has consented to be a candidate for renomination for congress. Mr. Cline has made an enviable record as a public servant. He has risen to the pinnacle of statesmanship in the national congress and is regarded in Washington as one of the comparatively few men who do big things and do them well. It is believed that the best interests of the district demand Mr. Cline's return to congress so that he can complete the splendid work he has begun and carried forward in the interests of his people. The people of this locality are enthusiastically supporting Mr. Cline in his campaign.

STEUBEN COUNTY.

Angola Herald.

Congressman Cyrus Cline has announced his intention of again being a candidate for congress. Mr. Cline had been urged for some time, by prominent democrats from all over the district, to make the race again, but until this week had made no announcement in the matter. His considerable experience in the halls of congress appeals strongly to party men, who feel that Mr. Cline is the most available man in the district in this trying time in the affairs of the nation. He is thoroughly in accord with the policy of President Wilson, and has made a study of many weighty problems of great importance which are sure to be up for consideration. For these reasons has Mr. Cline been importuned to announce his candidacy. His decision will of course be pleasing to his friends in this, his own county, who have had occasion to watch his career in Washington, and are loud in his praise. If Mr. Cline is renominated he will surely get a larger vote in this county than ever before.

WHITLEY COUNTY.

Churubusco Truth.

The Truth takes great pleasure this week in announcing the fact that the Hon. Cyrus Cline will again be a candidate for congress. He will be nominated and elected for the reason that he deserves it on the ground of past work for the people of the Twelfth district. We are for Mr. Cline.

HON. CYRUS CLINE.

Northern Indiana and the Twelfth district particularly have a deep interest in legislation which will be up for consideration at the next session of the national congress. The future of the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago canal may be decided at this session and the federal authorities will be asked to lend government aid in accomplishing flood prevention. The improvement of the mail service, not only as applies to bettering the transportation facilities, but in extending the system of village free delivery to the smaller towns within the district is due for action from the postal authorities. The Truth begs to congratulate our esteemed Fort Wayne neighbor upon the above editorial. The Truth has always, at all times and under all circumstances stood for Congressman Cyrus Cline against the field because "by their works ye shall know them."

He has made good and his many years of experience in the halls of congress must certainly rebound to the welfare of the district. When the Truth editor was in Washington he found the Hon. Cyrus Cline in the front ranks of those members of the house who do things; he frequently presided over the house by appointment of Speaker Champ Clark and the manner in which he acquitted himself made us feel that the old Twelfth district was never represented in a better manner than we have been with Mr. Cline.

The Truth is for Cyrus Cline to succeed himself. And we wish to say that we are proud of the fact that we have always been a loyal Cline man ever since his first election to congress. Here's to you, Mr. Cline, fear not! The men who have an ax to grind or who did not get an office are of no importance if they conclude to fight. By the way, the Truth man did not get an office either, nevertheless it's not the fault of the congressman and we are glad that we are possessed of sufficient sense to comprehend it."

South Whitley Tribune (Ind.)

If the old adage, "The early bird catches the worm," holds good, Congressman Cyrus Cline will be renominated for congressman of the Twelfth district. All doubts as to whether or not he would again be a candidate were dispelled Tuesday when the announcement of his candidacy appeared in the newspapers throughout the district.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

1 Thessalonians 1:1-10.

1 Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ; Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers;

3 Remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father;

4 Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God.

5 For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake.

6 And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost;

7 So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.

8 For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to Godward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak anything.

9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God;

10 And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1915.

Mr. Cline's High Standing.

Elsewhere in The Sentinel today there is reproduced a symposium of Twelfth district newspaper comment upon the candidacy of Hon. Cyrus Cline for re-election to congress from this district that is rather remarkable. Not only is its tenor distinctly commendatory of Mr. Cline's very valuable public service, but it includes almost without an exception an expression from every democratic and independent newspaper in the six counties comprising the Twelfth congressional district. To be the recipient of a tribute of this character is no small distinction, and we have no doubt Mr. Cline deeply and sincerely appreciates the kindly references and the good wishes of the folks back home whose representative at the national capital he is and has been through several busy and very important terms of congress.

It would be utterly impossible to attain the high standing and the sphere of usefulness developed by Mr. Cline, maintained and broadened and enlarged by him through the succeeding years, on any other basis than that of sheer merit and devotion to his position and to the interests of the people who have honored him. It will be cheerfully agreed without regard to political preference, we think, that Mr. Cline has been not only a tireless worker but a capable one; that he has never failed in any particular in his duty to the home district and to the country at large. He has been "on the job" continuously. He has shirked no task, great or small, in his effort to serve the people of the Twelfth district, and has achieved a conspicuously fine and influential standing in official Washington as well as at home. These are the reasons for the high regard in which he is held. They explain, too, one of the most notable tributes ever given the candidacy of any man by newspapers of the Twelfth district.

The conviction of Charles B. Munday, former Chicago financier, whose peculiar financial methods resulted in the collapse of some ten banks and trust companies in the "Lorier-Munday string" will have a most healthful effect. Five years in prison is an outlook not especially inviting even to those of the get-rich-quick ilk who are always willing to take a chance on "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." Happily Mr. Munday's system of banking is the exception nowadays, and in no quarter will convictions of this character be hailed with more satisfaction than in the realm of legitimate and substantial banking.

Nebraska republicans are apparently determined to do something erratic. Undeterred by the demand of Associate Justice Hughes that his name be taken from the ballot as a candidate for the presidential nomination, some industrious individual there has followed it up by putting Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, in the list to be voted for at the primary. Anybody who aspires to a "mention" for the presidency will be overlooking the one best chance if he fails to grasp the golden opportunity now held out by Nebraska to the ambitious ones.

Warden Fogarty has found it necessary to issue another denial of the rumor that he has resigned his place at the state prison to embark i nthe manufacturing business at Lafayette. The persistence of the report gives rise to the suspicion that some of the gentlemen who would like Warden Fogarty's present job are doing some unseemly crowding in their desire to be on a front seat if anything in the way of official fruit is to be passed out.

In a spasm of economy, Terre Haute has turned off the electric lights at its city hall, the council refusing to make an appropriation to cover the cost of the lighting for the remainder of the year. In view of the fact that the record seems to indicate that a good deal of the business of city government at Terre Haute in the past has been done in the dark, one is unable to understand the occasion for all this hullabaloo over the present instance.

Indianapolis police authorities have notified the saloons in that city that they must obey the Sunday closing law. It should be explained, in the interest of exactitude, that orders of similar import have been issued on divers and sundry previous occasions, and the saloon men are naturally harassed with doubt whether the order means again or yet.

Still, it will hardly seem like old times with another than 'Gene Debs running for president on the socialist ticket next year. The Indiana man has positively refused a fifth consecutive nomination as the socialist standard-bearer

U. S. Lighthouse at Cape Sarichef.

The man with the lonesomest job in the United States is C. E. Peterson. Peterson is the keeper at the government lighthouse on the rocky point known as Cape Sarichef, on Unimak island, Alaska. Sarichef light is the northernmost lighthouse under the jurisdiction of the United States, except some minor river lights on the Yukon river. With its sister lighthouse 40 miles away on the south side of Unimak island, at Scotch Cap, it guards the ship lane through the Aleutian islands, known as Unimak Pass. Through this pass all ships that go to the northern coast of the territory make their way Keeper Peterson has two assistants, and the three men live at the lighthouse alone, except for the monthly visit of the supply vessel "Dora," which brings them their provisions and supplies.

(Kansas City Star).

It is believed that most persons will agree that the Chicago physician did right in making no effort to save the life of the malformed baby whose story has been before the public for the last day or so.

Occasionally a child is born so malformed that it would be a crime against humanity to do anything to prolong its life. Whatever protests may be made on theoretical grounds against a failure to do everything possible to save it, the wise doctor is going to make his own decision in the matter. Under circumstances similar to those in the Chicago case his decision is going to be similar to that of the Chicago physician.

The incident is merely one phase of the general problem of the unfit who, while our ancestors were still savages, were weeded out by the natural conditions of life, but who now are saved to reproduce their kind and increase the burden on society. The problem is one that must be faced. If feeble minded children are to survive, as they must under modern conditions, society will have to see to it that they are segregated or by other means are kept from bringing into the world other unfortunate beings, who cannot take care of themselves.

The problem of the comparatively few malformed children will probably in general solve itself, as it has in Chicago. There is the much more important problem of the mentally unfit, which presses for social action.

GOOD ROADS PROGRESS.

(Indianapolis News).

The good roads movement in Indiana is attaining such momentum that it is going to be pretty hard for those who have been interested heretofore in defeating proper direction of road making in this state to head it off. The recent Madison county good highway parade was eleven miles in length, including 1,300 automobiles and 5,000 people. There were many visitors from adjoining counties. A prevailing sentiment was, in effect, that muddy road legislation must soon be a thing of the past in Indiana. Such meetings are being held all over the state. There is one in progress in Dubois county today, and Jasper no doubt will have such an experience as Marion had a week ago. Luke Duffy, secretary of the state highway commission, is there preaching the doctrine of building roads well and showing the folly of a responsibility divided among 4,500 road officials in Indiana. The campaign in all directions is calculated to instruct candidates for the legislature so that the wasteful method of repairing roads that have been built or of building others haphazard, may be put to an end at the next session of the general assembly. There is plenty of money spent for roads. The trouble is in the waste. Much of it will continue to be wasted until the proper system of scientific and economic supervision is established.

This American Solved Munition Problem in France

WILLIAM F CARMODY

Chicago, Nov. 20.—When France discovered last spring that its men on the firing line were sending shrapnel into the enemy's ranks three times as fast as French machinists were making them, she asked for the best mechanic America could send to its aid. The appeal called from his job W. F. Carmody, foreman in a Chicago adding machine factory. Though he didn't know it himself, Carmody's genius was known to almost every mechanical engineer in the country. Though he worked through interpreters and had many other handicaps to meet, Carmody succeeded in revolutionizing methods in the French machine shops, which he brought to the maximum of efficiency.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhœa, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup. —Advertisement.

Distinguished Women Everywhere Are Wearing Redfern Models

A wearer of a Redfern "feels" the excellent shaping of her corset—its support is comfortable—she knows that her figure is right. She knows that every line of her gown is being "set off."

Redfern Models are designed in accord with the fashions of the day, and each model is kept "up to the minute." If you have worn a Redfern and are devoted to a particular model, you are safe in renewing that model as the slighest suggestion of a style change the designers of the Redfern instantly make in each design.

Women who have been accustomed to having their corsets "cut to order" are now wearing Redfern and enjoying figure style and correct comfort that they never knew before.

Niles, O., Nov. 20.—The corner stone of the National McKinley Birthplace Memorial was laid here at noon today, with ceremonies reminiscent the former president's life. "Lead Kindly Light," the hymn which clung to the murdered president in his dying moments, and the Strauss waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," a favorite of Mrs. McKinley, was played by the United States Marine Band, and James H. Hoyt, an intimate friend of the former president, recited personal reminiscences. At the conclusion of the program, Major Charles B. Hanford, head of the marine band, declaimed "The Star Spangled Banner," a bit of elocution which McKinley was wont to request in his white house days.

President Wilson was forced to decline an invitation to lay the corner stone, but he sent a representative of the national administration and promised to be present at the dedication of the building later. Other guests of the day included Senators Atleo Pomerene and Warren G. Harding, of Ohio; Representative William A. Ashbrook, of Johnstown, Ohio; J. G. Schmidlap, of Cincinnati, one of the trustees of the memorial fund; Gov. Frank Willis, of Ohio; Myron T. Herrick, of Cleveland, former ambassador to France, and L. C. Dyer, of St. Louis, a member of congress and commander of the United Spanish War Veterans; Gov. Willis, Mr. Herrick and Congressman Dyer being the principal speakers.

The day's program began with a parade in which state troops, veteran organizations, Masons and other organizations in which McKinley was interested, took part. Camps of Spanish War Veterans and posts of the grand army of the republic from Cleveland, Alliance, Canton and Akron, O.; and Pittsburg, Sharon and New Castle, Pa., were in the line of marchers. Half a dozen bands made music for the parade.

After the Masonic part of the program, a tablet was affixed to the stone, bearing this inscription:

"Erected 1915
"To Perpetuate the Name and Achievements of William McKinley, Twenty-fifth President of the United States of America.
"Born January 29, 1843.
"Died September 14, 1901."

The building itself, when complete, will be a two-story structure of severe colonial design, flanked by one-story wings of almost equal length with the main structure. The main portico is to be supported by six Ionic columns and the facade of each wing will carry as many similar supports in sectional form. The cornice will be plain, and rectangular doors and windows will emphasize the straight lines of the design.

—to his wifey said one day, "Please take this hundred dollars; buy some winter duds, I pray!" Another day he mused aloud, "I surely like your cake. I think it's so much better than my mother used to make!" Once this good man said to his son, "My boy, you're somewhat wild. Compared with your old daddy, though, I'd say you're very mild. When I was your age, every night I landed in a cell. You'll come out fine ten years from now. You're doing pretty well." This same great soul while riding home from work most every night, would beg a chance to give his seat to any girl in sight. He'd never flirt with anyone except his wedded wife; he never swore, he never took a bracer in his life. His daughter never banged the keys when others longed for rest; his dog was silent as the stars; his temper was the best. I do not know this gentle soul, I never clasped his hand, I never met his butler, nor encamped upon his land. A friend of mine was telling me. He met the man, it seems, one evening at twilight, in the "Land of Pleasant Dreams."—Charles B. Driscoll.

But few Fort Wayne citizens would care to return to the days of the wide open Sunday saloons.

C. H. Worden, the attorney, left today for Wheeling, W. Va., on business for the Fort Wayne Electric works.

Mrs. P. S. O'Rourke went to Chicago yesterday to meet her husband, who is returning from New Mexico.

Judge Allen Zollars and Judge C. M. Dawson made responses to toasts at the banquet of the Scottish Rite Masonic bodies in Indianapolis last evening.

Sam D. Hanna was in the city yesterday to contract with the Fort Wayne Electric works for a plant to light the Auburn foundry, of which he is manager.

Following a burglary committed last evening three suspicious strangers were arrested. Tools were found on them. The three men have been identified as having committed a burglary at Peru. These three are believed to belong to the same gang as the two dangerous men arrested on Broadway Tuesday night by Officer Kennelly.

Last evening at 5 o'clock, at the home of the bride, 405 South Calhoun street, took place the marriage of Miss Jennie M. Abel and Mr. David H. Caldwell, Rev. Dr. Moffat, of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Only the relatives and a few intimate friends of the couple were present. The bridal pair have gone east for a tour. The bride is a charming young lady who has been for several years one of the most efficient teachers in the Fort Wayne schools and the groom is chief dispatcher for the Nickel Plate railroad here.

Boxing matches and games occupied the evening accompanied by a program of music, and winding up with a bounteous supper. So as to perpetuate the characters assumed by the young ladies a flashlight was taken of the group and this picture will serve as a pleasant reminder of the occasion in future years. An Echo of Needlework Guild.

The newly elected officers of the Needlework Guild and those whose terms expired at the annual meeting this week are much pleased over the quality of contributions made as well as over the number. It was fortunate, too, that the distribution could be made in time for the colder and rainy weather and children waiting for clothing to get to school and charities like the Willing Workers and the Visiting Nurse had especially urgent cases for clothing and bedding that the Guild was able to give them. The present officers believe that the impetus and interest in the work this fall will not be forgotten in another year and that the next roundup will bring the number of garments into the four thousands. Mrs. Robert Harding is again the president; Miss Harriet Fowler, first vice-president; Mrs. F. E. Hoffman, second vice-president; Mrs. B. H. OPERA "JOSEPH" COMING SOON.

Charity Entertainment Promises Big Things Musically.

Rehearsals for the grand opera, "Joseph," begins Monday. The multitude of participants will necessitate meetings at all hours of the day and evening. Special groups of leading characters and soloists will practice in the early afternoons as will also the dancers. Children from all the Sunday schools of Fort Wayne will take part in the different sections of the auxiliary choruses for the great "Temple" scene and will assemble after school each afternoon and on Saturday morning. The chorus of adult singers will meet at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and those who expect to take part should go one of these evenings to obtain copies of the music, even though unable to remain for the entire rehearsal. Singing will begin very promptly each evening to avoid late rehearsals. This is one of the most exceptional opportunities for the development of musical and dramatic ideas that has ever been offered the musicians of the city and from the preliminary interest shown it is likely that the rehearsal hall will be taxed to its utmost capacity Tuesday night. All the rehearsals of the adult chorus will be held in the Wayne Street Methodist church for the present, and the children's choruses will meet in Dehn's hall, Calhoun and Jefferson streets. The invitation committee for the opera is composed of the following well known Fort Wayne people:

Miss Margaret S. Vesey, chairman; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Worden, Mr. and Mrs. George Pixley, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Beauty at 40—No Reason Why Woman After 40 Should Be "Serene from Now On."

Written and Illustrated by IDAH M'GLONE GIBSON.

"How shall I find beauty, and how shall I retain my beauty?"

These women, however, are in reality asking, "How shall I retain my youth?" or perhaps it would be better to say, "How shall I retain a semblance of youth?"

Beauty has been defined as many things, but after long study of the subject I have come to the conclusion that beauty only means promise; beauty in children—a promise of wonderful maturity; beauty in woman—promise of procreativeness; beauty in men—promise of strength; beauty in nature—promise of harvest, eternal vigor.

When the promise is fulfilled, or rather, when the time is past in which this promise should be fulfilled, beauty ends. Death in life comes to man, woman and nature. There must be only waiting for the end.

I do not wonder that women dread the tell-tale wrinkle, the white hair, that tells the secret that the time has come.

They try to cheat old Father Time himself. They rub out the wrinkles, dye the whitened locks and redden the fading cheeks. They change the maturing line of their figures into the curves of youth.

Without youth, woman has been taught since the earth began, there is no hope.

"You cannot become mothers any more. Make way for the women who can," says the world.

"Dear mother is so restless," says the grown-up children. "Why can't she settle down and be serene from now on?"

No matter how much capacity you feel within yourself, for hard work and the joy of living, you are relegated by your family and friends to being "serene from now on."

With more than a third of your life before you, with the wisdom that can only come from experience, there is no reason in the world why, unless you wish it, you need be "serene from now on."

Sarah Bernhardt once said to me when I asked her the secret of her wonderful youthfulness—or rather her wonderful realization of the joy of living and the joy in living: "The whole secret is in never looking back, in always looking forward—in making new promises to yourself and in starting in to fulfill them."

This woman, as she said this, was beautiful not only with the beauty of promises already fulfilled, but beautiful with the enthusiasm that new promises and the going about enthusiastically to bring their fulfillment entailed.

No self-centered woman can be beautiful whether she be 16 or 60, and every woman who has sympathy, knowledge and poise—things which only can come to the mature woman—can have beauty at its best.

Start in today, oh woman of 40, in making new promises to yourself and to the world. Come out of your soul self, but in doing so do not neglect your physical self. The splendor and beauty of this wonderful world is not over for you—it has just begun.

"Gobble-Gobble," Says The Turk—Then They Stab Him With a Dirk.

—and this is the way you can fix him for your family dinner table on November 25:

Pluck him and singe him and wash him three times; then stuff him brimfull of bread, onions and thyme. Then roast him all brown, and have Mary warm a platter, and take him to the table on that. When you serve him to the multitude have a generous helping of cranberries placed on each plate.

To stuff a turkey with chestnuts dressing for your Thanksgiving table—split with knife two pounds of chestnuts and roast them in an oven not too hot. Peel them, and finish cooking in a large saucepan. Cover the chestnuts with white stock, add a piece of raw celery, and cook again, slowly, in order to keep them as whole as possible. Drain and cool off. Have one pound of fat sausage meat seasoned with salt, pepper and sage; mix with the chestnuts and stuff the turkey

Championship Contest to Be Played on Local Grid Tomorrow.

The Wabash-Friar game will be played Sunday, rain, snow or flood. Nothing can hinder it. And it starts promptly at 2 o'clock. The following note from Manager Lopshire, not intended for publication, but merely to keep the newspapers posted, tells the advance story clearly and concisely.

The seat sale thus far has been very large and as a matter of fact far beyond all expectations. However, there are still seats to be had at Schirmeyer's, Pohlmeyer's and Riegel's cigar store. Come early and avoid the rush.

The game will be started promptly at 2 o'clock and there will be a band to escort the Wabash crowd from the train to the grounds.

The "Howling Hundred" will also have a band. They have been rehearsing their yells and songs at the club rooms and have everybody crazy with the awful noise they make.

This game promises more enthusiasm than any other game ever played in Fort Wayne, and in all probability independent circles in the state.

Feeney and Pliska will be on hand for practice tonight. Klnts, Denison and Zaring will arrive tomorrow. There will again be secret practice tonight and Saturday afternoon. The gates will be guarded by policemen, therefore, those that are not entitled to be inside the gate will be more comfortable uptown.

Reilly, the big end, who practiced for the first time last night, made a very favorable impression and should show something Sunday.

Captain Edwards fits into the team play in fine style and we feel sure will be of great assistance to us.

The Concordia basketball season opens tonight when the first and second fives meet at the armory in an exhibition game. A game was staged a week ago between the teams, but that was before they were lined up well and really did not count in the season.

FINAL GAMES PLAYED BY WESTERN ELEVENS

Puzzling Situation Develops in Big Nine Championship.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Final games of the western football season are to be played today with interest centering on two contests—the Chicago-Illinois struggle at Chicago and the Wisconsin-Minnesota game at Madison.

The puzzling situation growing out of the "Big Nine" championship race has aroused unusual interest in these two contests because of the claims of Illinois and Minnesota, both undefeated this season, to the western conference title. Illinois and Minnesota played a 6 to 6 tie on Oct. 30.

Experts point out that a victory for Chicago, provided Minnesota defeats Wisconsin, would give the Minnesota eleven a valid claim to the championship. Illinois, on the contrary, if victorious would be proclaimed the western conference champion provided Wisconsin humbles the Gophers.

On past performances experts pick Illinois and Minnesota to win their games but because of the numerous upsets this season the results cannot be predicted with the same accuracy as in other years.

Northwestern will close its season in meeting Ohio State while Indiana and Purdue will attempt to settle their long standing question of supremacy at Bloomington.

Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, miffed at the criticism that he is picking out the soft ones in his division, has raised the weight limit from 122 pounds to 133, and announced he will meet any man in the world at that weight.

Since he became champion Kilbane has made nearly all his opponents make 122 pounds. He says there are no 122-pounders worthy of a championship match and he is ready to take on lightweights.

QUITS ORGANIZATION.

(By Brown Holmes).

Hal Church, Yale end, is more a pupil of Tom Shevlin, hero coach, than any other man on the blue eleven and Yale depends upon him to keep Mahan and the other Harvard backs from gaining ground on wing plays in the big game Saturday.

When Shevlin jumped from his business in Minneapolis to Yale in answer to an emergency call, he found Church, a youngster, with lots of speed, but lacking in the fine points of the game.

Realizing the possibilities in the young player, Shevlin took him under personal tutelage and in a week had him playing a great game. Shevlin especially drilled Church in tackling and the youngster handled Princeton runners last week like a veteran.

Church with his great speed is especially good getting down the field under punts. Shevlin has taught him in a short time to outguess his opponents and there was not a time in the Yale-Princeton game when the Tiger interferers were able to get the Yale end into a "box."

This is Church's first season on the varsity team. He is called a Shevlin-made end and his work since Shevlin took hold of him has been a fine boost for Shevlin football.

PURDUE AND INDIANA CLASH IN FINAL GAME

Season Closes Today for the Indiana School Grids.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 20—Purdue and Indiana universities close the 1915 football season with their annual clash here today. Critics predict a close struggle. Each team has been pointed for several weeks to today's game and it is believed that the rival elevens will display the best football they have shown this season. The day dawned crisp and clear, but with a wind out of the west. The probable lineup:

BLUE AND CRIMSON STAGE BATTLE TODAY

New York, Nov. 20.—Harvard's annual football meet with Yale, fought this year at Cambridge, is by far the most important in popular interest of today's contests in the east. Yale's apparent recovery of old time football form as shown in her defeat of Princeton, made the outcome of the game today doubtful even to the experts. Other eastern games are Syracuse vs. Dartmouth, Columbia vs. New York university, Trinity vs. Wesleyan, Fordham vs. Carlisle, Swarthmoore vs. Haverford, Army vs. Springfield, Navy vs. Ursinus, Lafayette vs. Lehigh, Washington and Jefferson vs. Bethany, Rhode Island state vs. New Hampshire state, Middlebury vs. Vermont, Carnegie institute vs. Western reserve.

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends all stomach distress in five minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.—Advertisement.

FAMILY CREST BRANDED ON APPLES.

With Hazen J. Titus, head of the department, leading the movement, the Northern Pacific has adopted a unique plan for branding apples with the emblem of the road.

It is done by pasting a sort of paper stencil on them while they are green. When they ripen, the part under the paper stays green. Then the paper is torn off, and the apples find themselves "branded." Most of the apples come from the Wenatchee valley, in Washington.

Since the "branding" process was evolved, the apple growers have received orders from fashionable hotels in the east and even in Europe for apples branded with their crests. Some of these apples sell for 25 cents each to the ultimate consumer.

WILL WARN TEUTONS AS WELL AS ALLIES

Washington, Nov. 20.—Non-interference with American commerce on the high seas will be demanded of Germany and Austria as well as of Great Britain and her allies in notes to be dispatched soon on the subject of contraband.

The United States will vigorously protest against the action of the European belligerents in declaring all commerce contraband. It will largely be perfunctory so far as Germany and Austria are concerned, however, as these nations are not now in a position to interfere greatly with American shipping. The note is nearly completed now but will not be dispatched until it has been carefully revised by Secretary Lansing and President Wilson. It will challenge the right of a belligerent to extend the list of absolute contraband beyond the limits recognized by international law before the war.

The Italian foreign office has notified American Ambassador Page, at Rome that it has no reason to believe that the submarine which sunk the liner Ancona with the loss of several Americans was other than an Austrian. This with the Austrian government's acknowledgment of the act clears up the last possibility that it might have been a German boat.

MAN'S NUDE BODY IN TRUNK REVEALS CRIME

Portland Police Grappling With Murder Mystery That is Baffling.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 20.—Police are making efforts today to establish the identity of a murdered man whose nude body was found in a trunk picked up in the Willimet river last night. A deep gash in the head, exposing the brain, revealed the manner of his death. Around the neck were welts as if from a cord or rope. The man was about 40 years old.

Sealed to the inside of the pockets in two different coats found in the trunk were cards bearing the name of W. B. Flanigan, Palestine, Texas, and Charles Wagner, 173 Sumner street, Boston, Mass. A handkerchief bore the laundry mark "F. B."

PUZZLE TO WAGNER.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 20.—Charles Wagner, of Boston, whose card was found in a trunk picked up in the Willimet river containing the body of a nude man, could give no clue today as to his identity. Wagner, who is engaged in the clothing business here, failed to recall any customer or person who might have gone west with his card.

A paper written by William H. Rankin, vice president of the Mahin Advertising company, of Chicago, was read by C. J. Schoo, Friday, at the regular noon-day weekly meeting and luncheon of the Quest club.

FUNERAL OF PHILIP ANTHES ON SUNDAY

Columbia City, Ind., Nov. 20.—Funeral services for the late Philip Anthes, a veteran business man and first chief of the Columbia City fire department, will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence, Rev. Hunter, of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Mr. Anthes, whose death took place Friday, was 74 years old and had resided here since 1870. He was born in Germany, came to America in 1868, locating in Van Wert, Ohio, where he followed his trade as a baker for seven months, then going to Fort Wayne, where he was engaged in the bakery business until August, 1870, when he came here. He first started a bakery here, but in 1872 moved up town and started a grocery and saloon. Later he engaged exclusively in the saloon business. He had a record of never having been charged with any violation of the law. He was married in 1870 to Katherine Sipe, of this city, and of ten children born to them eight survive with the widow. Mrs. George Welker, of Fort Wayne, is a daughter.

ANOTHER FARMER OF ASHLEY ENDS LIFE

Ashley, Ind., Nov. 20.—Thomas Lacey, a well known farmer residing four miles east of this place, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself. He was 73 years old. He had been irrational for some time and on Thursday had attempted to kill his wife, who saved her life by fleeing to the home of a neighbor. Lacey was found dead in bed by a daughter. He had pulled the covers over his head and put a bullet in his brain with a revolver. This is the third suicide of well known farmers in this vicinity during the past few months. Surviving Lacey are his widow and two children.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Six physicians composing a coroner's jury yesterday held that Dr. H. J. Haiselden, who permitted an infant, John Bollinger, to die when an operation might have saved him to a life of unhappiness as a defective, was morally and ethically justified in refusing to perform the operation which his conscience did not sanction. An implied disapproval of a course wherein a physician might determine if it was or was not desirable for a patient to live was contained in the concluding paragraph of the verdict. "We believe that the physician's highest duty is to relieve suffering and to save or prolong life."

Dr. Haiselden interrupted the testimony of one physician to say that from information in his hands he believed at least one baby a day was allowed to die secretly by physicians in Chicago. The statement was not contradicted.

The Daughters of Workmen will give a pedro party, Tuesday, Nov. 23, in their quarters in the Lincoln Life building. The public is invited.

You will never again pay enormous prices for dry cleaning after trying this. Any woman can clean and renew the appearance of yokes, ribbons, satins, laces, silks, furs, shirtwaists, Swiss, lawn, organdie and chiffon dresses, kid gloves and shoes, neckties, children's clothes, suits, caps, woolen garments, fancy vests, draperies, rugs, in fact, any and everything that would be ruined with soap and water.

Get two ounces of solvite at any drug store and put it in two gallons of gasoline, where it quickly dissolves. Then put in the goods to be cleaned. After a little rubbing out they come looking bright and fresh as new. You will find nothing fades, shrinks or wrinkles, requiring no pressing.

You would have to pay $5 at a dry cleaning establishment for the cleaning which can be done at home as easily as laundering. Any grocery or garage will supply the gasoline and your druggist will sell you two ounces of solvite which is simply a gasoline soap, then a large dishpan or wash boiler completes your dry cleaning outit.

"As gasoline is very inflammable, be sure to do your dry cleaning out of doors or in a room away from fire or flame, with the windows left open."—Advertisement.

OUTLINES BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT TO CLERGY

Before several members of the Fort Wayne Ministerial association and several ladies interested in this movement, Louis O. Wetzel, field scout commissioner of Indiana, outlined the work of the Boy Scout movement and suggested plans for the organization of troops in Fort Wayne at a meeting held Friday evening in the assembly room of the public library. Among many interesting ideas which he advanced he contradicted the general opinion which seems to prevail among the public that the Boy Scout organization is a military one. He said rather than this it was a peace organization, but so cultivating hardiness, readiness and courage in the boys as to better fit them for war, peace, or indeed any emergency of life.

After giving a history of the Boy Scout movement from the time of its beginning, February 4, 1910, to the present day, he went on to say that the motto, "Be Prepared," has been mistaken in meaning by the average person. Instead of teaching the boy to be a soldier, this motto stands and teaches the boy to be an assistance to the community. The uniform does not make the organization military like, but brings all classes of boys on the same level and does away with the possible existence of castes.

Mr. Wetzel stated that two things that the Boy Scout work does not teach are religion and politics, but that this part of the training depends on the parents and pastors. One statement which he made, which was very favorably received, was that Sunday was not a Boy Scout day, but a day for religious training, and that it was absolutely against the ruling of the national board to have the boys do anything on Sunday. "Saturday," he said, "is the Boy Scout day over the entire world."

The object of the meeting held Friday evening and which Mr. Wetzel very emphatically brought out in his address, was: First, to secure the cooperation of the ministerial association in this work; second, to secure a man from each church who is a leader among the boys; third, to perfect an organization which will be permanent and which will secure headquarters; fourth, to discuss the financial end of the question.

Rev. Mahlon Tunison, pastor of the South Wayne Baptist church, who was formerly scoutmaster at Wochester, was appointed to speak to the members of the ministerial association next Monday on this question and urge them all to be present at another meeting to be held on the afternoon of December 4. At this time each minister is expected to bring a leader of boys from the church with him.

It is the plan of Mr. Wetzel to organize fifteen or twenty Boy Scout troops in the various churches of the city. The first thing, however, he intends to establish a school for the scoutmasters, so that they may be taught the work and in turn teach the boys.

Mr. Wetzel will meet with the boys of the Boy Scout age which is twelve to eighteen years, of the First M. E. church next Friday evening and will organize troop No. 1.

"If my plans are realized," said Mr. Wetzel," and if the people of Fort Wayne take up with the Boy Scout work, I am going to give up my state work and devote my entire time to the boys of Fort Wayne with whom I have come to live."

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Nov. 20.—Steady liquidation caused numerous stocks to decline to the lowest prices of the week today. Dealings were light but supply was in excess of demand. Support was most often lacking, especially in war shares, where greatest heaviness was reflected. There were no definite over night developments to account for the general recessions, but the feeling of caution among traders as well as investors seemed to be on the increase. Even rails, which recently manifested a stronger tendency, lost ground with the more speculative issues. Some substantial recoveries were made later, Texas company suddenly advancing 19½ to 203. The closing was irregular. Bonds were firm.

The lethargy and lowered price trend which marked yesterday's trading was continued today, war shares and automobile issues being especially heavy. Almost the sole exception was mercantile marine preferred, which recovered a point of its decline. Canadian Pacific was a point lower at 182½, with very slight changes in other rails. Tennessee Copper, which ranks as a war stock, was down 2¾ at 56. United States Steel made a nominal recession on light offerings.

SUFFRAGE CAR RACING FROM PACIFIC COAST TO WHITE HOUSE.

Over the Sierra and Rocky mountains, across the Great American desert, through Iowa prairies and Kansas mud holes a suffrage car is speeding from San Francisco to Washington. It is now passing through Ohio.

It is carrying Sara Bard Field, elected envoy of the Woman Voters' convention, recently held in San Francisco, and a petition asking congress to pass an amendment to the constitution enfranchising all women. This petition bears over a half million signatures and will be delivered to President Wilson. The car is owned and has been driven all the way by Maria A. Kindberg and cared for by Ingeborn Rindstedt, both of Providence, R. I.

Maid Happie Says:

"At bath time there's nothing like a gas heating stove. No chance for the children to get cold, no danger of 'sniffles' and sore throat. Can't do without it these cool mornings—even with the furnace going."

BETTER CONDITIONS ALL OVER INDIANA

By Willis S. Thompson.

Indianapolis, Nov. 20.—In a pretty thorough review of the local business conditions the Indianapolis Star has made a survey of both wholesale and retail districts. In both these they find not only larger volumn of business with each week that passes, but the collections are also showing well in size and promptness. Extra men have been placed to take care of the business over the state.

A special story is devoted to the Central Union telephone business, as indicating unmistakable show of better conditions. It is pointed out that the long distance calls have increased so much that it hardly appears the same exchange that was in operation a few months ago. Not only is the record of long distance calls very much improved, but the Bell exchanges, both in the city and over the state are recording hundreds of new applications every day for the installation of new telephones. This business is coming unsolicited and so is accepted as evidence of business revival. Only a few months ago "such orders were very few."

Just as an evidence of appreciation of this good business feeling, the Central Union Telephone company is giving a demonstration of the trans-continental wire service to the men of Indianapolis and Indiana on the night of November 23. About a thousand telephones are to be placed in the German House, where the guests will assemble and listen to conversations with mayors, governors and others in California and other parts of the country.

In addition to the many excellent reports from the newspapers of the state, to which reference has been made, the Lagrange Democratic-Call says the farmers in that part of the state have such large crops and large prices that automobile salesmen and business houses have all felt the results of the distribution of increased wealth. Cement works and other plants increasing capacity, two new banks opened in their own buildings, and "we can discover nothing that indicates anything but prosperity."

New Albany Public Press declares the good times continue better there all the time. The manufacturers have had to go outside for men to supply the labor. Business fifty per cent. better than two months ago. Not a single industry idle and all increasing capacity and output.

The Garrett Clipper leaves no doubt that business is growing in a way that the country round about Garret has not before known. And it is all creditied to the good work of the national and state administration.

Columbia City Post, representing the community made famous by having supplied to the country a much-talked-about democratic vice president, declares if they had any better business it would bother them to handle it. All the manufacturing plants, large and small, busy all the time and growing larger. Banks hold larger deposits than ever in their history. Hundreds of new homes in city and new farm houses, new barns, new automobiles at all the farms. Not a man out of work and nobody has time to listen to calamity.

Monticello Observer—"Nothing wrong here. Everybody employed. Crops good." What more could any community have or ask for?

Martinsville Democrat complains because some republican newspapers actually comment about hard times. It is pointed out that the complaint seems to have been prepared at some central source. When nothing worse can be said they howl because of what will happen "after the war." The Democrat calls attention to the fact that there is not a newspaper in Indiana in which the advertising columns do not speak community prosperity.

Osgood Journal says weather was not as good to farmers as in some sections but business generally getting better every day and things are "progressing in fine shape."

Hartford City News continues to report progress—nothing stands still there. Everybody at work. Not an idle plant. Not a vacant house. Demand for good houses.

Richmond Item says conditions better than a year ago. Many more men employed than this time last year. Business looking up.

Pulaski County Democrat — Crops good. Nobody out of a job if he wants to work. Good democratic prospects.

New Castle Times has whole columns every day about new homes being built, new factories, old factories enlarged, more orders than can be handled, banks bulging with money, larger weekly pay rolls than ever before known, will pass more than 15,000 population in 1916 and if an outsider may judge conditions it looks like most of that 15,000 will be supporting the democratic national and state ticket in a year from now. They surely can want no political or business changes.

Connersville Examiner shows a large amount of individual improvement. It talks much of the splendid business conditions in the city and county. All factories working overtime. More money than ever before in the banks. Demand for more houses, not being a vacant one in the city. Prospects for future could not be brighter.

BULGARIAN KING MUCH IN EVIDENCE

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 10.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press).—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria has been by all odds the most talked-of figure in the public eye of Hungary since he took the step which arrayed his country on the side of the Germanic [illegible]. Many columns of newspaper space have been especially devoted to descriptions and anecdotes of the popular monarch, who appeals especially to the Hungarian heart because of his long and close connection with Hungarian affairs.

It is remarked particularly that Ferdinand, once the embodiment of the autocratic ruler, has of late years shown more and more democratic tendencies, until now, "without in any way derogating his royal dignity and the majesty of his appearance, he moves about among all classes and ranks in the attitude of a brother rather than that of a king.' There is said to be a great enthusiasm for him among his soldiers, and he is constantly seen with the troops, even as far as the extreme firing line, encouraging them and appealing to them frequently with words of recognition.

Since Ferdinand entered on the war he has received innumerable messages congratulating him on his action and on the bravery displayed by his troops. Telegrams and letters have reached him from all parts of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey. He reads all these messages personally, it is said, and takes great pleasure in them. "When he receives a bundle of letters of this kind," remarks one correspondent, "his countenance, usually so gloomy, lightens up."

The whole Bulgarian campaign centers at the king's headquarters, which is connected by wire with every section of the field in which Bulgarian armies are operating. The strict court etiquette which has been always a matter of great pride in Sofia, has been relaxed, and the king has requested his generals to interrupt him at any time, even at dinner, if there is urgent business to be discussed. At headquarters the king and his generals are said to constitute "one big family." When matters of war are not pressing he talks with them of past times and of his travels in all parts of Europe. He is especially proud of his popularity in Turkey. He was a great friend of the old sultan, Abdul Hamid, who on one occasion spoke of Ferdinand as "the greatest man in the Turkish empire save only the sultan."

The religious side of the Bulgarian monarch receives due attention in the newspaper tributes. Ferdinand never misses attending the orthodox mass on Sunday, but he is tolerant in his religious views and the orthodox and Catholic clergy receive like treatment in his armies.

Wood-Cutting Made Easy

Wood-cutting shouldn't be hard work. The trouble is lots of people think it doesn't deserve a good tool. The right saw will make the work easier than you ever thought it could be.

Atkins Wood Saws

Go through the wood in a jiffy, with little effort. The blade is tapered, so that the tooth-edge is the thickest part. Doesn't bind or stick in the wood. Made of high-grade steel, which holds a keen cutting edge. The handle permits a comfortable position. Cost no more than the old "good enough" kind.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you a full pint of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

My little girl had eczema on her face from the time she was born till she was about three years old. It was so sore and irritating that we had to watch her day and night to keep her from scratching her face and making it bleed. It seemed to annoy her almost constantly and we tried many remedies without any benefit till we consulted Dr. Wells who cured her in two weeks. Over a year has elapsed and there has been no evidence of its return. I am pleased to recommend his treatment to others.

WESTFIELD FRIENDLY HOUSE WHERE CHILDREN FROM THE FAR PLACES LEARN TO BE AMERICANS

Out in the rolling mill district beyond the St. Mary's river a little man and a little woman are staring constantly and mendingly at a melting pot that is always on the boil. This caldron is the "Friendly house," the mission settlement of Westfield, as proud householders call their district, and the ingredients that go to make up the conglomerate mass comes from the ends of earth.

Roumanian, Hungarian, Gypsie, Pole, Russian, Jew—they come to their friendly house, each stamped with the brand of his fatherland, and they come out unhyphenated Americans And they come out good Americans, loyal Americans, hopeful, helpful young citizens.

A number of years ago the Rev. T. Pliney Potts and his wife left their Pittsburg home, where the Rev. Mr. Potts was pastor in a large Presbyterian church. For a number of years they had wanted to leave the old field for the mission. So at last they broke away and came to Fort Wayne.

And they found the rolling mill district awaiting them. It was a place in those days in which the unarmed feared to venture alone, and in which murder was looked upon as one of the daily pursuits of those athletically inclined.

The rolling mill district was a place of terror, but somehow or other Mr. Potts felt no fear as he walked out into the midst of it one Sunday afternoon, unbidden and unheralded, and conducted a religious meeting. It was perhaps the first religious ceremony ever performed there, except for perhaps the Oriental semi-barbaric rites that mark certain occasions in the calander of the foreign residents.

After the Sunday meetings had been conducted in the street for a time, the idle curiosity that had caused the gathering of the little knot of residents about the minister had developed into interest. The preaching had its effect. That is the story of the rolling mill Friendly House and Westfield chapel.

Another year found the workers in possession of a little house that they had built, a cheaply constructed affair and cheaply furnished, but it served to keep out the cold and rain, and within its sheltering walls the poor foreigners began to learn and to understand.

For a time Mr. Potts collected about him the men of the district, and Mrs. Potts worked with the women. And although there were many interested, and some who joined in the labors of the missioners, they were all too few. The men seemed satisfied, they were without a conception of a life other than that they led. Some of the younger men came to learn English, some of the women learned housekeeping. But it was a long and uphill grind, one that went on and on and on with little semblance of a termination. It was labor wasted, it seemed, for there was no idealism, there was no striving for anything better among the sodden workers of the mills. They lived in poverty and disease and filth. Their standards were not the standards of men. They seemed satisfied.

The Children, of Cource.

So Mr. and Mrs. Potts turned their attention to another phase of Westfield life. Allowing their classes of the elders to die out naturally they turned their attention to the children. Here among the younger generation they discovered that for which they searched. Here was interest, here was life, the children were striving to lift themselves to a higher level. They were enthusiastic.

That is why every Wednesday afternoon finds some twenty or thirty kiddies collected at the Friendly house for their regular weekly instruction, for the kindergarten classes and their story hour, for their little lessons in domestic science.

Mr. and Mrs. Potts have found that they can get better results and faster results and more lasting results from the children, and it is in this direction that they now are bending their efforts. And they certainly are getting results.

The youngsters are divided into two classes, the kindergarteners and the older ones, the little kiddies coming early in the afternoon and the boys and girls of school age making their appearance shortly after four o'clock.

When one realizes that the public school kindergartens accept no children under five years old, and that babes of one and a half are found in the Friendly House classes, it is easy to see that a difficult proposition is encountered.

And, too, the rolling mill youngsters, or the majority of them, know absolutely no English when they first begin to come, and it is largely through the aid of the mission that English is taught the infants. Their parents rarely know a word of the language of the tongue of their adopted land.

The older boys and girls are taught first, last, always—that cleanliness is next to Godliness, and such instruction certainly is essential. And it certainly is having its results. This is done in many ways, but chiefly by example and experience.

For instance, nothing that is not absolutely clean is tolerated in the house. And the matter of cleanliness is drilled into the boys and girls. After each lesson the boys form in two lines, and under the direction of "Captain Potts" they clean up the room with military precision. At the same time the girls are engaged in the culinary arts.

No hard bread and soup, no mulligan cooking is that at the Friendly House. For the idea is to break the youngsters away from the old ideas and the old standards of living. They are taught to cook eatable things, and healthful things, and to cook them without using both hands and feet and the coal shovel.

"And when you roll the meat and put it in the pan, do you use your fingers?"

"No-o-o," of course not and their eyes all say "perish the thought."

Now the new Friendly House is finished and occupied, and it has everything from stained-glass windows to a bell that's lots of fun to play with. It is the result of years of striving, years of sacrifice on the part of a plucky couple. It is a monument to their labors and their trials and their ultimate success in a life work that is wholly unselfish, that is the true spirit of christianity.

Iola, Kas., Nov. 20.—Dread death is stalking a Kansas family, and picking out its members, one by one—and no one knows how, or why!

From out of the night, unseen hands are striking down a generation—and the victims don't know an enemy!

Shots from the darkness, and other devices so mysterious and devilish as to baffle the best detectives, have been employed in the systematic wiping out of a peaceful, hard-working line.

In mortal terror a whole township is frantically asking:

Who, and for what terrible reason, sent Mrs. Roy Ard, young wife of a respected Elsmore farmer, to an early grave with a bullet in her back?

What midnight assassin waylaid Roy Ard in the darkness of a roadside culvert and sent a bullet whizzing past his ear?

What strange influence caused Elbert Ard, Roy's normal boy cousin, to be adjudged insane and sent to an asylum before the family knew what was going on?

What eerie phantom of the night brought death by terror to Jacob Ard on a deserted river bank—above high water mark without a trace of violence on his body?

Whose unseen pistol fired on Ora Ard, Roy' brother, as he fed his horses in the barnyard in the dusk of early evening?

Where is the untraced source from which threats of death have come to the country prosecutor if he dared push his investigations in the Ard series of tragedies?

So far these questions are unanswered, and the remaining members of the tragedy-stricken family are grimly going about their daily tasks, prepared at any instant to meet death face-to-face.

The tragic events that have distraught Elsmore began in November, 1914, when Mrs. Viola Ard was shot as she rode home in an automobile with Roy Ard, her husband, and a sister.

But not until the murder of Roy Ard was attempted did Elsmore realize that a relentless and hidden vendetta was being enacted in its quiet byways—that a mysterious vengeance without apparent reason was abroad in its very air!

The attempt on Roy's life was made last May; the next month came the secret insanity proceedings against Elbert, a normal, healthy boy, and the awesome death of Jacob Ard; and this month bullets whistled past Ora Ard's head although there wasn't a person in sight!

The county officials, baffled by the mystery, have brought detectives from Kansas City, but they, too, after weeks of inveatigation, have not solved the mystery.

And the question still remains unanswered:

NOV. 11, 1914 MRS. VIOLA ARD SLAIN AS SHE DROVE IN AUTO.
MAY 8, 1915. ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF ROY ARD.
OCT. 10, 1915. A BULLET FIRED AT ORA ARD
JUNE 20, 1915. THE BODY OF JACOB C. ARD FOUND ON THE BANK OF THE MARMATON RIVER.

Marked by death! The above sketches show the mysterious series of tragedies that has fallen the Ard family of the little town of Elsmore, Kas. No one knows who is responsible or what the motive is, not even the members of the family.

Scene from "On Trial," Cohan & Harris' Big Dramatic Production which comes to the Majestic for three days, starting Monday.

IN THE THEATERS

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"A LITTLE GIRL IN A BIG CITY" TONIGHT.

"A Little Girl in a Big City," which will be the attraction at the Majestic again this evening, is said to be not only an intensely interesting play, but it is a great sermon on the abolition of a great evil. It holds up the mirror of actual truth of conditions now prevailing in most any large city, and it has a powerful influence in arousing public sentiment.

NOTABLE OFFERING MONDAY.

At the Majestic, beginning Monday, for three days, with a matinee on Wednesday, Cohan and Harris will present the sensational success of the New York season, "On Trial." This promises to be one of the most novel offerings of the season. It will furnish the opportunity to see not only melodrama at its best, that is to say, its modern development, but the structure of the play is wholly individual. The theme of the story belongs to the much repeated seven, which are said to constitute the basis of all dramas and all novels. But the handling of the theme is so different from anything hitherto attempted, and the work is so faithfully and efficiently performed that the audience is treated to a succession of thrills which stir the very soul.

It is commonplace for a man to rush wildly out of his house to kill the man who wrongs his wife. That has been done so many times that the confirmed theatergoer doesn't care particularly for it unless some of the actors are famous. But in "On Trial," the commonplace has been reconstructed and redressed until it appears new and instead of a succession of yawns, the audience meets the continuous series of exciting episodes with a series of gasps.

The curtain goes up on a court room. The scene is the trial of Robert Strickland for the murder of Gerald Trask. Mrs. Trask is called to the stand to testify to the events which took place in her home on the night of the murder. She barely begins her testimony when the stage is shrouded in darkness and the scene is shifted to Trask's home. Instead of the testimony the actual scene is enacted. When it is completed darkness shuts out the home and as suddenly the court room reappears. Mrs. Trask completes her testimony and the trial proceeds.

These changes are made six times and this constitutes the effective feature of the play. A commonplace story is worked out so effectually and originally that the audience sees what takes place instead of listening to the testimony. And it is a pleasing variation of the old method of handling such a theme. It affords opportunity for strongly emotional scenes which are worked up to so naturally that they do not appear forced, and which carry the audience forward so irresistibly that every person actually lives through the scenes with the actors. It would be difficult to conceive anything more calculated to stir the emotions of the audience.

The author of the play is Elmer L. Reizenstein, a young man scarcely twenty-three years old when the work was completed. It was his first attempt and the play was accepted by the producing firm of Cohan & Harris, because of its fresh treatment of story and plot. The play has been running for months in New York to crowded houses.

MISS GLEASON, AN EMPRESS FAVORITE

There has been but few stock theatergoers who have not enjoyed the success of having their people become favorites the first one or two weeks that they are in the city. Not so with Miss Gleason, for everywhere you go you can hear patrons of the Empress saying that they certainly have enjoyed the performances and that every one of the people are "just great." Miss Gleason has become very popular in her short stay in this city.

two million people have read the book and as the years go by the sale of it increases rather than diminishes. Some of the quotations from it have come to be household maxims.

"There isn't a new sorrow in the world—they're all old ones—but we can all find new happiness if we look for it in the right way."

"If women couldn't cry, they'd explode."

"Sometimes, out of bitterness, the years distill forgiveness."

"We deliberately make nearly all of our unhappiness with our own unreasonable discontent, but nothing will ever make us happy, dearie, except the spirit within."

"Men folks have got terribly curious minds."

"In spite of the advanced age in which we live, I can't help thinking home is the place for a woman, after all."

AT THE EMPRESS.

Your last opportunity of seeing the greatest comedy ever written comes tonight when the final presentation of "Charlie's Aunt" with Walter Poulter in the leading part, will occur at the Empress theater. "Charlie's Aunt" is the funniest, most enjoyable comedy ever penned and that Fort Wayne audiences enjoy it thoroughly is evidenced by the big audiences which have greeted its every performance.

Next week the attraction at the Empress will be that famous success, which has never before been seen in this city, "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." McLain Gates and Miss Helen Gleason, the popular leading man and leading woman of the Empress organization, will play the leading roles in this most pretentious production yet made at the Empress since stock was instituted at this theater.

The action of "Hawthorne" is laid in a mythical kingdom where Hawthorne, who is proud that he is a citizen of the United States, does things that made the residents of the kingdom sit up and take notice. He does things so easily and so effectively that he gets by with stuff that simply makes the natives gape with astonishment.

In the original production Douglas Fairbanks and Miss Irene Fenwick played the principal roles and made the greatest successes of their careers. "Hawthorne" not only has never been seen in this city but it has never been presented so sumptuously at such popular prices. It is a great treat that is in store for local people at the Empress theater next week.

AT KEITH PALACE

For the big Thanksgiving bill which opens at the Palace Monday matinee, Manager Stouder has secured a list of attractions for which theater goers should be truly thankful. Heading the bill will be Claud and Fanny Usher, presenting their latest success, "The Straight Path." The playlet is full of heart throbs and tears, but for every one there is a laugh to chase it away. Miss Usher as usual, plays the part of a child, a little girl temporarily blind, and the play deals with the efforts of the child to win back to his home her brother who has become entangled in the meshes of business.

The big dancing feature, "The Six American Dancers," are next on the bill. They will present a number of dances that have set New York talking, closing with their "Six Periods in American History." The dance represents six periods, each produced in appropriate costume.

Charles Olcott will appear in his travesty on grand opera stars. He has studied the idiosyncracies of the international celebrities and his impersonations are wonderfully like the characters from which they are drawn. Mr. Olcott was for two years the star with "The Matinee Girls."

There are tongoists and tangoists, but only one Bertie Ford who does the tango on the wire. He flits and skips about, sending thrills chasing each other up and down every spine in the audience. He seems to have no difficulty in maintaining his balance on the wire and does with ease some feats that many can not perform on a floor.

Fay & Templeton will present "Loose Pages From the Book of Fun." As the name indicates the act is a laugh producer, and comes with a guarantee.

Breathing a spirit of good cheer, John T. Ray and Grace Billiard will present "Hello Sally." The playlet, by Herbert Winslow, offers unusual opportunity for good acting, genuine fun and excellent singing. The work of the two artists upholds their reputation as capable actors, while the vehicle itself is one of the best of the late crop of playlets.

Request Week.

Following a number of requests from Temple patrons that this or that act be brought to the Palace, Manager Stouder has inaugurated "Request Week." This special period will be during the week following Thanksgiving and on the bill then will be the seven acts for which the most requests have been received. Every act on the bill is now playing as a headliner in the east.

AT THE JEFFERSON.

The Miracle of Life, interpreted by the impressive emotional actress, Margarita Fischer, is a real novelty. This virile drama handles the problem of race suicide with great force and delicacy. This play cannot help affecting every one that sees it. The rich are just as much interested as the poor. Public sentiment has been stirred, and there is no doubt but that The Miracle of Life will have a marked effect on the whole country.

Lest the famous plot be forgotten—Bella Donna is an adventuress whose beauty leads the Hon. Nigel Armine to marry her, unsuspecting that the stories which have been circulated in London concerning her escapades are based upon fact. They go to Egypt, where Bella Donna, soon tiring of Armine, becomes fascinated by Baroudi, a powerful native, who induces her to poison her husband. Before Bella Donna succeeds in carrying out her intention to the full, Dr. Isaacson, an old friend of Armine, arrives in time to save his life. Her purpose defeated, Bella Donna pours out a tororent of hate and abuse upon Armine's head and departs for Baroudi's home.

To her horror, Baroudi discards her and when she returns repentant to her home, she is turned away by Isaacson before she can appeal to the sympathies of her husband. Alone and forlorn, she stands looking out into the black night across the bleak desert that typifies her wasted life.

LAVENDER AND OLD LACE.

Majestic's Thanksgiving Offering, Matinee and Night.

In "Lavender and Old Lace," which appears at the Majestic Thanksgiving, theater patrons will have an opportunity to see a play, while different in its make-up, still as entertaining as "Peg O' My Heart."

The attraction is under the management of the Putnam Producing Co. (Inc.) "Lavender and Old Lace" is a story of a quaint corner of New England, where bygone romance finds a modern parallel. It is a gentle, old-fashioned love story, full of the kind of sentiment that rings true. Probably no work of fiction in recent years has enjoyed such well merited popularity. It is said that more than

She Lived Two Centuries Ago, She Died Two Centuries Ago, and Yet She is in the World Today Through Medium of Ouija-Board.

By Leon Starmont.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 20.—This introduces Patience Worth—poet, philosopher, woman of wisdom—who lived 200 years ago and talks today!

Her habitat is the hereafter, but she speaks to the world at large from the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Curran, at 1363 Union-blvd, St. Louis.

She speaks by means of the ouija-board, a little heart-shaped contrivance, mounted on two wheels, with a pointer at the tip. This pointer spells out words on a lettered board—words, in this case, which the operator cannot always understand.

From the pointer at the tip of this heart have come poetry, humor, gripping drama—and a running fire of comment on the foibles of this century that has kept her hearers laughing and bewildered!

Also a novel, "Telka," of 60,000 words!

Persons of Prominence Convinced.

Mrs. Curran usually has her fingers on the tip end of the heart, and it is through Mrs. Curran as a medium that the best results are obtained. Mrs. Curran is not a spiritualist; she started using the ouija-board largely as a "joke"—quite as you or I would start it.

She is a woman of education, but not of a higher education—she does not understand the origins of the English language, or the forms of words in use 200 years ago.

Yet the messages from Patience Worth are couched entirely in ancient English—not a word of modern origin has been found in them. Mrs. Curran couldn't "fake" those messages. Neither could you, or anybody else.

Among the persons who came to scoff and who have been converted, are Wm. Marion Reedy, editor of the St. Louis Mirror, and "discoverer" of Elbert Hubbard; Casper S. Yost, editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, a widely known literary critic; C. Edwin Hutchings, secretary of a city park commission, and Mrs. Hutchings, who most frequently holds her hands on the board with Mrs. Curran. Curran himself is a former state immigration commission, who is now in business in St. Louis.

How the Messages Are Received.

A brilliantly lighted parlor in the Curran home. Mrs. Curran and Mrs. Hutchings with their hands on the ouija-board; Mrs. Curran's mother, Mrs. Pollard, at their side with pencil and note-book. Grouped about are several others.

One, a physician, skeptically remarks: "I hope Patience will come; I'd like to find out what her game is!"

Almost instantly the board, under the fingers of Mrs. Curran and Mrs. Hutchings, begins to move. Mrs. Hutchings calls out the letters as the pointer jumps to them, and Mrs. Pollard takes down the message. This is it:

"Dost, then, desire the plucking of another goose?"

The physician smiled. "Right there with the grease, isn't she!" he remarked.

The pointer spelled this reply:

"Enough to baste the last upon the spit!"

The doctor wanted the board turned over so he could see what was under it. This was done. Then Patience spelled:

"Thee'lt bump thy nose to look within the hopper!"

That's Patience Worth's manner of speech.

The other day she called William Marion Reedy "thou fat-awide!"

When she has "kidded" those present a little while she generally indicates that they have had enough amusement, and will now have to do a little work for her.

Dictates Dramas and Poetry.

"Think ye I be a doler o' wares without a price?" the pointer said. "Yea, and do ye work for the tale of me, I do for to fetch out sweets!"

Then came a few chapters of a story which the Currans have named "Panda," and which they have been taking for a few weeks. Patience scorns all titles, either for her dramas, novels or poems.

When poetry is coming from the ouija-board the house is in absolute silence, save for occasional expressions of wonder from the listeners. Much of the poetry is fragmentary, but all of it has a primeval beauty, which has led the enthusiastic Yost to say that it rivals Shakespeare! Yost is even collecting some of the verses into a book, which he is to publish soon under the title, "The Mystery of Patience Worth!"

(Note by Editor—Our correspondent has promised a few samples of the verse, which will be published tomorrow).

Patience Worth's answers to questions make it appear that she was "alive" in the year 1649, although whether that is the date of her birth she does not state. At one time the ouija-board followed the date 1649 with 94, which some among the company took to be the year of her death; but questioned on this point, she refused to say.

"Across the sea" is the only answer she has given as to her home on earth. From some of her nature references the Currans believe she was born in England and came to the American colonies.

May Answer Mysteries of the Ages.

Patience expressed disapproval one evening when Curran and Hutchings had gone together to a musical comedy in a St. Louis theater.

"Mayhap thou sendest thy men for barleycorn," the pointer spelled. "'Twould then surprise thee should the asses eat it!"

"What is she driving at?" Mrs. Hutchings wondered.

"Patience, what are they seeing there?" Mrs. Hutchings asked.

The answer came:

"Ne'er a timid wench, I vum. My pettieskirt ye may borrow for the brazens!"

Reedy has started asking questions along religious and historical lines. One was:

"Did Bacon write Shakespeare's plays?"

"What hath earth but stones for him to walketh shoon o' skins, sewn o' thong and crusts!" asked the ouija-board.

Reedy interpreted the "shoon o' skins" to refer to Shakespeare's being an actor of sock and buskin, and believes the answer of Patience to mean that Shakespeare wrote his own plays, but the world withheld credit, as actors in his days bore ill repute.

Reedy hopes, by persistent questioning, to obtain a clue as to the state of the hereafter.

Whether you have faith in these revelations or not, don't you agree that it is a most remarkable narrative?

THE OUIJA-BOARD; WHAT IT IS.

The ouija-board is a later and "improved" form of the planchette, which was invented in 1855 and was the object at that time of considerable superstition. The original planchette was a heart-shaped board seven or eight inches wide, mounted on two wheels and a pencil. The pencil was supposed to write words and messages when two persons with the proper psychic touch put their hands on it.

The ouija-board does not write with a pencil. It has a pointer, at the tip of the heart, and points out letters and figures on a board provided for that purpose. The letters are arranged in two semi-circles; in the upper corners of the board are the words "yes" and "no" and at the bottom are numerals.

Serious scientists never have attached any importance to the messages, maintaining they were the results of involuntary thoughts of the operators.

No communication of importance ever was received in this manner before the present manifestations at the Curran home in St. Louis.

Mrs. John H. Curran, of St. Louis, through whose finger-tips on the Ouija-Board have come some of the most remarkable poems, novels and dramas in the English language!

IT'S RATHER UNUSUAL

—for three little girls in one family to have their birthday on the same day each year, but that's the fun the youngsters in the above picture have. They're the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McGowan, of Birmingham, Ala., and all were born on Nov. 9 of different years. They're 8, 6 and 2.

TRACK ELEVATION PLANS EXAMINED

Mayor William J. Hosey, Members Kelly, Singrey and Hilgeman, of the board of works, City Attorney Guy Colerick and City Engineer F. M. Randall spent Saturday forenoon in a minute examination of the plans submitted by the Pennsylvania and Wabash railroads for track elevation east of Calhoun street, and at the conclusion of the labor prepared letters to Vice President J. J. Turner, of the Pennsylvania, and President Edward F. Kierney, of the Wabash, setting forth the official view of the proposals. The letters were forwarded Saturday afternoon. The examination of the plans was to enable the officials to ascertain what exceptions should be taken to the proposals as to grades, clearances and other details in which the city is vitally interested. The officials had no details to give out, but it has been known that the plans submitted by the railroads were not in their entirety satisfactory to the city. The letters just forwarded will bring the differences to an issue.

EXAMINE MONUMENT SITES.

On invitation of the Anthony Wayne monument commission, the board of works joined the commission, Saturday afternoon, for a tour of inspection of the various sites proposed and suggested for the location of the monument to be erected to the memory of General Anthony Wayne, for which funds are now in large part in hand. Swinney park, Old Fort park, Hayden park and points along Wayne trace were on the schedule of places to be visited.

BOARD WANTS ADVICES.

The board of safety has deferred any action looking to better regulations for the parking of automobiles down town until after advices have been received from the five business organizations interested in an improved situation. At the meeting of the board Friday night Chief of Police Charles Lenz reported a new schedule for the traffic officers. The board acceded to the request of Chief Lenz for an automobile for emergency work of the department, and the board will ask the controller to recommend an appropriation of $1,000 for the purpose. The board is preparing specifications for the new patrol wagon for which the council appropriated $1,500.

MANY ADMIRE THE NEW OVERLAND CAR

Expectancy regarding the new Overland car known as Model 75, which has been at fever heat for several weeks since its announcement was made, has been more than realized to the hundreds of people who have seen this beautiful wonder at the Fort Wayne Overland company's salesrooms in the past two days. This marvel of automobile production at $595 and $615 is a surprise to the motoring public as nothing approaching it has even been offered, and that it will be a general favorite and a big seller goes without saying. Model 75 possesses all the lines of beautiful style and at the same time has the economical advantages that are coming to be such an important factor in car construction these days. This car, completley equipped, makes a strong bid for public favor, and the business of the Fort Wayne Overland company, already the most important distributing agency in the state, will be largely increased by the introduction of this new Overland 75.

SHOW DRY-CLEANING IS SUPERIOR TO WET

The essential difference was that Conductor Ray Dodson was entirely sober, whereas Taylor Glusenkamp and George H. Craig were soused when the pair got aboard a West Main street car, Friday night, and avowed their intent to "clean up" the crew. Conductor Dodson refunded their fare and told them to get off. They didn't betray any notion of getting off and received instant and efficacious help from the conductor. Dodson polished both rowdies neatly and Saturday morning had them in the city court on charges of disorderly conduct, both of them being found guilty and fined $25 and costs each. They paid. The trouble occurred shortly after the stoning of a car had been reported on West Main street.

Junk Buyers Are Fined.

Rudolph Guthman, a buyer in the employ of William Wunderlin and company, and Louis Uecker, employed in a similar capacity by Weil Bros. & Company, entered pleas of guilty in the city court, Saturday, to charges of purchasing junk from minors. Each was fined $25 and costs. The two men had bought brass, lead and rubber from Ralph Mentzer and John Bowers, both 14-year-old lads, who had stolen the stuff they sold. Investigation of several thefts by Detective Sergeants Walter Immel and Martin A. Rundell led to the arrest of the junk buyers.

Other City Court Cases.

Earl Stevens, formerly a street car motorman, who came here at the beginning of the strike, but has returned to Indianapolis, was found not guilty of malicious trespass, a charge brought against him by Herbert Gladbach, who said Stevens had purposely ran his car into the complaining witness' jitney bus at Calhoun and Baker streets, one night a week or two ago. It was developed in the hearing that it was from Conductor Ross Dickinson and not Motorman Stevens that a bottle of whisky was taken by the police that night.

Pearl Farber, arrested several days ago, during a police raid on Burr street, was fined $15 and costs and given a suspended jail sentence of fifteen days on a charge of prostitution.

Frank Porter, who had been living for some months at the Rescue Home mission on Columbia street, was charged with disorderly conduct and continued until Tuesday under $200 bond. He was arrested on complaint of those in charge of the mission after he had been flourishing a knife in the place, Friday night. The man is thought to be demented.

William Murray, an actor, was arraigned on a charge of petit larceny for stealing a typewriter. He had borrowed a ring of a fellow actor and pawned it and then stole the typewriter; it is said, to get money to redeem the ring. Judge Kerr continued the case for further investigation and Murray went to jail in default of $500 bond.

Joe Shay and Arthur Dolan, drunks, and George Aber and Kenneth Evans, charged with disorderly conduct, were turned loose.

Neireiter was tried on a charge of assault and battery on Frank W. Rastenberg. The men are related and the trouble grew out of a family row. Judge Kerr continued the case a month and released Neireiter on his own recognizance.

ADMITS HE IS GIFFORD.

To Chief of Police Charles Lenz admission was made by Charles L. Warren or Commodore Perry Hull, the check swindler and husband of Beulah Youse-Warren, that he is the escaped convict, B. J. Gifford, wanted by the authorities of the Kansas state prison at Lansing to complete a term there for obtaining money by false pretenses. He denied, however, that he has a wife in Leavenworth, known as Cora Gifford. He said he had been married once, but that his former wife is dead. When first arrested Warren denied that he ever had been married.

LOCATE MISSING GIRL.

Hazel, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mays, of Eliza street, who has been missing from home since Tuesday, has been located at the home of an aunt in Auburn. She was found by Sheriff John Hoff at Auburn, from whom Motorcycle Officer John Lynch, of the city police, learned the facts.

Overland

The New Model 75 Is Here

Overland

Roadster $595

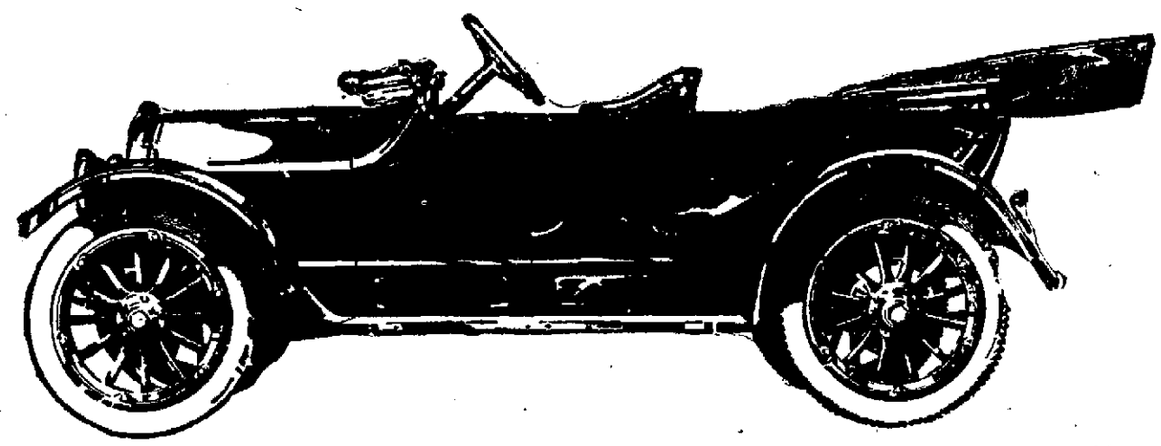
Four-Inch Tires



HERE is another Overland model. A brand-new car at a brand-new price. Many people prefer a car that is smaller, lighter and more economical to run, but with the advantages of the larger and higher priced cars.

Model 75 is a comfortable family car with virtually all the advantages of the very large cars at a price which is well within your reach.

The price is only $615!

It has a powerful motor; electric starting and lighting system; high-tension magneto ignition; 104-inch wheelbase; cantilever springs; four-inch tires; demountable rims; streamline body design.

This season the Willys-Overland factory capacity has been increased to 600 cars a day.

This, in itself, explains our ability to give so much car for so little money.

This newest Overland is a beauty.

Five adults can ride comfortably.

It has demountable rims with one extra.

The tires are four-inch all around, because we believe in the advantage of large tires.

They insure greater mileage and comfort than can be obtained from the smaller size used on other cars of similar specifications.

The motor is four-cylinder, long-stroke en-bloc type, having a 3¼-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. Horsepower is 20-25. It is of the most modern design.

It has high-tension magneto ignition. This is the kind used on the most expensive cars.

The large electric headlights have dimmers.

This car is very easy to handle. It responds quickly. Anyone in the family can drive it.

The electric switches are conveniently located on the steering column. This is the same arrangement used on the highest priced cars.

It has the easy working Overland clutch which any woman can operate. The pedals are adjustable for reach. The steering wheel is large and turns easily.

The brakes are large and powerful.

The rear springs are the famous cantilever type. These are probably the easiest riding and most shock-absorbing springs ever designed. With these springs riding comfort is assured.

It has a mohair one-man top.

In short, there is everything that makes this car up-to-date and comparable with many cars costing considerably more money.

You will be delighted when you see it. And when you ride in it you'll know instantly that this is your ideal of a modern automobile at your idea of a moderate price.

Other Overland models are—Model 83 five-passengers touring car $750; the famous Overland Six seven-passenger touring car $1145. All prices being f. o. b. Toledo.

See the Overland dealer in your town.

"If I Could Have Legally Prevented Birth of Hopeless Baby, I Would Have Done It," Declares Dr. Haiselden

BY DR. H. J. HAISELDEN.
Written for The Sentinel.

The case of the Bollinger baby is a strong argument for birth control. The mother's condition was undermined by illness, had no vitality to give the child. She feared it would be subnormal, and expressed this fear as soon as the baby was born though she never saw it. She said: "I know there is something wrong."

If I could have legally prevented the birth of the child I would have done it. I am not her physician; I was not asked for advice.

Parents rendered defective, even temporarily defective, by disease, should prevent the birth of children. I am an advocate of birth control among defectives.

By letting this half alive baby die I have saved hundreds of human beings from suffering.

He could perpetuate the race though there is nothing else that he could do.

There'd be no power in his mind or body to help himself, yet he could breed his kind, and help people the world with defectives.

Sterilize defectives in this generation and we will have 50 per cent. less defectives in the next.

Sterilize defectives for three generations and we will have a nearly normal race.

"I shall adopt more children from time to time. I shall try to give them a real home, for no one has seen more of the pitiful end of institutions for children than I have."

As he made this statement, Dr. Haiselden, branded by millions as a man without a conscience and a "murderer," and as a twentieth century humanitarian by many other millions, sat at a table in his comfortable residence in Diversey parkway.

DR. H. HAISELDEN

On each side of him sat his adopted daughters, Baby Hope carefully tucked in her high chair, while Dorothy, the older, was kept busy jumping up from her chair to answer the telephone, which was ringing incessantly with messages of praise and criticism.

"Ten years ago when 20 small orphan children were sent on from New York I secured homes for five of them. The one, a girl of 5, came and sat on my knee. I adopted her. That is Dorothy. She is now 15 years old and doing nicely. I hope to send her through high school and give her a year or two at college.

"Little Hope's mother abandoned her in the German-American hospital and so I took her to raise. She is 17 months old now.

"I have only my conscience as a guide," declares Dr. Haiselden. "Dr. Robertson, commissioner of health, asked me to operate just to clear the atmosphere, but after he had looked at the child he said it would have but one chance in a thousand to live, and I refused to recede one-sixteen thousandth of an inch from my position."

Where Eugenics Originated.

The theory of eugenics originated in ancient Sparta, in Greece. A child born to Spartan parents had no legal standing until its physical fitness had been passed upon by certain officials, who determined whether it should live or die. If it gave promise of developing into an able bodied citizen, capable of withstanding the intensive physical training in youth, preparatory to a service of arms, beginning about the age of 21, the child was permitted to live.

If the baby was weak and possibly defective its parents were compelled to turn it out on the mountains to perish or to dispose of it in other ways.

This practice also was followed by the Athenians, not so much as a measure in military efficiency, as a purely social one, to insure a strong, vigorous, virile country. And the Greeks continued for ages to be the most militant, unconquerable people in the world. There were few feeble minded and no cripples, save those wounded in war.

BY MRS. ANNA BOLLINGER.

"I loved my baby and because I loved it, I let it slip painlessly out of this world rather than keep it here to live a life of ceaseless pain," declared Mrs. Anna Bollinger, of Chicago, a few hours after her baby, a defective, was allowed to die.

"I suffered to bring my baby into the world. I suffered to see it taken away again. But the suffering is mine.

"I saved my baby from a life that would be filled with humiliation and sorrow. If I was sure I would always be near him to watch over him I might not have consented to let him die. But how could I tell I would be spared to him, and without a mother's protection he would be a burden to the world.

"He is better out of the world!"

DR. HAISELDEN HAS TWO ADOPTED DAUGHTERS.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—It was not because he is reckless with the lives of little children but because he loves them that Dr Harry J. Haiselden let the Bollinger baby, a newly born defective, die rather than perform an operation that might have saved its life.

He wants the world to know this, he declared, shortly after the painless death of the tiny misshapen infant that has made him the center of a nation-wide storm of discussion.

And he wants the world to know that even though he is a bachelor, he has two adopted daughters upon whom he lavishes all the affection and care of a devoted father.

One is Beulah Hope Wesley, a pretty, curly haired baby of 17 months, the other is Dorothy Riggs, a strong, happy, romping girl of 15 years.

It was the same love and tenderness for children that prompted him to take these two waifs into his own life and make a home for them that led him to refuse to even try to save the little Bollinger baby, for the life of misery that Fate had in store for it—had it lived.

BIG GUNS MAY BE ENGULFED IN SNOW

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 30.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—In the semi-circle from Trent to Trieste, where Austro-Germans and Italians are fighting for supremacy, military operations will be seriously affected by snow. Neither side dares to advance large guns which may be lost in a night, owing to a heavy snowfall.

On the Austro-Italian frontier where fighting is taking place at ten thousand feet above sea level over several miles of mountains where every little pass means a small battle, weather conditions and snow are important factors. On these mountains ordinary regiments, however brave, are practically useless as they cannot stand the climate and only Alpine troops on both sides are being utilized.

Since the beginning of October several feet of snow has fallen in the Swiss Tyrolese and Italian Alps above 9,000 feet and there is besides always the danger of an avalanche. Under these conditions Alpine warfare will be impossible even for a strong force. The men and mountain artillery are practically buried in deep snow in the higher Alps and the attack must be postponed until spring. Thus Italy feels secure from an invasion of Lombardy and Venetia during the winter and can employ her reserve forces for other spheres.

On the Isonzo(however, it is another matter for the country around is a plain and there is little doubt that the Italian army will attempt to force its way to Trieste and Fiume via Tolmino and Goritza this winter. Daily the attacks on these two towns on the main railway are becoming fiercer. The Italians continue to bring up more heavy artillery which now is in a semi-circle around both cities.

LEISURE

BY EDNA EGAN.

AS children we frequently heard our elders quote the old saying: "Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do." We heard it when we preferred to play tag outdoors rather than study school lessons; when we wanted to read "Rob Roy" and let somebody else do the dishes; whenever, in fact, we wanted to do something different from what our elders thought we ought to do. At least that's the way we felt about it—when we were youngsters.

And now we are told that "idleness breeds crime."

And it is probably true that if we were to turn the vast masses of workers out of their jobs and let them roam the world without anything to keep their noses to the daily grind, a good many of them would take up criminal pursuits to get some excitement out of life.

But I would like to modify the blunt statement that "idleness breeds crime." Let us rather say that idleness coupled with poverty is the great crime breeder. I am speaking of adults in this connection. Children are in a different class.

It's the idle man who has tramped the streets looking for work, who's come down to his last nickel, who perhaps has a dependent family waiting for the bread he hopes to bring them, who in time grows desperate and begins to take what nobody will give him in exchange for his labor.

One cannot say that the professional criminal is idle. He isn't. He is a mighty busy man. He has to be. He is probably putting in more licks of hard work and hard thinking than many an honest worker who complains of long hours and insufficient pay. He may have started life with criminal tendencies. He may have become contaminated by associates of his youth. He may have the get-rich-quick spirit and think he can accomplish luxuries and leisure by a quicker route than that of honorable toil, so he is willing to use all his energies and to labor overtime until he gets what he wants, worrying about getting caught at his game.

It is true that work is good for most of us. But so is leisure, and most of us don't have enough of the latter to get the best out of this one life.

There is another proverb that we sometimes overheard our parents quote (when they thought we weren't listening)—"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

For a good many years we had a creed that the only way to keep men or women good was to work them to death. We didn't consider ourselves virtuous unless we ended each day so toil-wearied that we had no ambition for anything but bed. When we had a holiday we didn't know how to use it, and either slept it away or did something that landed us in jail.

The doctors are telling us now that there is a fatigue poison; that we owe it to ourselves not to overwork. The great labor unions are demanding shorter hours and graded work, so that men and women workers shall not be overtaxed, and so that the few may not be overworked and underpaid at the expense of the many.

We are learning very, very gradually, that man was not created to labor eighteen hours out of the twenty-four in order that he may have the privilege of eating and sleeping. Very, very gradually we are being taught that we are partners in God's pasture, and that, rich or poor, we have the right to take our share of sunshine and fresh air and idle time to enjoy them.

A fair measure of leisure in each day is necessary to cultivate sweetness and saneness of soul, and the man or woman, boy or girl, so overworked that there is no opportunity for recreation never reaches the higher planes of being. Indeed, too much work has often been as much a breeder of crime as too much idleness.

I believe it is in one of Aesop's fables where we are told of the man who was so busy grubbing in the muck heap that he never had time to look up and see the crown above his head.

ODDS AND ENDS

MANY women realize the importance of the afternoon nap, which, to be of any value, should be taken in the quiet of her own sleeping room. One hesitates to crumple the regular bed pillow cover, hence the necessity of the slumber pillow. It should be as dainty and cool-looking as possible and have little embroidery except in the corners. Linen is the most satisfactory material, as it may be washed often and kept sweet and dainty. The cover may be made of a delicately tinted linen embroidered in white or white embroidered in white. The design should be worked in French embroidery, the flower petals lightly padded. The leaf sprays inclosed groups of French knots.

TO fringe with the least possible trouble, clip the edge of the crash or linen up from the bottom at distances of six to eight inches. Each clip should be the depth of the fringe you intend to make. The drawing out of these shorter threads will often prove less laborious and not so injurious to the material. It is well to know, also, that the drawing of linen threads is made easier if the dressing has first been removed. Brush a heavy lather made from good white soap along the space from which you wish to draw the threads. Let this dry in and it will disturb the original dressing so that the threads may be more readily drawn out.

NOW that veils are so fashionable, and every well dressed woman has half a dozen or more different sorts of veils to take care of, the resourceful needleworker is busily evolving convenient receptacles in which to keep them. One veil may be folded up, thrust through with a pin and tossed into the bureau drawer, but when there are six or seven veils to look after disaster will certainly follow this method, and the moment a veil becomes crushed and tangled up among half a dozen of its fellows its freshness and becomingness are ruined. The best way to keep a number of veils spick and span is to have a long veil case of cretonne or silk, in which the veils may be kept, each folded flat over a separate piece of cardboard. When the veil is removed from the hat, fold it immediately around the cardboard, which should be long enough to reach from one edge of the veil to the other. The case should be a little longer than the cardboard strips and a little wider than their width—say about five inches wide by eighteen long.

WHEN hot cake or waffle batter is left over, try adding flour to make a fairly stiff batter and a little sugar and flavoring. Drop by spoonfuls in a flat pan and top with a canned cherry or strawberry, bake in a quick oven. This makes excellent soft cookies for the children.

A USEFUL and simple test to try the heat of an oven is by means of a piece of white paper. If too hot, the paper when placed in the oven will blaze up or blacken. When the paper becomes dark brown, the color of meat pie crust, then the oven is suitable for small pastry. When light brown, the color of real nice pastry, then the oven is ready for pies, etc. When the paper turns dark yellow you can bake bread, large meat pies or large pound cakes. If the paper is just tinged, the oven is right for sponge cakes and meringues. The temperature of an oven may be easily reduced, while cooking, by placing a bowl of water in it.

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

BY MRS. KINGSLEY.

ELABORATE evening gowns are developed in chiffon, the skirts being ruffled with taffeta, velvet or faille. Rich silver brocaded gros grains are also a favored material for evening gowns.

The tight-fitting seamed waists of the 1836 period worn with full cloth or satin skirts are a marked feature. Many of these were seen, the bodice of which being developed in brilliant colored velvet—turquoise, rose, old gold, etc.—with short, full basques, and the skirts being of white satin or of spangled lace.

Black velvet waists are also shown with skirts of black gros grain, the skirts banded at the bottom with wide black velvet ribbon.

Very pretty and useful is a tea gown of weak tea color in the finest and softest of chiffon finished broadcloth, finished with a quantity of tea colored lace, and completed by a high girdle of black jet interspersed with silver.

We have already mentioned the prevailing vogue for combining widely differing fabrics in one frock. It was specified, among other combinations, the happy marriage of woolens and silks.

For the benefit of those who recall the presentation of such combination in former years, for those who fail to discern wherein its smartness resides, it must be stated that the combination recipe is reversed. Yesterday's formula specified the woolen fabrics as the material for the costume proper with silk as the ingredient used for embellishment. The prescription for the prevailing mode calls for silk as the frock fabric with woolen weaves for trimming.

Practically all of the Parisian style creators have sponsored this combination. One finds it employed in many of the imported afternoon frock models, while here and there it is noticeable among French coat suit models. In the last named, of course, the idea is not attempted in any but suits for after noon, church or reception wear. The silk coat suit has no place among the wardrobe's garments destined for strictly practical purposes.

French serge, chiffon gabardine and broadcloth—only the woolen fabric of soft, pliable weave lends itself to this mode. As for the silk partner of the combination—here one may indulge one's fancy to the limit. Taffeta is good, but it recognizes a formidable rival in satin. Faille is favored for afternoon costumes. The dignified severity of brocade is softened and modified by trimming of woolen weave.

"It's all very well for you slim women," sighed a plump person the other day after she had spent an afternoon in shopping, looking for a suitable and becoming frock, "but what is a woman of my proportion to do when she is asked to wear the present styles? Now, any one knows that full skirts, baggy coats, which flare at the hips and button up tight at the throat, will accentuate all the bad points of the person who is given to avoirdupois. I'm not holding forth for the hobble—that was as bad in its way for fat woman as the skirt which is four yards round at the hem—but I do decry the tendency of fashions to cater only to the slim woman and to refuse to recognize the fact that her fatter sister is just at much, if not more, in need of the right clothes.

"Now, take any one of the suits I saw this afternoon in the shops. All of them were ridiculously short and this is fatal to a fat woman. What she needs is height to take away from her breadth, and with a skirt cut to her ankles she has no chance of lengthening her inches. Then the coats invariably flare at the hips. This is usually a sore point with the plump person, and to exaggerate her size by a flare is a cruel trick of Dame Fashion. As for the 'choker' collar, so chic at the present moment, it is torment to the stout woman, who is, as a rule, short necked. It is quite impossible to force a five-inch upstanding collar onto a two-inch neck, and yet this is just what we poor plump women are asked to do.

"As for evening gowns, they include draperies at the hips, full flounces and other sartorical impossibilities for the woman whose chief aim in dressing is to disguise the fact that she tips the scales at 165 or 170 pounds. Now, what is one to do when all fashions are made for the slim and you happen to be proportioned on more generous dimensions?"

The answer is comparatively easy after you know it. It is simply this: Take the best features that fashion offers, adapt them to your needs, ignore the others, and you will appear well dressed.

ART OF SUCCESS

THE convictions that you are going to succeed is one that goes a long way to help in success.

"A successful business career is just one conviction after another," said a woman who has made an extraordinary success with a diet kitchen.

You cannot convince another of the value of what you have to give, be it service or goods, unless you have first convinced yourself. The conviction that you have a good thing is half the battle with a salesman or saleswoman, or the agent for a company.

The conviction that what you propose to do you can do well will get you a situation about as quickly as anything. And once secured you aren't liable to be chucked. For a conviction to be a real power must be based on the truth. Only the fool is convinced of something that does not exist.

But many a girl who has every right to the conviction that she is worth a good salary, that she has the goods to deliver and can prove it, lacks it. She doesn't believe in herself with sufficient energy to make any one else believe in her.

Convictions are the best sort of advertisement, and today we live by advertising. No successful business would last a day without the conviction of the men behind it that it's a corker. Many a poor business grows to be a fine one because its owner is convinced that the opportunity exists, and has the same strong conviction that he is the man to meet it.

Study up on convictions, girls. If you know you can do a thing well, have the courage to say so, and to say so in a way that will carry conviction to the other fellow. Don't be timid; be confident. We are told that faith will move mountains. Without it many a good thing has gone to waste. Faith in yourself is an essential to business success as a proper education for the job you are trying for; maybe more essential.

BEAUTY

BEAUTIFUL hands are a sign of good breeding, it is said, and certain it is that no one who neglects her hands can expect them to look well. Only regular attention and steady care bring forth any results in beautyfying the hands. The girl who works for her living need not despair, however, for if she will devote a few moments each night to her hands they will look almost as well as those of the lady of leisure.

Be careful first of all, as to how the hands are washed, in tepid water is the most satisfactory, for it is not too cold to remove the dirt and not too hot to redden the flesh. Constantly changing soap is very bad for the skin. A good soap should be selected and be used regularly without change. Be sure that all the soap is off the hands then dry thoroughly, so that the flesh is not left damp and moist.

Careless washing and imperfect drying are the reasons for more red, unsightly hands than anything else. The slightest dampness of the skin in cold weather will make the hands chap and crack. Hot water should not be used more than once a day at most for washing the hands, and then they should be rinsed in cold.

At night, before retiring, when the hands have been well washed and dried, rub in a fair quantity of a good cold cream or camphorated ice. Then powder them lightly with a fine talcum and slip on loose old gloves reserved for this purpose. This will whiten the hands and keep them soft and smooth even in cold weather.

Once a month is none too often to go to a professional manicurist, but, by watching attentively how the work is done, you may be able to do your manicuring at home the rest of the time. The monthly visit will just serve to keep the nails shaped rightly if you do them yourself once or twice a week. Invest in a good nail file, some emery boards, a cuticle scissors, a nail bleach, an orange stick, a polish and some powdered pumice stone. These are the necessary implements.

First soak the finger tips in warm water. Then clean in under the nails, first with the file and then with a bit of cotton rolled around the orange stick, moistened and dipped in the powdered pumice. This will clean out any stains. Soak the fingers again and file the nails to the desired shape. Then soak them for the last time and shove the cuticle back gently with the orange stick. Use the cuticle scissors (which should always be kept very sharp), to cut away all the loose cuticle and hang nails.

HOMEMADE DRINKS

Mix eight ounces of good cocoa with sufficient hot water (not boiling) to make a stiff paste. Then thin the paste with more hot water. Do not use too much water the first time in the hope that this will make a thin paste. If you do the mixture will be lumpy. The result will be the same as when flour is mixed with too much water at first. Next make a syrup with water and sugar in equal proportions. Rock candy makes a much richer syrup than ordinary sugar and is more delicate in flavor. Six pounds of the syrup to eight ounces of cocoa is the right proportion. To every pint of water allow one pound of sugar. Thus, to sweeten eight ounces of cocoa three pints of water and three pounds of sugar will be necessary. Put the syrup and cocoa paste into a vessel. Set on the fire and bring to a boil. Cook for three minutes, then the syrup is ready for use. It can be used not only as a drink, but also as a sauce for ice cream.

A home-made soda water is sure to be enjoyed. Boil together two pounds of granulated sugar, three pints of hot water, and two ounces of tartaric acid for five minutes. When cold stir in the beaten whites of three eggs and one ounce of any preferred flavoring. Bottle. When ready to use put one tablespoonful in a glass half full of water, add a scant quarter teaspoonful of baking soda, beat and drink while foaming.

THE KITCHEN

Deviled Crabs.

In the proportion of 12 boiled crabs add the following mixture: Rub one tablespoonful of butter and two of flour together in a sauce pan; add half a pint of milk and bring to a boil. Mash the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs and add to this sauce, and then all together to the crab meat; fill into the back shells, and cover with beaten egg, yolks and bread crumbs. Place in the frying basket. Plunge in hot fat and cook for one minute. Serve with tartare sauce.

Fish Pudding.

Flake one pound of cold boiled fish and place in a greased pie dish. Mix one ounce of flour, half a teaspoonful salt and quarter teaspoonful pepper to smooth paste with a little milk. Boil half pint of milk and pour over the paste, return to saucepan and boil up. Add one dessertspoonful of chopped parsley and pour over the fish. Mash one pound of potatoes with a little milk and spread smoothly over fish. Ornament and place in a quick oven to brown the top.

Sandwich Biscuit.

Boil one quart of milk and pour over one cupful of butter and lard, equal quantities. Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one of grated potato. When nearly cool stir in flour to make a thick sponge. Add a little salt with flour, then stir in the whites of two eggs, well beaten, and half a cake of compressed yeast. When very light, roll out, using as little flour as possible; cut into small biscuits and place in buttered pans. Set in a warm place to rise. When very light, bake quickly in a hot oven. Delicious for luncheon or tea.

Veal Loaf.

Take two pounds of lean veal, grind, put in kettle with just enough water to cover, simmer slowly three-quarters of an hour, add butter the size of a walnut, season with pepper and salt. Remove from fire, add the beaten whites of three eggs. Drop in three whole hardboiled eggs, put in deep bread tin, set in refrigerator, when ready to serve turn out on platter and cut in slices.

Lexington Sweet Potatoes.

Bake sweet potatoes until well done, cut a slice of the peeling from the side of each potato, scoop out the potato into a hot pan, mash well, with a large lump of butter, a dash of cinnamon, a pinch of salt, a little sherry wine to moisten, and, unless the potatoes are very sweet, a little sugar to taste. Return the mashed potato to the empty shells and place in the oven for ten minutes or until the mashed potato has browned.

Leopard Cake.

White part—White of five eggs, one-half teacupful of butter, three cupfuls of granulated sugar, two cupfuls of white flour, one cupful of sweet milk, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; vanilla flavoring.

Dark part—One cupful brown sugar, one-quarter cupful of butter, one-half cupful sweet milk, one-half cupful molasses, two cupfuls of flour, one egg, and one-half teaspoonful soda, spices to taste. Put into a greased pan by the spoonful. The different colors will give it a "leopard-like" effect.

Liver and Pepper.

Lay some strips of fat fresh pork in a small earthenware dish and place over the fire until they begin to brown, add half an onion sliced, two ripe peppers, also sliced (rejecting the cores), and two pounds of fresh pig's liver, deeply gashed and larded on top with more strips of pork. Dredge thickly with flour and fry slowly for ten minutes, turning the meat once. Scrape half a dozen carrots and cut strips lengthwise, place these around the liver with a handful of minced parsley or celery tops and salt and sweet herbs for seasoning, lastly add one cup of boiling water and half a glass of currant jelly; cover closely and bake in a moderate oven for two and one-half hours. This makes a most savory and satisfying dish from an inexpensive piece of meat.

Thanksgiving Eddytoriul

Well this is the last Bugle that will appear before next Thanksgivving Day arrives whitch it will do in a few days rain or shine snow or hail.

In other words before next wks Bugle apears on the scene as we might say Thanksgivving Day will of been past & went so if we be a going to dash off a eddytoriul on Thanksgivving Day now is the oppertoon minnit to dash it off or forever after hold our peace on the subjeckt as fur as regards this Thanksgivving Day in partickler.

Heretofore it has allus been our custum to write a Thanksgivving eddytoriul for the Bugle a few days in advance of Thanksgivving and we dont perpose to depart from this custum in this instants. If we did depart from it the Bugle wouldnt seem to be complete and we persoom our army of subscribers inclooding them as borrers the paper from their nabers to git outen of subscribing for the Bugle theirselfs and thus saving money would be turrible disappinted. Therefore here goes for a eddytoriul on Thanksgivving.

Being as we have wrote so menny eddytoriuls on Thanksgivving in the past we will take it for granted that even our most ignorunter subscribers is already familyur with whot Thanksgivving Day means & whot it is for therefore we will not discuss that faze of the questshion.

On the other hand we will discuss the follering faze of the questshion, namely, viz. to wit, I. E.: "What Have We To Be Thankful For If Ennythink?"

Well as for that crops in and around Bingville has been a leetle mite bettern ushual and we persoom our farmers and all them as erns their bread in the swet of their brows if we may be alowed the expreshion are thankful for that.

There was a good crop of corn and wheat and oats and potaters and vegetybels & as a result the mows is full of hay and the bins is full of grain and the cellers is full of vegetybels for whitch we all ort to be dooly thankful.

The farmers will sell some of their crops and receive therfore money whitch they will spend for clothes et cettery to keep em from freezin to deth during the cold winter wether whitch has alreddy set in. For this reason let us be thankful. If a animul wassent sitch a dum critter the cattel & horses and sheep and cows would also be thankful for sitch bounteful crops whitch will keep them slick and fat during the winter munths when the ground is cuverd with snow but what can you expeckt from a horse or a ox or a sheep? Nothink, we anser.

Also there was a turrible good crop of fruit espeshially appels. All the appel trees in the orchards hereabouts was simply groanin under the weight of this delishus fruit and as a result the lims on some of the trees whitch wassent propt up broke down as a result.

Therefore the housewife ort to be thankful as well as the farmer becuz all this fruit give her a chanct to put up perserves and make jam and can all the garden truck she can and what she cant can she can give to her nabers whitch we hope she done or she can give em some of her cand truck if she be so generous minded whitch we persoom she aint becuz a woman sets a good eal of store by jellies and jams whitch she has swet over the hot stove over and she hates to give it away without no remoonerashion.

We persoom that every man hereabouts is thankful for the big crop of appels this yr becuz it enabeld him to make at least one barl of hard cider mayhe two whitch will help to while away the long winter evgs and will also go good next harvest time in the hay field perviding there is enny hard cider left by that time whitch there probly wont be.

Champion of Bingville

Doc Livermore, our human speshialist and horse phizishian and Deacon Butterworth, one of the stanchest pillers of the Bingville Church, played a game of checkers in Hen Weatherbys store tother night for the championship of Bingville, being as Doc and the Deacon considers their selves the best checker players in this vicinity.

They begin the game at about 6 o'clock and kept on playing until after 10, which is a hour later than Hen ushually closes the store.

It was also a hour later than the Deacon's bedtime, and consequently he napped off to sleep, and before he woke up Doc managed to change the checkers around on the board so that he won the game.

The Deacon has a suspishion that Doc tampered with the checkers when he was asleep, but he wouldn't say so to Doc, being as Doc is quick-tempered and very strong with his fists when he gits mad.

CiDeR, CiDer

This is to notify the general publick and everybody else to whom it may concern that I have opened my cider mill down at Snake Bend where I am now prepared to make cider in large or small quantities, also on short notice for them who has apples. I will make this cider for you at so much per barl in money, or I will take my pay either in cider or apples to a like amount, whatever it is.

What is nicer during the long winter evenings than to set before the fire with a doughnut in one hand and a picher of hard cider in tother?

What is nicer next summer, when the days is hot, and you are thirsty than a great big tin dipper full of hard cider holding about a quart?

If you have apples, don't let them rot on the ground, but bring them to me and I will make cider outen them for you. Bring your own barls with you when you bring the apples because

I aint got no barls myself. I was never harder up for barls myself in my life than I am right now.

If you have any barls to sell I will buy them. Yours for cider,
